H. E. White, vice president of the Boone County AAA Tobacco Production Control Association, J. F. Cleek, County Control Chairman, John E. Crigler, secretary, and H. R. Forkner, County Agent, attended the AAA Burley tobacco Committee Conference held at Louisville last Thursday, April 11th.

Secretary of Agriculture, Henry A. Wallace spoke at the meeting and outlined the fundamental principles back of the AAA program. He presented figures to disprove the misleading statements and false propaganda sponsored by certain agencies attempting to break down the AAA program and destroy agricultural recovery.

4-H DEMONSTRATION TEAM TRAINED BY CLUBS

Boone County 4-H Community clubs are training teams in demonstrating improved farm and home practices according to the County Agent. Burlington club the past week began work on training two farm practice and one home practice teams. Similar teams are being trained in other clubs.

The best of the community teams will compete in the county contest to be held at Burlington on the tentative day of May 18th. The winning teams in the county contest will be awarded a free trip to the State Contest to be held at the University of Kentucky, June 3 to 8.

FLORENCE PRE-EASTER CHURCH SERVICES

According to the custom for this period of the year the various churches of the Florence vicinity hold church services preliminary to Easter. These services are held in the Florence Christian church and one night is given over to each of the local protestant churches. On Tuesday night of this week the services were held by the Methodist church. On Wednesday night the Baptist church had its services with Rev. DeMoisey in charge. Tonight (Thursday) Rev. Hauer will preach in behalf of the Lutheran church. The Lutheran Choir will be present. Friday night the Christian church will have charge of the services and we understand that Rev. Runyan will deliver the sermon. All of these services are open to the general public and undoubtedly the Christian church will be filled to capacity. The services begin at 7:45 P. M. Fast Time.

Judge J. M. Lassing who has occupied about all the judicial positions in the state, is now serving as County Judge in place of Judge N. E. Riddell, who is spending the next six weeks in Texas.

BIRTHDAY

CELEBRATION FOR MRS. JOHN J. MAURER

A number of friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. J. Maurer gathered at their home in Bellevue last Sunday to celebrate Mrs. Maurer's 55th birthday. At the noon hour a bountiful dinner was spread, and after spending a very enjoyable day all left at a late hour wishing Mrs. Maurer many more happy birthdays.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Edward Maurer and family, of Louisville; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Elliott, of Price Hill, Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Andy Cook and family and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Biddle and family of Petersburg; Mrs. Josie Maurer and Robert Maurer and son Jimmie, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maurer, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rudicill, Mrs. Carlos Cason, Miss Joan Yelton, Miss Virginia Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Rice and son Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Clure, of Burlington; Mr. and Mrs. Julius Smith, of Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Edson Maurer, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clure, Mrs. Aline Brady and daughter, Mary Jane, Rev. Raymond Smith, Mrs. John Smith, Mr. Clayton Clure, Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Clure, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Brown and Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Burcham and family, of Bellevue.

FLORENCE P. T. A.

HAS BANQUET FOR VARIOUS SCHOOL ORGANIZATIONS

The Florence High School Basketball Team, orchestra, and faculty were entertained by the Florence P. T. A. last Tuesday evening with a banquet. A most delicious meal was served by the organization, after which letters were awarded to the individuals who had represented the school during the past year either on the debate team, basketball team or in the school orchestra. Basket ball letters were awarded to nine girls and eleven boys.

The girls who received a letter are Marjorie Cottingham, Marian Sullivan, Elmina Hastings, Florence Grayson, Mary Butts, Marjorie Pickett, Lulu Robbins, Marjorie Bell and Alice Coady. The boys who received a letter are as follows: Robert Points, Edsel Guigley, Donald Tanner, Forest Ferguson, Gregory Reeser, Clifford Bauer, Jimmie Scott, Collins Scott, John Richards and Duke Scott. The school maintains the policy of awarding to the seniors who have earned a letter in their senior year a sweater. The following received sweaters: Miss Alice Coady, Collins Scott, John Richards, Chas. Grayson, Gregory Reser and Forest Ferguson. Joe Rouse and Bobbie Surface received letters for being managers for the past year. Madelin Holcen and Allan Walker received letters for leading cheers during the year. Members of the debate team receiving letters were Gene Lutes, Mary Kate Scott, Alma Zapp, Lillie Taylor, Helen Taylor, and Edward Tullis. Those in the orchestra receiving letters were Marjorie Cottingham, Frances Bentham, Gene Lutes, Babe Popham, Minta Del Carpenter, Mary Carpenter, Thos. Glen Lutes, Freddie Highhouse, Bill Tullis, Marvin Rulnoff Lutes, Ervin Dringenburg, Elbert Tanner, Clifford Bauer.

Coach Alphin, who directs the orchestra, received a nice gift from the parents of the children in the orchestra, expressing their thanks to him for the interest he has taken in this activity.

After a very enjoyable time the girls and boys departed, expressing their thanks and appreciation to the Parent Teacher Association for the banquet and promised that they would do all within their power to make a banner year for the Florence school.

Mr. J. E. Snyder of the Bullittsville neighborhood, was a business caller at the Recorder office last week. Mr. Snyder said that his father was a subscriber to the Recorder from the first issue and that the paper has been coming to his family ever since. We were glad to have had the opportunity of a chat with Mr. Snyder and enjoyed his visit very much.

Master Bobby Clure, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clure, of Burlington, is improving from an illness. Bobby has missed two months of school, but however passed his grades.

GRAND JURY

MAKES REPORT—KIRKPATRICK AND EDDINS COMPLIMENTED

To the Hon. J. G. Vallandigham, Circuit Judge:

We, your grand jury, beg leave to report:

We have been in session 3 days; have examined 26 witnesses and have returned 2 indictments.

We have examined the County property and find same well taken care of; the Court House and Jail by our efficient Jailer Elmer Kirkpatrick; and the County Infirmary and the inmates thereof are well cared for by Mr. O. S. Eddins.

When funds are available, we urge the Fiscal Court to provide an Electric Refrigerator for the County Infirmary; that a door be placed between the Circuit Clerk's office and the hall avoiding the necessity in passing the gents toilet in going in and coming out of said office. The plumbing in the jail is in need of repair. There are some dogs owned or harbored that are not listed with the Sheriff and we recommend that if same are not licensed that indictments be returned by the August grand jury.

Having concluded our labors, we beg to be finally discharged.

W. T. CARPENTER, Foreman

Quite a crowd was in attendance at court last Saturday.

BOONE COUNTY

TEACHERS ATTEND THE K. E. A. AT LOUISVILLE

Attendance at the K. E. A. this year surpassed all other records. There are 17,000 teachers in Ky. All are enrolled in K. E. A. except about 400. More than 10,000 attended.

The K. E. A. works for the interest of teachers and of the schools of Ky. Therefore if we believe in education and make our living teaching school we should support the organization that works for our interest and the interest of boys and girls whom we teach. The new school laws that we have, saved our schools from poverty and made equal opportunities for all, were won by men and women who joined hands, hearts and mind to bring to pass the better things we have today in education.

The theme of the K. E. A. was "Reconstruction through Education." Leading educators from all parts of the country were there to inspire and encourage the teachers in their work and if we are to "Help children to grow into men and women God meant them to be" we must take an interest in all educational movements and never lose sight of our goal. We as teachers out in service need this bit of urge, inspiration, encouragement and vision that comes through contact we get from others who are interested in the education of boys and girls.

Those teachers who attended from the county are: J. H. Norris, Sibbia Reimer, E. E. Kirkwood, Boyce Kirkwood, Hazel Fowler, J. F. Moore, Mrs. J. F. Moore, Mary Laubisch, Lallie Eddins, Reuben Asbury, Robert Huey, Mary Huey, Garland Huff, A. B. Moore, Dorothy McHenry, F. D. Caton, Chas. Allphin, Frances Rennecker, Mary Humphrey, Sarah Huey, Eunie Pettit, Walter Coop, Mary Frances Stephens, Lana Lamm, Mary Johnson, Blanche Lamm, Elizabeth Harris.

VERONA GIRL MAKES GOOD SHOWING

The Courier-Journal State Spelling Bee was held Thursday, April 11. Betty Kannady from Verona represented Boone County. Betty came out with the winners in the written spelling and did herself and her school credit in the oral contest. She was among the group who won $5 besides all her expenses paid to and from Louisville and expenses while there. She had a great time and regrets that she will not be eligible to go next year because she will be in high school.

She was chaperoned by her teacher, Miss Lana Lamm, who deserves a part of the honor for this piece of good work.

There will be an Easter Play at Pt. Pleasant Christian church on Sunday evening April 21. The title of the play is "Go Tell The Brethren." The entertainment will begin at 8 o'clock. Lets all try and attend.

TO THE DEMOCRATIC WOMAN'S CLUB:

Do not forget the Woman's Democratic Convention in Lexington April 23 in the ball room of Phoenix Hotel. Mrs. Lucille Foster McMullen, of Nashville, Tenn., will address meeting in afternoon session. The entire session will be of interest to everyone.

The Boone County Club has its meeting at 2 p. m., Saturday April 20th at Burlington. Come all Democratic women and be a part of a live club meeting.

177 NEW TOBACCO CONTRACTS

One hundred and ninety "Special Base" AAA tobacco applications and 58 new 1935 regular AAA tobacco contracts were signed by until Monday of this week according to H. R. Forkner County Agent. Boone county tobacco growers up Monday was set as the closing date for signing "Special Base" applications. The Community and County Committees are expected to meet the last part of the week and make allotments under the special contracts.

CROPS DAMAGED

FREEZING WEATHER DESTROYS FRUIT CROPS

Boone county crops are reported to be considerably damaged by the freezing weather last Monday night. Fruit crops including peaches, pears, plums and cherries which were in full bloom are expected to be damaged most. Early varieties of apples are also expected to be injured.

Tobacco growers are uneasy about their plants. Late sown plant beds where the young plants are in the crook are expected to be killed. Where the plants are up less injury is expected. Tomato plants under canvas were killed.

Damage is also expected to young clovers sown this spring and are in the crook stage or just coming up. The snow and freezing weather will check the spring grass, and cause many farmers temporarily to fall back to winter rations for their stock.

ARMY EQUESTRIAN EXHIBITION TO BE HELD

Louisville, Ky., April 17.—One of the outstanding events scheduled for Kentucky Derby Festival Week will be the U. S. Army Equestrian Exhibition that will mark tryouts for the Olympic Games to be held in Berlin next year. The exhibition will be held at the Kentucky State Fair grounds, Thursday night, May 2; and will be followed by a brilliant Army-Derby Festival Ball to be sponsored by the Junior League of Louisville. Six selected riders and eighteen splendid show horses, representing contingents from the Field Artillery and Cavalry schools, will appear in the equestrian exhibition.

UTOPIANS MEET APRIL 18

Boone County Utopians will meet at Burlington on this coming Thursday, April 18th, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The meeting is being held a week earlier than previously planned.

Mr. Carl W. Jones, field agent from the University of Kentucky will discuss the 1935 pasture improvement project and coming State Utopia Club events. A committee will also be selected to recommend a representative to the State meeting to be held during Junior Week at the University of Kentucky June 3 to 8.

B. H. S. SCHOOL NEWS

The teachers of our school who attended K. E. A. last week were: Mrs. Kirkwood, Mrs. Eddins, Miss Laubisch, Mrs. Fowler, Mr. Moore and Mr. Kirkwood. They report that they enjoyed being there and it was a very good K. E. A.

We expect to buy a root ball in the near future with the Hi-Y Club lending a helping hand in finances. We are proud of all that the Hi-Y Club has done this year.

The Seniors received their invitations Monday. They also took measurements for cap and gowns.

The debaters expect to attend the Debater's Banquet at Loyd High Erlanger, the first part of May.

Hon. John J. Howe was a pleasant visitor to the Recorder office this week. Mr. Howe, once Commonwealth Attorney of this Judicial District, is now a prominent lawyer with offices in Covington and Carrollton. We were glad to note that Mr. Howe is enjoying the best of health and is quite active in his profession in Northern Kentucky. Mr. Howe has a host of friends in Boone county and we always appreciate his visit to our office.

RURAL HOME

IN BOONE COUNTY DESTROYED BY FIRE

Fire fighting efforts of the Erlanger Volunteer Fire Department and residents of the Burlington pike, Boone county, proved futile as a blaze destroyed the home and household furnishings of Silas Corbin, Covington auto parts dealer on Sunday night.

Loss was estimated by Corbin at about $7000. The blaze was believed to have been caused by an overheated furnace. Insurance covers part of the loss.

The blaze was discovered about 7 p. m., Sunday when the owner and his family returned from an all-day visit.

Water Is Lacking
The Erlanger Fire Department was called and neighbors lent their aid. The lack of water hampered the efforts of the fire-fighters however.

The home, located about one mile from Florence, was a two-story brick dwelling. Mr. Corbin is the owner of the Madison Avenue Auto Parts Co., Thirtieth street and Madison avenue, Covington.

The home is in the same vicinity where a firebug is believed to have been operating. Mysterious blazes during the last year have created apprehension among property owners.

Former Fires Recalled
Two weeks ago the Woodland Tourist Camp was destroyed by fire. The camp is located on the Dixie Highway in a rural section similar to the one in which Corbin's home is located. The two places are approximately 12 miles apart.

Suspected cases of incendiaryism are to be investigated by William B. Wessels, newly appointed deputy fire marshal, Covington. He took over his duties today and is to operate in Kenton and Boone counties.

O. M. ROGERS HAS ACCIDENT ON THE BURLINGTON PIKE

On Saturday evening, O. M. Rogers, prominent Kenton and Boone county attorney, had a narrow escape from a serious accident. Mr. Rogers was driving toward Burlington on a business mission to his farm when his car ran over the steep embankment on the Alonzo Beemon curve. The car turned over two or three times, and the machine was badly damaged. Fortunately Mr. Rogers was not seriously injured, although he received a number of bruises and cuts. The Beemon curve is quite dangerous unless a driver is familiar with it and knows exactly when he reaches it. The State should by all means have guard posts and a cable on its edge. Otherwise it may be expected that other accidents will occur on this hill.

We congratulate Mr. Rogers that his injuries are not more serious and are glad to know that he will be out again within a day or two.

HEBRON

WINS FIRST FIRST PLACE IN CHORUS AT NEWPORT

The Kentucky District Music Festival was held at the Newport High School on Monday and Tuesday April 8 and 9. Hebron was the only school from the county to enter, was happy to win first place with a rating of excellent. The Hebron Chorus entered in Division II with Bellevue and Dayton as opponents. The Chorus, consisting of seven Sopranos, five altos, five tenors and six basses, sang the Kerry Dance by J. L. Molloy.

This is the first year that the school has had a Glee Club throughout the entire school term. It was organized under the supervision of Mr. Edwin Walton and was accompanied by Mrs. Alice Dye. With a lot of hard work and practice, the club has reached the place where it forms a well balanced chorus. Musical members have been presented for special school programs throughout the year.

The club felt somewhat disappointed because there will be no County Tournament this year but on April 25 the Chorus will go to Lexington for the Kentucky State Musical Festival, where it hopes to make a good showing. Visitors will be welcome at a rehearsal given by the Hebron Lutheran church Tuesday evening, April 23.

Mr. and Mrs. Brit Monroe, of Erlanger, spent the past week with Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Yelton and family. Mrs. Monroe was helping her brother A. D. Yelton in his office during Circuit Court.

MANY GARDENERS

It is time to think of the garden. A newspaper garden editor in a northern city reports twice as many requests for information now as last year. Villages on the outskirts of the city ask how to plant their roadsides to make them attractive to visitors driving through. Home gardeners ask advice about landscaping their small yards and the care of certain plants and flowers. All these plans the editor says, indicate that they are going to have more and better gardens than ever before. Some day, he believes, his community will have national fame because of the numerous and lovely small gardens.

This is a fine development. Gardening is a creative and healthful work. It benefits not only the practicing gardener, but all who pass by and see his garden. There is no need to worry about over-emphasis on bridge while gardening is advancing in popularity at such a rate.

IS EVERYTHING LOST?

We all hear it frequently said of those who have had financial reverses, that they have lost everything. However, if you will look at it in the right light, you will find it is a mistake. To lose financially, even to the last dollar, doesn't mean that the greatest assets of all—character, reputation, good friends and good neighbors have been lost.

Those who are said to have lost everything usually haven't lost the spirit of manhood and self-respect that keeps them true to their ideals, that money can't buy. Many other things might be enumerated in the list of priceless possessions which they have not lost; health, children and loved ones in fact often they have not lost anything but what it is possible to replace. As a rule, the experience they have gained in losing their money will eventually be worth far more to them than the money itself.

PUBLIC SUPPORTS FARM COOPERATIVES

In a recent address, A. H. Lautbach, chief of the dairy section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, points out that many attacks are being made against the farm cooperative movement on the grounds of "monopoly."

If farm cooperatives are monopolistic, so are all the organizations which aid business and industrial progress, through perfecting producing and selling methods and cutting costs. Cooperation has been an established principle in our industrial life for generations—and many of the great strides taken by industry may be laid to it.

It is a matter of fact that, when an organization or a movement becomes successful, its enemies redouble their efforts to destroy it. Cooperation among farmers is suc-ceding, and those who wish to drive the farmer back to the old way of individual or local selling, in order that they may prosper at his expense, are worried. But farm authorities and the public at large, which wishes to see the farmer progress and earn a reasonable profit for his work, are solidly behind the cooperative movement.

THE RECKLESS PEDESTRIAN

Last year the automobile fatality record touched an all-time high, with a total of 36,000 killed. One of the worst aspects of the record was the pedestrian toll.

Those who believe that accidents involving a car and a pedestrian are always the fault of the motorist are sadly mistaken. In five out of every eight accidents in which a person on foot was killed by a car, the pedestrian was entirely to blame.

Thirty-four per cent of the pedestrians who were killed because of their own carelessness, were struck while crossing in the middle of the block or against traffic signals. Seventeen per cent were killed while walking on the wrong side of the road. Eleven per cent of the fatalities resulted from walkers stepping suddenly out from behind parked cars into the stream of traffic. It is a significant fact that, in 1934, the rate of death per pedestrian accident was 45 per cent worse crossing in the middle of the block than at the intersection, and 74 per cent worse crossing against signals than with them.

The careless walker, like the careless driver, constitutes a grave problem that must be definitely solved if we are to lower the automobile toll. The cure for pedestrian recklessness is purely up to the individual—all the traffic laws in the world cannot make a person walk properly on streets and highways if he is congenitally careless. Obey the signals, never cross in the middle of a block—and keep your eyes open and your mind busy with the problems of safety reaching your destination. That advice amounts to "life insurance" for the pedestrian.

PURCHASING AGENT

Who goes the buying for the Great American Home? Twenty-nine million housewives do 85 per cent of it.

This raises the question whether the household budget is better directed now than in the old days when wives and mothers were protected from the snares and pitfalls of commerce. And who is better prepared to answer it than the corporations which lend money to balance the family budget?

One such corporation doing business in many communities finds that the husband who turns over his pay check and leaves buying and paying of bills to his wife is freer from debt worries, gets into fewer financial jams and is more prosperous than other men.

How are these conclusions to be reconciled with woman's traditional reputation of extravagance? This the finance company also answers. The wife who is in ignorance of the family's financial condition has brought this calamity upon her sex through no fault of her own.

To spend and spend is human.

Household management is too big a job for the man who is away all day to perform efficiently in his leisure hours. The average housewife enters into more financial transactions in a day than her grandfather did in his small business.

Editorial of the Week

PROUD-PIED APRIL

Courier-Journal

The birth of April probably sees it at its gayest. Everywhere is a profusion of fruit blossoms—the roseate petals of the peach, the soft white cherry, plum and pear, here and there the lavender blush of an apricot tree, and the shell pink of the early-blooming apples. The yards and gardens display a profusion of flowering petals, scarlet japonical golden bells, narcissus cottage tulips hyacinth. It is the month of Easter with its implication of new life, of upspringing flowers, of budding branches, and a rebirth of nature, or as the Bard has it—"...proud-pied April dressed in all its trim, Hath put a spirit of youth in everything."

Now the rebud, one of Kentucky's springtime glories, has burst into gorgeous blossom, and before the month is out the dogwood will display its shivering branches of creamy blooms to match it. A charming combination, rebud and dogwood. None more satisfying to the eye than Kentucky's wooded hills, and dales with these trees in bloom. Nothing can match them for loveliness at this time of year—unless it be the striking combination of a Kentucky Cardinal pouring out his heart for joy against a billowy background of wild plum blossoms.

The mocking bird has found his voice again and gayly chatters as the welcome sun greets the yearning earth. Wren, cardinal and yarrowing flicker join in the matutinal chorus, which May will see augmented by the new and still sweeter voices.

UNUSUAL ITEMS CLIPPED FROM OUR KENTUCKY EXCHANGES

Freak Egg

Mr. and Mrs. Clay Carr left a freak egg at the Outlook office Saturday. It was a soft-shell, but this is not unusual, but the part that made it a freak was an extension about the size of a finger and one inch long and at the end of the extension was a velleo baby bed. The crib was empty.—Falmouth Outlook.

Span of Mules Sells For $750

Twenty-five head of sheep were sold Tuesday at the Joe Hicks farm in this county by R. E. Day, auctioneer, for $14.75 each.

Last week at a sale near Campbellsville on the Reed farm a span of eight-year-old mules brought $750.00. A span of 11-year old mules brought $500.—Hardin County Enterprise, Elizabethtown.

Chicken Liver Weighs 2 Pounds

Mrs. Frank Parker, of Benton, Route 1, came to the Tribune office last Monday and brought along a chicken liver of unusual size. The liver, taken from a last spring Plymouth Rock rooster, weighed two pounds. The rooster was the right owner of the liver was a perfectly normal chicken, seemingly free from any ailment of any kind, and gave no indication during his lifetime of having developed the liver to such proportions.—Tribune Democrat, Benton.

Odd Formation ON END OF AN EGG

SNAKE eggs are usually deposited by snakes but G. C. Rabin of Rockhouse, is the possessor of a hen which puts out real snake eggs.

The eggs are from a full grown hen and has a perfectly formed snake on the small end. The snake is perfectly coiled.—Pike Co. News, Pikeville.

Many Fish Are Left Stranded

The Rolling Fork river which has been unusually high for several days, dropped rather suddenly Tuesday and dropped so quickly that many fish were left stranded in puddles in the river bottom fields.

Carp and Buffalo in quantity and a few cat fish were picked up in the bottoms. Many of the fish weighing from ten to thirty pounds, by men who walked about in the bottoms and quickly got their load of stranded fish.—Herald News, Hodgenville.

Walks 7,488 Miles To School

Ralph Scott, of this place, has walked a total of 7,488 miles for the diploma he will receive soon as a graduate of the Ontario high school. With the exception of a few rides accepted from friends, Ralph has walked four miles each way to school every school day for four years.

When the term ends, Ralph's younger brother, Merl, 16, will have completed three-fourths of his 7,488-mile journey by foot for an Ontario diploma.—Providence Enterprise.

Unique Indian

Peace Pipe Found

Another curio came to light in Washington county a few days ago when J. C. Jenkins found an Indian peace pipe on his farm near Williamsburg. The pipe is estimated to be more than 150 years old, and in spite of the fact that it has lain in the earth for over a century, is in a splendid state of preservation.

The old pipe measures 10 inches in length. The stem is about four inches in circumference at the largest point and tapers down to about 1 1/2 inches at the smoking end. At the opposite end is a neatly carved squirrel's head. The bowl 12 inches deep. The stone from measures 1 1/4 inches across and is which the pipe was carved it not found in this section of the country.—Springfield Sun.

Small Egg

In Large One

An unusual egg, a real freak of nature, was brought into the Courier office this week by Dick Serearse, well known farmer of near Cayce.

The egg was laid by an ordinary hen, in an ordinary farm flock. The egg was laid by an ordinary egg, with perfect cream colored shell, and inside the big eggs, was a fully formed, ordinary size hen egg, with a perfect deep brown shell.—Hickman Courier.

WARNING ISSUED BOYS

FLYING KITES WITH WIRE

"Do not use wire or tinsel strings to fly kites. Use cotton or linen string and fly kites away from electric wires."

Thus reads part of a warning issued by Robert H. Krone, safety director for the Union Gas & Electric Company, who is concerned in furthering the safety of child sportsmen who will be taking advantages of the spring breezes for kite-flying.

Krone has issued 5,000 bulletins to school teachers in Hamilton county, northern Kentucky, Middletown and Hamilton, and 4500 safety posters for school bulletins in the same territory, in an effort to prevent any furtherance of the annual kite hazard. Boy Scout and Y. M. C. A. officials have also been asked to cooperate in this safety move to insure a minimum of accidents from a needless cause.

Experience in past years has shown that some boys prefer wire to string in holding their kites. Of course when this wire, tinsel string, or even a wet string comes in contact with an electric wire, considerable shock of a serious nature may result. Krone urges all wood construction for kites. When metal, which is sometimes used in the bow construction, accidentally touches the electric wire, not only is the boy in danger, but a resultant damage of the electric system in that locality is easily possible.

The plea for children to fly their kites elsewhere than around electric wires is purely one for child protection, and may be augmented by the suggestion also that the kite flying not be near any traveled street or highway. No effort should be made to rescue kite that has been lodged in electric wires or a tree. Climbing may lead to accidental falling, and also increases the possibility of serious accidents.

That no serious accidents have resulted from this cause does not lessen the possibility of extreme danger, Krone states. He also enlists the utmost support of the parents in this safety campaign.

KENTUCKY COLONELS TO HOLD CONVENTION

Louisville, Ky., April 11.—Approximately 1,000 members are expected to attend the second annual convention of the Honorable Society of Kentucky Colonels to be held in Louisville during Derby Festival Week, April 29-May 4. The convention is scheduled for Thursday and Friday, and distinguished guests will include such notables as Colonels Mac West, Rudy Vallee, Roake Carter and Jas. A. Farley, Postmaster General of the U. S. The convention will be held at the Kentucky Hotel. Friday May 3, of the Kentucky Derby has been designated as "Kentucky Colonels Day" at historic Churchill Downs race course.

Sheriff C. C. Roberts, as Sheriff of Boone county, had only 13 delinquent tax payers for the year of 1895 advertised. Quite a difference in number for the present list in this issue of the Recorder.

Cy Stott, of Petersburg, was in town on business Saturday.

FORTY YEARS AGO

From the Files of The Boone County Recorder

ISSUE OF APRIL 17, 1935

LOCAL

County and District Officials were P. A. Brady, Assessor; C. L. Crisler, Jailer; W. E. Vest, County Surveyor; Dr. A. A. Murat, Coroner; L. H. Voshell, School Supt.; J. W. Duncan, Circuit Clerk; M. D. Gray, Commonwealth Atty.; W. L. Riddell, Treasurer Jury Fund; Ben Stephens, County Judge; J. M. Lassing, County Attorney; A. S. Gaines, County Clerk; C. C. Roberts, Sheriff; Elmer Beall, Deputy Sheriff.

The month of March was unusually active this year in the horse market, and buyers were climbing over each other to find good stock at a substantial increase in prices.

A large crowd of Verona people was in Burlington, witnesses in the Powers will case.

The many friends of H. C. White, of Williamstown, are glad to hear he is getting better again.

One day last week one of the attorneys from Grant county was speaking of a citizen of his county, who is about 70 years of age, when some one expressed some surprise at the great age of the man. And upon being asked why his surprise, he remarked, "I did not know a man would be allowed to live that long in Grant county."

Circuit court was in session. 37 witnesses were examined by the grand jury and 20 indictments were made.

If it rains on Easter Sunday it will rain on each of seven Sundays thereafter, so say some.

Considering the number of witnesses the grand jury examined it turned out a large number of indictments.

The base ball season will open here next Saturday afternoon in a game between the Colts and Vets. Geo. Ossman, of Beaver, made the best sale of the 1894 crop of tobacco of which we have heard. He got $8.00 from the ground up. George is a successful farmer in all the branches.

The Spring Running Races, Lexington, Ky., April 26th to May 4th. The Queen & Crescent Route will sell tickets at one and one third for the round trip.

Mrs. Martha Hawes has moved into part of Miss Mary Thompson's house.

Ferdinand Hackstadt, of Bromley, committed suicide by taking Rough on Rats. He was about 73 years old.

Mrs. J. B. Fennell, of Georgetown, has been the guest of her brother, C. C. Roberts and wife for several days.

Mrs. Jesse Kirkpatrick and daughter Miss Gussie, returned home last week after a visit of several weeks with relatives in Covington and Dayton.

This is about the longest term of court that Judge Green has held at this place. He will be if business requires, until midnight next Saturday night, when the term closes by law.

Francesville

The following is what a few of our farmers said that they will do viz: W. P. Cropper will put in 20 acres of corn, 30 acres of potatoes; Will Riley 40 acres of potatoes; H. G. Cropper 30 acres of tobacco.

The following are on the Honor

Roll of our school for the second month of the spring term: Charles Beall, John Cave, Raymond Cropper, Alice Estes, Ida Estes, Stanley Graves, Elbert Geller, Emmet Kilgour, Carrie Scafer and William Strassell.

Hathaway

W. B. Adams was in this vicinity last week buying tobacco. He purchased two or three crops from 1 to 4 cents.

Seed potatoes are scarce around here, most every one had to buy.

Samuel Adams began the spring school at Grange Hall on the 15th. Dick Stephens still makes his regular calls every Sunday in this vicinity. He seems to mean business.

BIG BONE

J. D. Moore has begun prizing tobacco at his warehouse here, and is doing the farmers some fine work in this line.

April 12th—Born to J. M. Baker and wife a bouncing baby girl.

Vincent Ross, Jr., lost a very valuable horse one day last week which was to him a very sore loss at this season of the year.

What IS a Sound Loan?

A sound loan for a commercial bank is a loan which the borrower believes, and the bank expects, will be paid within a reasonable time—a loan which if not fully repaid at the maturity of the note is substantially reduced by regular periodic installments.

Loans that are regularly reduced enable a bank to accommodate patrons whose needs may be more essential. A bank must have a turn-over of money in the same way that a merchant must have a turn-over of merchandise, with this difference—bank's turn-over affects the credit facilities of the entire community.

The ability and intention to repay a loan by a planned program, and within a reasonable time, is the essence of a good loan. The giving of collateral does not repay a loan. Collateral is merely a pledge to guarantee the borrower's ability and promise to repay the loan within a reasonable time.

THE 1935 STATE FAIR PLEDGED AID OF LEADERS
ALL OVER STATE

Several New Features To Be Added

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 12.—

Spurred by the very great success, financially and otherwise, of the Kentucky State Fair within the last three years, some twenty-five leading representatives of the press, industrial, agricultural and other interests in the State, met here Tuesday for the purpose of proffering their support and cooperation to the Fair officials in their plans for making the 1935 Fair, September 9th to 14th, the greatest in the history of the State. Not only the great test, they declared in point of attendance, but in every other way of the highest value to the State as a whole.

The keynote of the meeting was that the State Fair's great benefit to the agricultural interests of the State should be stressed more forcibly than ever upon the people of the rural sections, and that every farmer, stock raiser, poultry raiser, orchardist, gardener and school should, in some way have a part in the exhibits of some other department.

The Fair officials were highly commended for the success of the Fair in every way for the last three years. They were strongly urged to continue such very popular and successful features as the State-wide beauty contest, and every effort put forth this year for a contestant from every county in the State. Likewise, the masked band and music festival feature in which some thirty bands participated last year with about 500 pieces. With the State's seven or five or more bands, drum and trumpet corps from the various counties marching the streets and playing on the grounds and massed to one mammoth band of 1500 to 2000 pieces, and several thousand voices from the schools of the State, the folk and community songs, to the Band's accompaniment, would make one of the largest musical aggregations ever gotten together on the American continent, and by far the most spectacular and entertaining attraction the Kentucky State Fair, or any other state fair ever staged.

Support was also pledged to the Fair's suggested plans for arranging in the huge Merchants and Manufacturers' Building, a separate booth for every county in the State desiring to participate to present its resources and other advantages.

"The State Fair," declared Judge

Ben. F. Ewing, himself a farmer by birth and rearing, "is primarily for the benefit of the farmers of the State, and I heartily agree with both Agricultural Commissioner Eugene Flowers and Secretary Garth K. Ferguson who have accomplished so much with, and for, the State Fair in the last three years, that the Fair belongs to the people of the State and should be conducted for the benefit of all the people. But of all who should get behind it and get the most out of it, is the man who makes his living in the rural sections, and I trust that every county in the State may have a booth at the State Fair this year for the display of its particular resources and products."

Secretary Garth K. Ferguson who had been invited to the meeting for a resume of the results of the

NEW HAVEN HIGH SCHOOL SENIOR PLAY
A full evening's entertainment, packed full of thrills and laughs, is promised you by the Seniors of New Haven High School when their three-act royalty play, "Miss Adventure," is produced in the school auditorium, Friday, April 26, 7:45 P. M.

This is the same class that put on the successful Junior Play, "Dyeing to Live," and they have entered rehearsals for the Senior Play with an added confidence gained from last year's experience.

The plot of "Miss Adventure" concerns a mad escapade conceived in the rolicking minds of some college girls, played by Frances Stevens, Novella Hull, Birdie Logan, Edna Mae Kite and Jessie Rivard which gives much trouble to their stately principal, Miss Prim, acted by Frances Williams, who was the domineering wife, in last year's play, and to the harassed janitor, Sampson, played by George (Steve) Slayback, who evoked so much laughter last year as the hen pecked husband. The fun gets fast and furious when the scene shifts to the farm house of the leading man, Mr. Brown, played by William Green, and we meet the shrewd and expert tongue-leader Sarah Haskins, a part with much vim by Martha Youell. Sarah's somewhat sentimental daughter, Rebecca, played by Mary Elizabeth Senour, and her gallant rustic swain, Cyrus, acted by Christina Maddin, are guaranteed to bring forth much hearty amusement.

The title role of "Miss Adventure" is taken by Marilyn Dickerson, who has twice won first place in dramatic reading in the Boone County School Tournament.

The play is directed by Miss Rebecca Sleet.

HEBRON 4-H REPORT

The Hebron Norbeh Champion 4-H Club held their third meeting last Monday April 8th.

The meeting was called to order by our vice-president Wm. Graves, and the minutes were read by our assistant secretary Anna Mary Grant.

Reports were given from each Captain of their groups. We had one leader present Mrs.

Nickies, the leader of the sewing group. We appreciate her cooperation and hope that more leaders will be present at our next meeting which will be May 2. After all new business was taken up our meeting was adjourned.

HEBRON SCHOOL NEWS

The Senior Girl Reserve club held its regular meeting Friday with the Freshmen girls in charge of program. The following program was Devotional—Eva Lillian Eggleston Song—Little Sir Echo—Club Pageant—Century of Progress—Freshmen girls.

The Seniors have received their play books and have started practicing under the supervision of Miss Cropper and Mrs. Moore.

The farm and home agents in Breathitt county are doing much work to encourage the production of more vegetables and other home food products.

It is estimated that Mason county farmers have produced 150,000 pounds of korean lespezea seed, and the seed producers' association of the county has exhausted its supply. A large acreage will be seeded this year, if the seed can be obtained.

Two Jackson county seed dealers report the sale of 9,000 pounds of korean lespezea seed.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby to deal with his love for his foster daughter. But all his love for his foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife, who had never wanted her. Their affairs ended in the divorce court, but ten-year-old Penelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for one Sunday afternoon a month. On that first day together they set out joyfully to baseball game, but he hit into the bleachers, struck Penelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the house, to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin spirited the child to Europe, where she had a business, and Penelope all his money, and was about to begin a search for his father when a motor accident ended his life.

CHAPTER II—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood had left her with a dual personality, for which her head doctor was in part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a responsible criminal and obtained Burt's expert testimony in court. Even Lanny, the doctor's faithful office nurse, was won over by her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

CHAPTER III—Nance's criminal record outweighed Doctor Burt's clear explanation of her case and she was sent to San Quentin penitentiary for two years. Lanny visited her and Nance persuaded her to smuggle out a letter, which she confided to a friend on her handbag outside the prison walls.

CHAPTER IV—Nance escaped, although shot, by swimming out to a speed-boat manned by friends and went to Lanny's apartment. Lanny told Chief McNamara who ordered her to bring Nance to his apartment and phoned for Doctor Burt.

CHAPTER V—One of the men in the boat on which Nance escaped—two of them were convicts, the other a bootlegger—had been wounded and they went to Burt's office, where McNamara found them. The bootlegger he let go and he took the others to his home, ordering the uninjured one to care for Nance and his pal. From them he learned that Nance's real name was Penelope Gatlin. Detective Sergeant Flynn and Angelotti, seeking the reward offered for Nance's apprehension, went to Lanny's apartment in search of Nance. Looking over her San Quentin cell, McNamara found a blank check on a San Jose bank.

CHAPTER VI—From the San Jose banker McNamara learned that the girl he knew as Nance Belden was Penelope Gatlin, heiress to $750,000. The banker did not know Penelope's whereabouts. Mrs. Gatlin was now the wife of a man named Merton. McNamara ordered Detective Sergeant Flynn and Angelotti to "lay off" Lanny, whom they suspected of harboring Nance. The detectives trailed Doctor Burt when he went to McNamara's house to treat her gunshot wound but Nance and the two men who helped her escape saw them first and fled.

CHAPTER VII—When Lanny got home one evening she found Nance sound asleep, curled up on her guest-room bed. Several days later the hard-boiled exterior of Nance Belden suddenly vanished and the girl became the refined Penelope Gatlin. Her partially restored memory led her to tell Lanny of her wealthy father, Theodore Gatlin, and of her girlhood in France. Fearing his detectives would locate Penelope, McNamara furnished her with tear and stink bombs and told her how to use them to escape if they did. She uses the bombs, and gets away. Flynn and Angelotti continued hot on Nance's trail and McNamara's.

CHAPTER VIII—Susan Engelbright, known as "Sapphire Susie," who had served a term for blackmail, appeared and asked McNamara's protection from Flynn. She admitted that Nance had gotten her three diamonds and sapphire rings out of her pocket after she had helped in her plans for escape. McNamara learned definitely that Nance (or possibly Penelope) had sailed for France. He also discovered he was in love with Lanny, and that before she had been living in Paris as Penelope Gatlin. Doctor Burt had been treating Mrs. Rudolph Merton, and McNamara discovered that this woman was Penelope's foster-mother, remarried.

CHAPTER IX—Stephen warned Penelope by cable to leave Paris, signing his message "Mac." When Flynn went to Doctor Burt to ask him to identify a passport photograph of Penelope Gatlin as Nance Belden, the doctor hypnotized him and implanted on his subconscious mind that he must never again mention the two names Nance Belden and Penelope Gatlin.

CHAPTER X—Warned through the joint efforts of McNamara and Stephen, Nance fled Paris before Flynn could put the French police on her trail, and popped back into Lanny's home in San Francisco. Dan, who had been married and accompanied Penelope to New York, where Doctor Burt had changed the best plastic surgeon into the country to remodel her nose. As McNamara had destroyed all her criminal records, this remodeling of her looks would bury her identity as Nance Belden. Dan returned when his 60 days leave expired and reported the operation a success but that three months would elapse before Nance was put of the surgeon's hands. Stephen commissioned McNamara to look up the girl's ancestry and living conditions in childhood.

CHAPTER XI—Stephen hypnotized Mrs. Merton and she told how she had made Penelope's childhood happy through jealousy of her husband's affection for the child. When Penelope was eighteen years old, she told her she was a foundling and had negro blood in her veins, and Penelope ran away. Lanny, who had said that Penelope's new nose had made her a beauty, but that she had returned to Paris.

CHAPTER XII—In his office Doctor Burt was notified that a patient—Miss Elliott—was waiting. Admitting her, he engaged her in professional conversation as a stranger. After a brief consultation she revealed her true identity. She was Penelope Gatlin. With her nose remodeled, and comparative happiness in the restored, the girl was changed that the doctor had not known her. Always aware that he had an attachment to the girl, he now found her altogether charming, and declared his love. Penelope admitted she had loved him almost from their first meeting, and her dual personality dissolved, found at last the promise of complete happiness with "Stephen."

tomorrow and look him up. The bank will know who he is."

The bank president did know the name of the attorney, but added the disconcerting information that the man had been dead six years. McNamara thereupon called the man's widow to ask if she still retained her late husband's files. He had a faint hope that if she would permit him to look into the Gatlin file he might find a clue. He was informed to his amazement, that about two years and a half before, Mrs. Merton had called upon her, asked for the file and had been given it.

There was but one club in the city—the Elks—and McNamara wondered if Theodore Gatlin had belonged to that. He discovered Gatlin had, and from the dining room steward, who remembered Theodore Gatlin very well, he ascertained the names and addresses of three men with whom Gatlin had according to the steward, seemed very friendly.

Of these three men, one was dead and the others were unable to shed any light upon the parentage of Gatlin's adopted daughter, although one man had a hazy recollection that the child's father had been an army officer and had been killed in the Philippines. The chief's questionings, however, elicited the names of two women who had been friendly with Mrs. Gatlin, so McNamara called upon both. They could furnish him no information beyond the fact that Mrs. Gatlin despised the child Penelope; that she had never been enthusiastic about the adoption; that she had never been kind to the girl; that Gatlin and Penelope had been inseparable pals. They had a feeling that Mrs. Gatlin, while apparently delighting in persecuting her husband, was, nevertheless, insanely jealous of his love for his adopted daughter; that up to the day of her accident, Penelope had been a bright, healthy, normal child, fun-loving and affectionate and humorous, and the delight of her foster father.

CHAPTER XI

Dan reported to Stephen, somewhat depressed, because he had returned, he thought, without a scintilla of worthwhile information. Stephen, however, thought otherwise. "I'll have to question Mrs. Merton again," he decided. He rang for Miss Ordway. "Telephone to Mrs. Merton," he ordered, "and tell her I wish she'd drop in here some day soon. Tell her I'd like the latest report on her health."

"What are you going to do?" McNamara asked.

"Hypnotize her again, of course. I've got to release her from the mental inhibition I set upon her in the case of her adopted daughter. Otherwise she'll not talk."

A minute later Miss Ordway entered the room. "Mrs. Merton says she will be down for her interview in half an hour, Doctor."

"When she arrives, Dan, you step out into the nurse's office until I have her under control; then I'll admit you. I want you to take copious notes."

Mrs. Merton fluttered into Stephen's consultation room forty minutes later. "Oh, Doctor Burt," she whined, "I'm so glad you've sent for me. My insomnia is worse than ever," she whined. "Oh, Doctor, do you think I'm going crazy?"

"Not at all, not at all," he soothed her.

"You are excited over nothing. But you are in a highly nervous condition, of course, and until you have settled down it would be useless for me to attempt to examine you. If you could have a little nap for, say half an hour on the couch in the next room, I'm sure you would awaken much refreshed."

"Oh, if I could only sleep half an hour, Doctor, if I only could. What a relief it would be."

"Nonsense, my dear lady. We doctors have ways of inducing sleep even in the most obstinate cases of insomnia."

At his command she lay down on the couch and Stephen placed a cushion under her head. Employing the appropriate method of inducing hypnotic sleep, Stephen had her drowsy within three minutes; in ten minutes she had passed into a profound state and Stephen summoned McNamara, gave him a pad and pencil and silently indicated a chair.

Mrs. Merton, however, was aware of his presence. "Who's there?" she demanded in a drowsy tone.

"Doctor McNamara, Mrs. Merton. I have called him in to confer with me on your case."

"You are so kind, Doctor Burt," she said.

He resumed his passive stroking of her forehead and cheeks; in a low, monotonous tone he commanded her to answer all his questions. Then suddenly:

"Have you thought of your daughter, Penelope, of late?"

Grime of distress flitted across the beautiful face. "No distress or bad luck will attend the thinking while you are with me, understand? I command you to think about her—to remember her and to answer truthfully all my questions regarding her."

"Yes, Doctor."

"Why did you and Mr. Gatlin adopt her?"

"He wanted a baby and I couldn't give him one."

"Could you, if you had cared to?"

"Yes, Doctor." Her tone was very peevish.

"How old was she when you adopted her?"

"About a month."

"Where did you find her?"

"In the Infants' Shelter in San Francisco."

"Did you know who her parents were before you had decided to adopt her?"

"Yes, Doctor. A Captain and Mrs. Robert E. Elliott."

"Why did the Elliotts abandon their baby?"

"The captain was killed by the Moros and his wife died in this city in childbirth."

"Do you remember what branch of the service the captain was in?"

"He was a captain of cavalry."

"When you and Mr. Gatlin adopted Penelope, did you have any written record of her parentage?"

"We had a letter from the matron at the Infants' Shelter. And we had a letter from the doctor who attended Mrs. Elliott at St. Dunstan's hospital, and some letters from old neighbors of the Elliotts."

"Why did you get the letters from the old neighbors?"

"The doctor was concerned about the baby's ancestry."

"And was it the best?"

"I do not know. It satisfied Mr. Gatlin."

"What has become of all the records pertaining to Penelope?"

"I burned them."

"Why?"

"To keep Penelope from getting them."

"Then she wanted them, did she not?"

"Yes, Doctor. She demanded them."

"When was this?"

"On her eighteenth birthday."

"How did it happen that she waited until her eighteenth birthday before demanding them?"

"Up until then she thought she was our own flesh and blood."

"Ah! Why did you burn these records rather than give them to Penelope?"

"I hate her."

"When you refused to give them to her, what happened?"

"She cried and laughed and screamed and attacked me. She said she hated me. Finally she fainted, and I had the maid put her to bed and lock her in her room."

"Did you give Penelope any information at all, at any time, regarding her parentage?"

"There was a slight hesitation. I lied to her. I wanted to hurt her because she wouldn't recognize my moral right to half of Theodore's estate. So I told her she had negro blood in her veins."

"What made you invent such a horrible tale?"

"Penelope is a decided brunette. I thought even if she did not believe me, my statement would create in her mind a doubt and a fear that would drive her crazy."

"What happened after that, Mrs. Merton?"

"In the morning she was gone."

"How did she go?"

"She made a rope of sheets and blankets."

"Have you seen her since?"

"No."

"Is she dead?"

"I do not know. I hope so."

Stephen turned to Dan. "Any questions?"

McNamara shook his head owlishly.

"I can revive most of the record—perhaps all of it. The captain's record is in the army files; when he married, a notice of it appeared in the Army and Navy Journal; with that and what I can get out of the officers who soldiered with the captain, I'll get a pretty complete picture."

Stephen resumed his cross examination.

"Did you ever beat Penelope? Did you ever pinch her and slap her and lock her up?"

"Yes, Doctor."

"Wake the deend up and send her home," McNamara roared.

"I will—as soon as I look up her memory of Penelope," Stephen replied.

He impressed upon her the fact that she was not ill at all. He commanded her very earnestly to forget that she had ever heard of him.

Then he awakened her, as McNamara departed, gave her a long look, felt her pulse, told her she was much improved and handed her some soda-mint tablets. She departed in a somewhat happier mood.

"Well," McNamara demanded, when he and Stephen found themselves alone again, "what do you think of that one for a hell-cat?"

"I do not think, Dan. We merely accept such people as we accept sunlight and rainfall."

"Do you think you'll see any more of this woman, Stephen?"

"I hope not. I hope the hypnotic suggestion I gave her is strong enough to overcome her acquired instinct for illness."

"Were the things she told you illuminating?"

"Very. I suspected most of them and she confirmed my suspicion. We know now that Penelope is of sound ancestry. Her father was not a neurotic. If he hadn't been a normal, gallant fellow and physically fit he would never have become a captain of cavalry. He was killed in action. But we have arrived at a startling point, Dan—the reason for the mental shock that gave Penelope a dissociated personality."

"I didn't get that—at least not quite, Stephen."

"For some reason best known to themselves, the Gatlins kept from Penelope the fact that she was not their own flesh and blood. However, while we have definitely established the date of the mental shock and the character of the shock, we have also established the causative factors leading up to the shock. Penelope had a most unhappy childhood. From earliest childhood she was the victim of bitter, rebellious thoughts. Then that baseball wrecked her nose. This was a mental and physical shock. The separation and divorce of the Gatlins was another terrible shock, because she lost Gatlin and there was nobody to protect her. And Gatlin's death was a severe shock. Then, as she emerged from childhood into maidenhood, the knowledge that her nose made her hideous naturally became an obsession with her."

"Now, Dan, by this time there was no further necessity for concealing the facts of the child's birth. Gatlin, dead, had left his entire estate in trust to Penelope, and on her eighteenth birthday she was free to do as she pleased. She could leave her hell-cat of an adopted mother now. She carried her own check book. The knowledge that she was not flesh and blood of the beloved Gatlin came as a terrible shock and with it, of course, came other terrifying speculations."

"More piling on of the inferiority complex," McNamara interrupted. "And she cracked under it. Then she made up her mind to forget Mrs. Gatlin—and she did."

"A clear case of auto-hypnosis, Dan. Now you've got to run down the record of our Penelope and that of her parents. She must have it and it must be proof of the most convincing character, because such proof is necessary if we are to restore to her mental tranquility."

"Well," said Dan, "I'll be back presently with the girl's record, and then—"

"Out of the darkness into the sunlight, Mac."

"Well, the next one I find in the darkness will stay there," the chief growled.

The absence of the capable Lanny was a constant reminder to Dr. Stephen Burt of his sole experiment to date in a case of dual personality. He yearned with an alert scientific yearning to get to work on Penelope Gatlin, and when Dan McNamara appeared at the office one day he saw by the satisfied smirk on the McNamara countenance that all had gone well.

"Let me see the documents," Stephen demanded.

McNamara handed over the pile of papers.

"Well, you've done your full duty and have kept the police of various cities busy for a few days," said Stephen. "What do you hear from Lanny?"

"She'll be home next week. The skin graft on the girl's nose was a complete success."

"And how does the girl feel about the situation now?"

"She's crazy about her new nose and

ROOM IMPROVEMENT

My Utopia project for 1934 is room improvement. When I joined the club I took cooking for my project and carried on the work with the 4-H cooking unit.

This year I bought a bedroom suite at a sale and decided to improve my room for my Utopia work. The suite has a double bed, chest of drawers, vanity dresser and chair. I added a rocking chair, book stand and waste basket. The chair is the one mother rocked me to sleep in when I was a baby. The book stand was made by my grandfather from the benches of the old church he attended when a boy and the waste basket is wicker and very old.

I decided to have my color scheme blue and ivory so I painted all the furniture ivory and made blue linen covers for the dresser and chest drawers. I bought a blue bed spread and white ruffled curtains and crocheted two small rugs of pastel shades and painted and framed some pictures. I found an old lamp and painted the base blue and flecked it with gold drest and bought an ivory colored parchment shade for it and a bed light to match it.

I painted some book ends and have them, the lamp and two pictures of friends on the chest of drawers. I made a pin cushion out of a doll and dressed her in blue silk and ecree lace and have the pin cushions and a yellow dresser set on the vanity dresser.

This project has meant much to me as I have been able to express my own desires and tastes and do most of the work myself.

For my winters work, I plan to make some more dresser covers and a fancy pillow for the bed and if I get real ambitious I will piece a quilt.

The Utopia Club means a lot to me. I like the good fellowship of our meetings and the willingness of each member to do what the leaders ask of them and the earnest purpose that we have to make the best better.

Our leaders deserve a lot of credit, if they were not good ones, our club could not be so successful in everything it undertakes.

I was a 4-H member for four years and liked it but Utopia means more as whatever I do I am on my own, and I alone am responsible for my success or failure. I hope every 4-H member will join the Utopia Club when they are older and I hope they will enjoy it and gain as much from it as I feel that I have.

Let us all strive for new members and make our club bigger and better.

HENRIETTA ROSE BLACK

You are gone, my darling baby where there is no sorrow or death never more. You are only waiting for your father and mother on that Heaven and happy shore.

We are coming to you baby. We are only waiting for our time when the blessed Savior calls us to cross that happy life line.

We think of you my darling. If we could only tell of the tears and heartaches we have shed along this line. But we must know God bears our burdens and to Him we look for care. And our only darling baby we are trusting in Him to meet and be with you up there.

Her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Black and family.

BIRTHDAY

PARTY GIVEN BY "THE QUILTERS" IN HONOR OF JOHN URI LLOYD

The Birthday Party given in honor of Prof. John Uri Lloyd Scientist and Author, by the Quilters of the Sophia Webster Lloyd Memorial Society of Florence, Kentucky in honor of his 86th birthday, was a success in every way. The weather was ideal. Over 60 guests were present.

Mr. Lloyd was in fine state of health, and it will long be remembered by those present how beautifully he spoke of his mother, Sophia Webster Lloyd a poem written by her at the dedication of the monument of Bunker Hill, and another, "The Rose."

Song by all, "Happy Birthday" and America. Invocation by Rev. Harold Beemon.

At Mr. Lloyd's table, eight were seated. Mr. Harold Beemon, Florence; Mr. and Mrs. Strauss, of Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Freericks, Cincinnati; Miss Mae Williams, Cincinnati; Mrs. Annie Ashby, Florence. The table looked beautiful. A large cake with 86 candles gave cheerful light and was a gift of love by one of the guests, also a beautiful basket of flowers from Mrs. Mae Williams, and a lovely bouquet from the Town Board, a basket of ferns from another guest.

The Quilters each brought a covered dish and the luncheon was bountiful. Later punch was served. Program - Prof. H. Freericks and Mr. M. Strauss gave interesting talks.

Robert Rouse, President of the Town Board of Florence, said many interesting things in his five minute speech.

Mrs. T. B. Castleman called on the President Mrs. R. L. Pearson of the Society for a few words.

The musical program of the day was rendered by local talent. Old fashioned songs. Mrs. Nierman sang Mr. Lloyd's favorite songs, "When You and I were young Maggie," "Long, Long Ago." The Old Spinning Wheel. America - by all. Happy Birthday.

Reading - "Forty Years Ago" by Miss Dorothy McHenry, Quartet - Mr. John Surace, Mr. Noah Zimmerman, Mr. James P. Tanner, Mr. John Laubisch.

Duet - Mrs. Ed. Bentham, Miss Frances Bentham.

Pictures were made of the party. Among the ones that were present were Mr. Lloyd, Rev. Harold Beemon, Mr. and Mrs. Freericks, Mr. and Mrs. Strauss, Miss Mae Williams, Mrs. Anna Southern, Mrs. Fannie Tanner Clutterbuck, Mrs. Robt. L. Pearson, Mrs. T. B. Corey, Miss Minnie Hoggins, Mrs. Robert Rouse, Mrs. Charlie Scott, Mrs. Chas. Popham, Miss Jennie Crisler, Mr. Hal Highhouse, Ludlow; Mr. and Mrs. Claude Robinson, Mrs. Fannie Long Scott, Mrs. Oola Lucas, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Tanner and daughter, Mr. Hambrick, Mrs. Fred Droge, Covington, Miss Catherine Langin, Mrs. Mae Nieman, Mr. John Surace, Mr. Jno. Laubisch, Mrs. Ed. Bentham, Mrs. Frances Bentham, Mrs. Fannie Utz, Mrs. Hattie Creel, Miss Fortmeyer, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Jones, Mrs. Maggie Clarkson, Mr. Clifford Tanner and others.

BOONE HERD

LEADS IN THE SHELBY-BOONE-CARROLL ASS'N

The ten cow Guernsey herd of Joel Gray of near Burlington with one dry cow averaged 758 pounds of milk and 36.9 pounds of fat per cow during the month of March and was awarded first place in the Shelby-Boone-Carroll Co. Dairy Herd Improvement Association for honor roll and fourth highest herd in the state for that month.

The eight cow Jersey herd of Ben Nichting of Beaver with one dry cow averaged 694 pounds of milk and 34.2 pounds of fat for the month. This herd placed second on the honor roll. There are approximately 25 herds on test in the Shelby-Boone-Carroll County Association.

Chester Hill visited this office last week and renewed his subscription for another year. Mr. Hill lives in the Union neighborhood.

LAST CHANCE AAA TOBACCO CONTRACTS

This week represents the last chance for tobacco growers who have not signed AAA tobacco contracts to secure special bases. The community committees met at Burlington, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week to prepare recommendations to the State Office.

All known tobacco producers have been advised by the County Agent's Office to fill applications. Those who have not applied and do not apply this week will be ineligible for these contracts according to present instructions. No tax exemptions will be awarded this year under present rulings.

MR AND MRS. J. L.

JONES ENTERTAIN

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Jones, of Dorthea Ave., Florence, entertained Sunday in honor of Mrs. Jones' birthday. Those present included Mr. and Mrs. Jones, their grandchild and great-grandchild. A number of friends were also present, thirty-five (35) in all. Lawrence Dune Townsend, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Jones, was christened by the Rev. Carl B. Raeburn, with Mrs. C. L. Stephens as Godmother. An enjoyable time was had by all.

BOONE COUNTY BOYS

ENLIST IN C-C-C

They will then leave for Louisville where they will be quartered in Camp Knox while awaiting further orders. The boys who accompanied Mr. Thompson are as follows: Russell G. Smith, Burlington, Emerson L. Artterkirk, Beaver Lick; Ebert Baker, Walton; George Grayson, Florence; Malcolm Howard, Walton; Ben Baker Kennedy, Verona; Virgil Mallicoat, Burlington, and William Frank Bell, Florence.

FARM CENSUS

REPORT FOR 1935 FOR FOURTH DISTRICT

The farm census for 1935 for the 4th Kentucky District, L. E. Barton, Supervisor, is as follows:

County	1935	1930	Idle farms in 1935
Boone	153.	1563	20
Campbell	158.	1389	3
Carroll	1026	1188	28
Gallatin	696	866	10
Grant	1921	1941	13
Jefferson	3428	2619	48
Kenton	1343	1290	37
Oldham	954	783	4
Pendleton	2014	2013	22
Shelby	2014	2337	6
Trimble	1227	1249	8
Totals	14,407	17,238	199

The variation in the number of farms from one census period to another depends more upon the movements of the tenants, as they are listed as farm operators for the acreage rented by them. All farms of 3 acres or more were listed.

While in some counties there is a decrease, in the whole there is an increase of 1169 farms. In the last five years there has been a noticeable trend from city to the farm. In Jefferson county, there is listed 2156 people living on farms, who resided in a city five years ago. This trend is reflected in the returns for those areas surrounding the larger cities of Louisville, Covington and Newport - such as Jefferson, Oldham and Shelby counties, and in Campbell, Kenton and Pendleton counties.

A farm for Census purpose is all the land operated by one person, whether owner or tenant. This results in more farms reported than shown on the deed books. Of the county, because where a landowner has one or more tenants besides himself. The returns show two or more tenants, according to the number of tenants. A large part of the farming in this country has always been done by tenants, and his welfare and economic problems are subject of study by the government as well as those of the landowner.

The number of acres of farm land in a county remains about the same from one census to another, varying a little due to land appropriated for public roads, for schools, for town lots and other non-agricultural purposes. The number of operated farms varies considerably, where more or fewer tenants are operating farms, or where large farms have been divided into smaller ones, such as division of land among heirs, and the like.

Some of our local fishermen are trying the finny tribe on ooth Gunpowder and Woolper creeks. No big catches have been reported.

WORKERS

MOVE BACK TO FARMS, SURVEY SHOWS.

Industrial America, wrecked by six years of depression, today moved back to 10-acre farms.

Preliminary estimates in the national agricultural census for 1935 by the Department of Commerce indicate a gain of 10 per cent in farm numbers over 1930, when the last count was made.

We have the theory—although final details of the census are still unavailable—that the increase is in small farms near large industrial cities," a high authority said.

This, he explained, is caused by return of former farm workers who lost their industrial jobs during the depression.

"Thousands of farm workers moved to the cities during boom years, lured by high wages. They were the first to lose their jobs when the crash came," the official said.

William C. Austin, Census Bureau director, is speeding the 1935 farm census program, which cost the government $5,000,000 to present the farm situation before the administration. It may be ready late this summer. Regional field offices in many cities have already been closed. About 27,500 persons were given temporary jobs of about three months each for this work.

OVER TWO MILLION

POUNDS OF TOBACCO SIGNED BY TOBACCO GROWERS IN BOONE COUNTY

Boone county tobacco growers have signed 2,250,520 pounds of base tobacco under regular AAA tobacco contracts and according to John E. Crigier, Secretary of the Boone county AAA Tobacco Production Control Association approximately 90,000 pounds additional will be allotted under the new special base contracts.

The Community and County Control Committees beginning Tuesday of this week are meeting at Burlington to adjust and make recommendations on the special base applications. One hundred and thirty special base applications have been received to date.

NEW HAVEN BOOSTERS
New Haven Boosters met Friday April the fifth. There were only twenty five members present because of epidemics. The meeting was called to order by the president and the minutes were read by the secretary.

The captains of each group gave a report of their groups.

Club Reporter
Earl Jones

L. S. Chambers, of Petersburg, who was here the past week on jury service, was a caller at the Recorder office, at which time he renewed his subscription.

IT'S A SMALL WORLD AFTER ALL

Courtney Jarrell, of Petersburg, Ky., when drifting in a johnboat in the Ohio River near the Kentucky shore opposite Lawrenceburg, Ind., found a bottle afloat in the water. Inside the bottle was a one-page letter written with blue ink in large careful handwriting. A significant inclosure was the fact that the letter, dated March 3, 1934, was signed by a namesake of the finder.

In his love note Arthur Jarrell, of Hode, Ky., described himself as 18 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, and hoped his letter would fall into the hands of "the girl of my dreams."

Arthur said he looked forward to marriage with a girl who was not "too flippish or fast," as they were in his small community.

Courtney Jarrell's kin are scattered in Kentucky and believes after a checkup his family and the Jarrell's living in Hode are descendants of the same ancestry.

Hode is on Tug Fork of the Big Sandy River, opposite Kermit, W. Va., 50 miles south of Huntington.

"THE PICTURE GIRL" IS TITLE OF BURLINGTON SENIOR PLAY

The Senior Class of the Burlington High School has selected "THE PICTURE GIRL" as the play which will be presented this year by the Class of 1935.

This play will be given on Thursday night, May 2, at 8 o'clock. The play will be presented in the Auditorium of the local high school, and should be patronized by a large audience. The price of admission will be 10 and 25c.

AUCTION SALE BRINGS GOOD PRICES

Col. R. G. Kinman, who was the auctioneer of the Cherrington furniture and restaurant equipment sale held last Thursday reports that the sale was most successful in all respects. In fact, everything sold at war-time prices which fact should be an indication that the times may be getting better.

INTERESTING

LETTER RECEIVED FROM WASHINGTON

The Recorder is in receipt of a letter from Miss Ruth M. Kelly, now employed in Washington, D. C., in which she writes of her work and life in that busy city. Miss Kelly is very pleasantly rated, both at work at the office and in her home life as well. She holds the position of Editorial Clerk of the Farm Schedules of 1935 Special Agricultural Census.

Miss Kelly writes that the work is rather interesting, although they rush the employees at top speed all the while. Speed seems to be almost as important as accuracy. The clerks don't lose any time at the job for seven hours daily. Miss Kelly is also taking on the side a course in Statistics offered by the Department of Commerce. This adds somewhat to her usual busy day. She lives at the "Helene Club" which cares for thirty girls.

Miss Kelly writes that Washington is very much the same as when she left there four years ago, except the addition of several magnificent buildings. The federal employees pour out of these and other buildings at 4:30 p. m., like so many ants. The traffic jams are adding almost at office of every hours. She also says that the cherry blossoms are most beautiful at the time of her writing and that she wished all her Boone county friends might see them.

Miss Kelly stated that she received the Recorder each Friday and that she thoroughly reads and thoroughly enjoys each issue. She also noted a marked improvement in the paper and wishes the Recorder much success for the future. In return the Recorder is glad to note Miss Kelly's progress in her field of work and is thankful for her complimentary remarks about this paper.

UTOPIA CLUB HOLDS MEETING
The Boone County Utopia Club No. 2, held their April meeting last Thursday night at the Court House. Carl W. Jones, of Lexington, was a very interesting visitor, bringing new ideas for project work and entertainment for the members. There was a large number present and two new members. Hebron group served delicious sandwiches and drinks.

Burlington group will have charge of the program next month, so let everyone plan to come and bring a new member.

Arthur Jones who lives on Burlington Route 2, and is assistant mail carrier when his services are needed, was a friendly visitor to our office Saturday. We were glad to meet Mr. Jones and to receive his subscription for another year.

194 CORN-HOG

APPLICATIONS SUBMITTED TO STATE BOARD OF REVIEW

One hundred and ninety-one regular and three late 1935 corn-hog applications were tabulated and submitted the past week to the State Corn-Hog Board of Review for approval according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

The 1935 number of applications compares quite favorably with the 1934 number of 220 contracts. Group I class or 1934 contract signers are expected to sign the contracts to be submitted to Washington for payment in about two weeks. Group II and III which represents new signers for 1935 and were changes in the corn-hog base from last year will have their contracts completed for payment at a slightly later date.

The average appraisal corn yield of all contracted farms in the county is 31.0 bushels per acre compared with the ten year average yield of 29.5 bushels for the county.

QUIT GRUMBLING

Those who grumble about conditions and times are losing out, while those who go after business are getting it. Many are making more money than they made even during the heydays and its time to quit expecting a pension or an easy living and go out and earn something. And this applies to the merchant who neglects advertising, to the laborer who sits at home expecting a job to come to him, to the salesman who overlooks the old adage that the early bird catches the worm and to everyone else who wants to get ahead.

AN INCONSISTENCY

Americans support free clinics for unfortunate sick children. They provide schools and welfare nurses to guard the children's health. They dance at President's balls to aid little cripples. They legislate to save them from industrial slavery. They establish children's hospitals and homes. We doubt if any nation gives them so much consideration from all standpoints. Yet last year American autoists killed 1,500 children under 4 years of age, and 3,800 between the ages of 4 to 14. During the same 12-month period more than 180,000 children under 14 were injured in car accidents.

ADVERTISING AND DONATIONS

Boone county merchants are spending hundreds of dollars for advertising. At least they record it as paid out for advertising, altho in reality only a portion of this money should be charged to the advertising account. One is advertising that pays dividends, pure and simple and gratifying. The other should be charged to donations.

The newspaper has always been recognized as the leading advertising medium. So-called advertisements in many small civic publications, programs, societies and other schemes of money-raising ideas pay little or no dividends and the merchant knows it when he purchases the space. It is, more or less, a good spirit extension. The real advertising mediums are being done an injustice when such are charged to advertising, and not to donations.

BAD MONEY

Bankers everywhere, as well as careful business men, are closely scrutinizing all the paper money proffered them by patrons in payment of accounts. This unusual care must needs be exercised because of the fact more than a million dollars worth of spurious money has floated in the United States, and it is being found, everywhere, in the hands of innocent persons who must suffer a loss when they discover the money in their possession is counterfeit. This spurious money is being printed in the east and is being marketed in the central west. It is being bought for 30 cents on the dollar and is being disposed of by crooks who travel from city to city, making small purchases of merchandise and paying for it with a spurious bill and received good money in change.

No community, large or small, is safe from these passers of counterfeit bills, and every merchant should exercise especial care in accepting paper money from strangers, and especially those who make small purchases and who want a big chunk of change.

FRUITS OF COOPERATION

A practical example of the essential work done by agricultural cooperatives is afforded in the case of dairy products producers in an eastern state.

During depression, consumption in the largest market served by these farmers dropped forty per cent. At the same time, production kept to a stable level, making it necessary for the producers to find a new outlet in order to dispose of the surplus.

A pooling arrangement was then put into effect. Outlet for the surplus was found by turning a part of the total production to manufacturing units. Milk used for manufacture commanded a lower price than that sold to the consumer in fluid state—and that inequality was satisfactorily adjusted within the pool by deducting enough from the price received by those who sold fluid milk to compensate the member whose milk went for manufacturing.

The plight of the unorganized farmer when demand falls, is well known. He absolutely is powerless—he can do nothing save continue to produce and take whatever price he is offered for the part of his crop that is wanted. When that farmer joins with other farmers and all work together in allocating production, stabilizing of prices and exploring new markets, the picture changes altogether.

Cooperation has saved a legion of farmers from ruin during the past few years. And now it is slowly, but steadily, helping to bring agricultural recovery.

BUSINESS REVIVAL IS STEADILY GAINING STRENGTH

Business figures for the first three months of the present year are quite pleasing in that they point to a definitely ascending curve in production, in unemployment, in payrolls, in security issues, and in car loadings and bank clearings.

Even the conservative American Federation of Labor says that "business revival seems to be steadily gaining in strength." This statement is based on the fact that its own employment figures show that about three-fourths of a million workers have obtained jobs since January 1. This is cutting into the ranks of the unemployed at the rate of 3,000,000 jobs a year, a quite startling and very pleasing state of affairs.

There is every reason to believe that this upward economic and industrial trend will continue, unless Washington should upset the apple-cart. The administration's recovery program since last election day has been of considerable help in restoring business confidence. There is no reason to believe that the President and his advisers plan any change in that policy. But Congress is still in session. And it is in the legislative halls that the danger lies.

HOW BAD ARE OUR SCHOOLS?

(Hazard Plaindealer)

Education, to hear some folks talk about it, is in a bad way in America. Miss Virginia Gildersleeve, head of Barnard College, said the other day that superficiality and slovenliness prevail in most colleges, a lack of thoroughness and of clear thinking. Right on top of that the Professor of Education in the University of North Dakota, Frederick Weitzinn, came out with a survey of rural education in which he said that, on the whole it was about as bad as it could be.

Americans have taken a good deal of pride, generally, in our system of wide-spread free educational facilities. We are inclined to boast about the school privileges which every American child and youth enjoys. It is rather a slap in the face, therefore, to be told that the whole system is inefficient and low-grade, from the one-room rural schools to the great Universities.

Maybe it would be a good idea to look into the matter. Most folks take it for granted that any school is a good school. But as Prof. Weitzinn points out, thousands of rural communities treat the school teacher as something less than human. There is an inclination to hire not the best teachers but the cheapest, and to look with contempt upon the man or woman who makes teaching a life-work, because, as everybody knows, there isn't any money in it.

We don't think that is true generally, but it is nearly enough true in many places to make the accusation hurt. Somehow, with all our pride in our schools, most of it seems to be for building rather than for the teaching that goes on inside of them. We have not yet reached the stage of civilization of the European countries, where the school teacher is the most honored and respected citizen of the community.

By CARTER FIELD

Washington.—With nature moving in to help extinguish the cotton surplus, as she had already on hogs, cattle and to a lesser extent wheat, probabilities for trouble in the future for cotton growers in this country are not diminished, but increased.

The point is that the dust storms in the big cotton producing areas of Texas and Oklahoma—more than half of the cotton raised in the United States is grown west of the Mississippi despite the prevailing opinion to the contrary—have already boosted the price of cotton. Pressure on AAA is expected to continue loans at around 12 cents, despite the desire to drop them gradually. All of which means that the price of cotton will be maintained at this high level next year.

So far, so good, but unfortunately it is impossible for the United States to keep such a situation secret. If this country could only do what Russia did a few years back with wheat, it could make a killing on cotton—perhaps—next year.

The Russians, it may be recalled, circulated stories that their wheat crop had failed, back in the days of Secretary of Agriculture Hyde and the farm board. The farm board began buying wheat, and the Russians began selling. Hyde thought they were selling short, and actually denounced them in public speeches for such a nefarious practice. But the Russians delivered the wheat. Whereupon the price collapsed, the Russians having been the only wheat farmers to get a real price for their product, and the money for that coming out of the United States treasury.

But the whole world knows about crops in the United States. Down in Brazil they know about the dust storms that are wrecking cotton crop prospects west of the Mississippi. They know about the agitation to continue the 12-cent loans—which means an artificially maintained 12-cent price next year. And they know that in Brazil they can produce cotton at a profit at 6 cents a pound!

Big Brazilian Crop

Naturally Brazil will increase her cotton acreage next season by every square yard possible. This "possible" amount is far from trivial. Tremendous overnight expansion is impossible, of course, but Brazil's agricultural experts figure that only about one-tenth of the land capable of producing cotton—always with the 6 cents, including profit, in mind—is now under cultivation. So that the real problem is labor. But there is enough labor for much more expansion. So it can safely be assumed that there will be a big increase in the next Brazilian crop.

Over in England the cotton spinning people know about these dust storms, and about the prospect of the United States maintaining the 12-cent price. Some of their big mills have made the change in their looms so as to spin the Brazilian cotton. More of them are now expected to do so. They will naturally figure they can buy Brazilian cotton cheaper than United States cotton.

Over in the Japanese puppet state there are now 30,000,000 acres in cotton. Very small so far as world figures go, but there also the facts about the situation in the United States are known, and may be expected to have results. Similarly in Egypt and India.

All of which point unerringly to the probability that throughout the world there will be a mad rush to take advantage of the situation. This promises eventually to leave the United States treasury holding the bag, owing millions of bales of cotton for which it paid 12 cents a pound, when the world market will be around 7 or 8 cents at the most, and 6 cents in all probability.

But this is only part of the trouble. Johnson and Johnson have already announced their plans for setting up cotton mills in Brazil, the idea being not only to get cheaper cotton, but to get away from the processing tax. Products of this mill would be used in place of goods formerly exported from the American mills of this big firm.

Army Is Stirred

Army and navy officers are terribly concerned over the bill just passed by the house, and soon to be considered in the senate, for taking the profit out of war. They assure everyone who will listen to them, in private, that it will also take national defense out of war, which might be very serious indeed to the nation in the event of a conflict.

The pacifists hail the bill as: "A bill to keep the United States out of war by providing in advance that there will be (1) profits for none, and (2) confiscatory taxes for all, so that it will be to every American's interest to keep the United States at peace."

Army and navy experts say that it should be called: "A bill (1) to transfer the war munitions industry now in the United States, and which might be started here, to foreign soil, (2) to provide for murderous delay in preparation in case a war is forced on this country, (3) to conscript soldiers and employers but not workmen, and (4) to repeal the oldest law of military strategy: that the best offense is a vigorous offense."

Goaded by a $2,000,000 bonus to Eugene G. Grace, by screams of the pacifists, by complaints of soldier bonus lobbyists that "these boys fought and risked their lives while profiteers were making millions," the house voted down every qualifying amendment, passed the bill, and privately hopes the senate will write some sense into it.

Tax on Profits

More serious, from a preparedness standpoint, is the tax provision on profits. Half of all profits up to 6 per cent and then 100 per cent is the house provision. Suppose, say army and navy officers, the du Ponts had been faced with such a situation at the entry of the United States into the World war. Would they have dared expand their plants? Suppose, instead, of a preliminary period of nearly three years during which the allies were buying all the munitions they could get, and which naturally caused tremendous expansion of the du Pont, Bethlehem and other munition plants, the United States had been involved from the first, with such restrictions on earnings as are now proposed.

The point made by the army and navy men is primarily that no manufacturer would dare expand his plant to take care of a war need. He would not be able to make enough to scrap the plant after the war, and he would have to take his chances with government auditors on depreciation charges. Altogether he would be much safer if his plant were located on foreign soil, where it would be welcomed as an element of military strength.

So that the natural development would be for foreign countries to benefit—even in time of peace—by the training of their workmen in the making of munitions, and in time of war by the possibility of big profits, which these foreign governments could tax to their heart's content and still leave something for the manufacturers.

Nearly everyone agrees that the proposed law would be repealed as the first act of congress after the next declaration of war. Critics are not much worried about that. What really worries them is the prospect of American business enterprise moving abroad wholesale to escape such conditions, thus not only depriving the United States of this element of strength, but actually providing it for potential enemies.

The bill would have no chance of enactment if the votes were by secret ballot. But it is far simpler politically to vote for such a measure than to vote against it, and then try to explain why to one's constituents. Groups lobbying for the measure are militant. And, almost to the last man and woman, they would remember at the polls!

See Long Session

Congress is not going to be rushed to an early adjournment. It will be with us for a long time yet. Almost surely until August. Probably until September. Possibly longer than that.

This is true despite all the flat predictions by leaders that the "must" items will be rushed through, and everything else will be abandoned. Many things may be "abandoned." But they will not be abandoned because of the time element. They will be abandoned, if at all, because actually they are not wanted. Careful examination of the leftovers at the time of adjournment will reveal the truth of this statement.

Utility heads got all pepped up a few days ago at this list of "must" measures. It did not include the public utility holding company bill. Now, despite all the statements, the probability of the moment is that a holding company bill affecting the utilities will be passed. It will not be passed in the form desired by President Roosevelt. It will be much more moderate. It will actually be what some of the utility chiefs favored as much as ten years ago.

But its omission from the "must" list given out by house leaders is very amusing. It was a bit of intra-party strategy. The house leaders in particular are getting very tired of the President's treating them the way he goes. Hence their public statement of a "program" which would be put through and then followed by speedy adjournment. The legislative veterans were laughing in their sleeves at the time, but their statements made good newspaper copy. What they want is for the President to take them more into his confidence, and stop treating the house of representatives like a stepchild.

Soldier Bonus

Naturally, the soldier bonus was not on the "must" list. The President does not want that. But if anyone thinks that it is not going to take a lot of the senate's time, he just does not know very much about the senate. Especially, as the best predictions now are that the bonus legislation, after passing both houses, and being vetoed, will be passed over the veto by the house and then fail of passage in the senate.

This unofficial program calls for two separate considerations of the measure by the senate! That is not all. Very few administration leaders are optimistic enough to believe this congress will adjourn without giving the soldiers something. Which means that time must intervene—after a sufficient demonstration of strength to frighten the White House, and after a sufficient demonstration of weakness to frighten the American Legion—for a compromise to be worked out. The President has let it be known to a few friends on Capitol Hill that he is willing to go to a compromise of about $1,200,000,000. The bonus leaders know that, and will move heaven and earth to obtain it if they find that they are going to lose out on the main fight.

Incidentally, there is nothing on the "must" program about the AAA amendments, nor about the growing movement to rescind the cotton processing tax. Nor the corn and hog processing tax. Flat prediction is hereby made that there will be a lot of oratory in the senate on both before the final gavel taps.

BULLITTVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. C. Eggleston and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Fisher at Madison, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Root, Gibbs and daughter were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Theo. F. Birkie and family. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Mattox and son were visiting at Williams-town Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Roberts of Devon, were visiting here Sunday. Quite a few attended the Sunrise Worship Sunday morning at the Christian church.

Lespedeza and soybeans will be used to replace large acreages of wheat flooded out in McLean county. It is estimated that 2,200 acres of wheat were destroyed by excessive rainfall.

Wonder Boy

A real Belgian stud will make the season at J. A. Riddell's Busy Bee Horse Farm. He is 16 1/4 hands high, weighs 1675 pounds, Sorrell, stripe in face, flax mane and tail. Fair style and action. At $10.00 to insure colt to stand up and suck. I will give a free season for the best colt, 1936 and $5.00 second to be shown next fall. 500 horse men have looked at him and pronounced him a cracker jack.

GUNPOWDER

H. F. Utz made this writer a pleasant call on Thursday evening of last week.
Mr. and Mrs. Lou Crutcher of Hebron, entertained the following guests very pleasantly last Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Raley and son George Hankins, Mrs. Melissa Hankins, Mr. and Mrs. Ledford, James Beall and Mrs. Zada Aylor, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Allen and this scribe and wife. A bountiful dinner which consisted of all the delicacies of the season, was enjoyed by all present at the noon hour, and a very pleasant time was enjoyed socially.
Harry Tanner, our local paper hanger, is about the busiest man in this neck of the woods.
Mrs. Florence Floyd spent Wednesday afternoon of last week with Mrs. R. E. Tanner and Mr. Tanner.
Mr. Ogden came out from Covington last Saturday and spent a few hours on his fox farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bowman spent Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. Wm. Gray and family.
Mrs. Chester Grant and children spent Saturday afternoon with Mrs. Anna Rice.
Miss Lallie Gray spent Sunday with Miss Mary Eliza Delph.
Wilbur Gray is spending a few days with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bowman.
Mr. and Mrs. Earl Locke spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Bowman.
Mrs. Chas. Sedler and daughters Alma and Anna Caroline, and Mrs. Louise Joyce and daughter, Louisa, spent Sunday evening with Mrs. Stella Kippier.
Mrs. Ira Kittle and daughters Mabel and Alberta, and Mr. Wm. Banard called on Mr. and Mrs. Adam Delph Sunday afternoon.

LOWER GUNPOWDER

Howard Aylor and family spent the week-end with his father and

HAMILTON

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Black and Ruth who have been in Florida for the winter, returned home Friday.

Prof. and Mrs. Asbury and daughter Carol Ann, spent the week-end in Mt. Olivet with their parents.

Anna Marie Huff spent Easter Sunday with her grandfather, William Huff.

Eggs keep well for 9 or 10 months when stored in water glass. Use a quart and a half of water glass to galvanized containers with tight lids are best. A six-gallon container will hold 15 dozen eggs.

Best results are obtained when pigs are not weaned until about 10 weeks old. Hog raisers differ about weaning age, but it never pays to stunt pigs. Arranging for the pigs to eat grain to themselves, away from the sows, makes weaning easier.

High grain prices are stimulating interest in lespedeza, soybeans, cowpeas, rape, alfalfa, sudan grass and other hay pasture crops. Many farmers are planning crops that will help to reduce grain feeding in summer and fall and provide hay for winter.

"Brooding Chicks Artificially," Kentucky College of Agriculture circular 157, contains a wealth of information about the cooperation of brooder stoves, brooder houses, feeding, and other matters of importance in raising chicks. Directions are given for building poultry raising equipment at home.

Work butter just enough to distribute the salt evenly. Too much working tends to make butter weak-bodied, sticky and greasy. Not worked enough, it may be greasy and uneven in color. Finished butter should be kept cool in a tight container.

Lowered vitality and poor physical development in children, including listlessness and backwardness, may be caused by lack of vitamin C in the diet. Good sources of this vitamin are fresh and cooked tomatoes and raw succulent vegetables, such as cabbage, spinach and lettuce, and citrus fruits, apples, bananas, string beans and celery.

Campbell county farmers are taking an active part in the formation of a fruit and vegetable cooperative marketing association.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for their foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife, who had never wanted her. The affair ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Penelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they set out joyfully for a baseball game. But when they reached the bleachers, struck Penelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin applied to the child's grandparents, retired from business, would Penelope all his money, and was about to begin a career as a fortune teller when a motor accident ended his life.

CHAPTER II.—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient, Nance Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood was left her by a doctor, who was responsible. McNamara did not think she was a responsible criminal, but obtained Burt's expert testimony. Burt, even though the doctor's faithful office nurse, was won over by her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

CHAPTER III.—Nance's criminal record outweighed Doctor Burt's clear explanation of her case and she was sent to San Quentin Penitentiary for two years. Lanny visited her and Nance persuaded him to write a letter, which a confederate stole from her handbag outside the prison walls.

CHAPTER IV.—Nance escaped, although shot, by swimming out to a speed-boat manned by friends and went to Lanny's apartment. McNamara, who ordered her to bring Nance to his apartment and phoned for Doctor Burt.

CHAPTER V.—One of the men in the boat on which Nance escaped—two of them ex-convicts, the other a bootlegger—had been wounded, and they went to Burt's office, where McNamara found them. The bootlegger he let go and the other took the others to his home, ordering the uninjured one to care for Nance and his pal. From them he learned that Nance's real name was Penelope Gatlin. Detective Sergeant Flynn and Angelotti, seeking the reward offered for Nance's apprehension, went to Lanny's apartment in search of Nance. Looking over her San Quentin cell, McNamara found a blank check on a San Jose bank.

CHAPTER VI.—From the San Jose banker McNamara learned that the girl he knew as Nance Belden was Penelope Gatlin, heiress to $750,000. The banker did not know Penelope's whereabouts. Mrs. Gatlin was now the wife of a man named Nance. McNamara ordered Detective Sergeant Flynn and Angelotti to "lay off" Lanny, whom they suspected of harboring Nance. The detectives trailed Doctor Burt when he went to McNamara's house to treat her gunshot wound but Nance and the two men who helped her escape saw them first and fled.

CHAPTER VII.—When Lanny got home one evening she found Nance sound asleep, curled up on her guest-room bed. Several days later the hard-boiled exterior of Nance Belden suddenly vanished and she became the refined Penelope Gatlin. Her partially restored memory led her to tell Lanny of her wealthy father, Theodore Gatlin, and of her childhood in France. Fearing his detectives would locate Penelope, McNamara hid her in a room with tear and stink bombs and told her how to use them to escape if they did. She used the bombs and got away. Flynn and Angelotti continued hot on Nance's trail—and McNamara's.

CHAPTER VIII.—Susan Engelbright, known as "Sapphire Susie," who had served a term for blackmail, appeared and asked McNamara's protection from Flynn. She said that Nance had gotten her three 15-carat sapphires out of her back after she had helped her plan for escape. McNamara learned definitely that Nance (or probably Penelope) had called for France. He also discovered he was in love with Lanny, and learned that "Nance" was living in Paris as Penelope Gatlin. Doctor Burt had been treating Mrs. Rudolph Merton, and McNamara discovered that this woman was Penelope's foster-mother, remarried.

CHAPTER IX.—Stephen warned Penelope by cable to leave Paris, signing his message "Mac." When Flynn went to Doctor Burt to ask him to identify a passport photograph of Penelope Gatlin as Nance Belden, the doctor hypnotized him and impressed on his subconscious mind that he must never again mention the two names Nance Belden and Penelope Gatlin.

CHAPTER X.—Warned through the joint efforts of McNamara and Stephen, Nance fled Paris before Flynn could put the French police on her trail, and popped back into Lanny's home in San Francisco. Dan and Lanny were married and accompanied Penelope to New York, where Doctor Burt had intended to remodel her nose. As McNamara had destroyed all her criminal records, this remaining of her locks would bury her identity as Nance Belden. Dan returned when his 60 days leave expired and reported the operation a success but that three months would elapse before Nance was out of the surreptitious hospital and remissioned McNamara to look up the girl's ancestry and living conditions in childhood.

CHAPTER XI.—Stephen hypnotized Mrs. Merton and she told how she had made Penelope's childhood unhappy through jealousy of her husband's affection for the child. When Penelope was sixteen years old, she told her she was a foundling and had negro blood in her veins, and Penelope ran away. Lanny returned, saying Penelope's new nose had made her a beauty, but that she had returned to Paris.

CHAPTER XII.—In his office Doctor Burt was notified that Miss Penelope Gatlin was waiting. Admitting her, he engaged her in professional conversation as a stranger. After a brief consultation the doctor revealed her identity. She was Penelope Gatlin. With her nose and her personality comparative happiness restored, the girl was changed that the doctor had not known her. Always warm and friendly, she had loved him almost from their first meeting, and her dual personality dissolved, found at last the promise of complete happiness with "Stephen."

time about getting back on the job. You're looking mighty particular, Lanny. Happy?"

"Stevie, dear, I never knew there was such complete happiness in the world."

"Where's Penelope?"

"She's gone back to Paris—on a new passport."

"Well, well, well," Stephen chided her, "tell me things."

"Stevie, she's as lovely as a May morning."

"And the operation?"

"A phenomenal success. Of course," Lanny added, "she could never stand a sock on the nose."

"Just what is she going to do in Paris?"

"Close out her apartment and dismiss her servants."

"And coming back to San Francisco?"

Lanny nodded. "How do you stand Miss Ordway as your office nurse, Stephen?"

"Rather well, I'm sorry to say. She's very competent and much more tactful than you."

"And do you want me back, darling?" she queried.

"There you go, fishing for a compliment. Of course I do, but—it isn't necessary. You could come in once a week."

"Not for a great many weeks, Stevie."

He glanced up at her sharply. "How come, Lanny?"

Lanny's face was the color of an old rose. "I'm going to have a baby," she whispered.

And then Stephen Burt stood up and took dear old Lanny in his strong young arms and hugged her. At last she was going to have her little slice of life!

"Of course," Lanny said presently, "you'll be the baby's god-father?"

He nodded. "Of course."

Three months passed—to Stephen Burt remarkable by reason of the fact that Mrs. Rudolph Merton did not call upon him. At last, to satisfy his curiosity, he telephoned Rudolph Merton to ask him how his wife was.

"I don't know," Merton replied complacently. "She's gone."

"Dead?"

"No such luck. She's gone to South San Francisco to join a new religious sect. A colony on the fringe of the San Bernardino desert with a prophet in command."

"And what are you doing about it, Mr. Merton?" Stephen asked.

"I'm subsidizing the prophet so he'll stay in business ten months longer. Mrs. Merton has deserted me, thank God, but she has to be away a year before I can secure a divorce on the grounds of desertion. The prophet comes high, but I can afford to pay for my fancies."

"I gather from your manner that you're not broken hearted."

"Such sorrow as I feel now would be delicious delight compared with what I'd feel if she decided to come back to me."

"I congratulate you, Mr. Merton. Good-by and good luck to you. You deserve it."

As Stephen hung up the telephone receiver, chuckling, Miss Ordway brought in his mail. In it he found a registered parcel that had been through the custom house, with duty prepaid on it. It contained the finest and most expensive combination stop-watch and timepiece he had ever seen, and a note that read:

"Dear Doctor Burt:

"I know it would not be an unfair favor to ask you for a bill for professional services, for I realize that what you did for me was done as one human being to another and quite without thought of financial remuneration. Moreover, I prefer to remain forever your debtor. You will never know what you have done for me. Christ, restoring life to the dead son of the widow of Nahn, performed no greater miracle than did you in restoring life and happiness to my dead soul. I would try to thank you if words were not so pitifully inadequate to express the profundity of my gratitude. Will you not please accept the enclosed trifle as a token of that gratitude, and add one more debt to those already owed you by me?"

"It is not easy to learn to live with my secret, now that I have found it out. I am trying to regard the past as one hark back in memory to a very serious illness. Some days when I have achieved sufficient courage I am curious about my other self, evolved from darkness. There are blanks in my life. Perhaps you can fill them in. Perhaps you will not care to, knowing that they are better left blank. I do not think, however, that I was ever terribly wicked. If so, I have no recollection of it."

"Your grateful

"Penelope."

"Old Mother Nature is speaking to Penelope," he soliloquized, and replaced his father's old watch with the one Penelope had sent him. "Give Nature a chance—give her an even break—and she'll prove herself the greatest physician of all."

After some consideration he wrote the following to Penelope:

"Come home and let me iron out the few remaining wrinkles so your life will be as smooth as you could wish. The watch is wonderful. Thanks and I think you are very wonderful, too. Love as usual."

"Stephen."

It occurred to him to tuck that last phrase in for good measure. Love—not merely the love of a man for a woman but the love that is a fine friendship—was, he knew, very necessary to Penelope. She must, he knew, be assured that in all the world somebody really cared. Nobody knew better than he the wreckage that kindness and love denied can make of human lives; never a day passed without leaving him evidence of this.

He was not getting quite his little slice of life. Money, success, the joy of accomplishment, professional standing, the respect of his colleagues, he had, plus some good friends and true. But he was lonely.

He decided not to dine alone. It would be far better to drop in unannounced on Lanny and Dan, take pot luck for dinner.

CHAPTER XII

It was late fall. Stephen had just returned from his vacation. It was his first day back at the office and he was a bit rebellious at the flood of patients that awaited him. He finally got rid of the last one at five-thirty, and following his custom, settled back for a pipeful of tobacco, when Miss Ordway entered.

"There's a young lady calling," she announced. "She says she is Miss Elliott."

"I don't know her, Miss Ordway. A prospective patient?"

"I imagine she is. I didn't ask."

"Tell her it's beyond office hours and suggest that she call during office hours tomorrow."

Miss Ordway departed to deliver the message, but returned presently to say that the young lady begged to be permitted to see him. "Very well, show her in," he acquiesced irritably, "but remember Professor Finnegan if she stays too long."

Miss Elliott entered. Stephen rose and waved her to a chair. Then:

"Well, Miss Elliott, what seems to be the trouble?"

"Does my general appearance indicate to you, even remotely, that I am one who requires the services of a neurologist and psychiatrist?" she asked him.

Stephen smiled. "Scarcely. What is it, then? You want a subscription to something?"

"How astute you are, Doctor. I am soliciting subscriptions to a fund designed to furnish expert medical attention to a very deserving public servant. I refer to Detective Sergeant Patrick Joseph Flynn."

"I know him, Miss Elliott. What's wrong with Flynn?"

"His blood pressure seems to be very high."

"Nothing doing, Miss Elliott," Stephen interrupted. "I admit I sold this terrible Flynn the notion that he had high blood pressure, but I did that for a reason I do not care to explain. The man has the arteries of a boy. What's Flynn to you? And just who might you be?"

"You have my name. What I want to know is this: Are you ashamed to take me out to dinner?"

"No, of course not," Stephen blinked. "I appear eminently respectable."

"Quite. In fact, a most presentable lady."

"Not so homely, eh?"

"On the contrary. But I shall not go to dinner with you."

"Why?"

"Well, while the experience might be delightful, I think you're too pert. The lovely face drooped sorrowfully. "Oh, Stephen, would you be that mean to poor little Penelope?"

"Good God of love!" Stephen almost yelled. "Are you my little Penelope?"

"Of course I am. Oh, Stephen, you great booby, not to recognize me!"

He came from behind his desk, took her fiercely by the shoulders and gazed down at her, too amazed to speak. "That's a pretty good second-hand nose, isn't it?" Penelope queried, with cablegram. But I had to fight things out and I didn't want to come home until I could meet you bravely. Stephen, are you truly glad to see me again?"

"I am," he answered, and marvelled that he should be so glad as he was. His heart, for some mad reason, was singing within him.

"Sit down," he commanded, and went back to his own chair. "I'm going to talk to you for five minutes, and then the subject will be taboo for ever. Imagine a long hill with a deep pond at the foot of it—a pond all scummy green and slimy—a miasmic pond. Imagine that you started running down that hill in the dark, that you stubbed your toe and rolled the remainder of the way—into that pond. Well, that's exactly what happened to you. You were running in the dark and you stubbed your toe and landed in a social stratum equivalent to that scummy pond. Do you remember your foster-mother?"

"Faintly—as one remembers faces and events of one's childhood."

"Well, don't bother to remember her. Her cruelty almost ruined your life, but you must not of this life now, never to return. There are four human beings living who know that Penelope Gatlin and Nance Belden were one and the same. I wrote you a meticulous account of your illness, so you understand all about that, but what I want you to know now is that no power on earth can ever discover you the penalty for the misdeeds of Nance Belden. By the way, where did you get that name?"

"I had forgotten who I was and I had to have a name. So I picked that one out of a book."

"The new nose has helped wonderfully, hasn't it?"

She nodded. "I do not want to hide from people now, Stephen."

What IS
a Sound Loan?

A sound loan for a commercial bank is a loan which the borrower believes, and the bank expects, will be paid within a reasonable time—a loan which if not fully repaid at the maturity of the note is substantially reduced by regular periodic installments.

Loans that are regularly reduced enable a bank to accommodate patrons whose needs may be more essential. A bank must have a turn-over of money in the same way that a merchant must have a turn-over of merchandise, with this difference—bank's turn-over affects the credit facilities of the entire community.

The ability and intention to repay a loan by a planned program, and within a reasonable time, is the essence of a good loan. The giving of collateral does not repay a loan. Collateral is merely a pledge to guarantee the borrower's ability and promise to repay the loan within a reasonable time.

FUTURE OUTLOOK ON STOCK PRICES

WILL S. NORRIS, VETERAN STOCKMAN, GIVES VIEWS ON CATTLE, HOGS AND SHEEP

We are asked daily our opinion on early and Easter lambs, and what will be the price when the shipping-order buying begins, and what are the general prospects during the lamb months. We do not claim to be 100 per cent right in our prospectus; we are willing to give our best opinion, which you can accept for what it is worth to you. In regard to Easter lambs, we have never experienced such a limited demand and so few sold up to this date; early or Easter lambs are considered a luxury; the general public does not seem to have the money for luxuries, in fact, they are laying off of high-priced meats. It looks like there will be an over-supply of Easter lambs, which is liable to flood the market and bear prices down. Our best advice is to not rush your 50 to 60 pound lambs on the market; better hold them for shipping weights of 75 to 80 pounds, when there will be a better demand for shipping lambs. We think early shipping lambs will start off at around 10 cents, hope higher; much depends on the demand. We hope we will have a better demand. The low price of wool will have a tendency to hold the prices down on sheep and lambs. Our best advice to the steep and lamb producers is not to get discouraged and sacrifice your breeding ewes. If you can not get a decent price for your light ewe lambs, save them for next year's young ewes; do not sacrifice your sheep, like the cattle people did last year.

To refresh your mind with facts of last year's lamb prices we give you the following: The average price the present week one year ago, spring lambs brought $12.00 clipped lambs $7.50, but the demand was better; the average price for shipping lambs from May 21 to June 1 was $11.40; average price for the month of June, $5.55; average price for July, $8.05; average for August, $7.34; average for the three best lamb months, $8.32.

Some think lambs will sell higher this year on account of other meats being higher; make your lambs good, for good prices. We will put forth our best efforts to hold prices up and get you the best possible price. Was Art. ON THE SELLING SIDE.

Cattle are scarce and high under light receipts; it is too bad that conditions were such that forced a great many people to sell them at give-away prices last year, to raise money to pay taxes and other pressing debts; that, when government cattle killing, which has caused a shortage of cattle. The result is that the ordinary farmer is out of cattle, and out of money, with no collateral to borrow with, which proves the fact that the shortage of cattle and high prices do not help the ordinary man, as he has nothing to sell. There is no doubt but what good dry-fed finished cattle will continue to bring good prices, with extreme light receipts proving that cattle are scarce. We repeat it; high prices do not help the ordinary producer. The only remedy we see is to buy what light cattle you can and begin growing and breeding and start over.

Calves are selling high on account of light receipts of good calves. This should help the lamb market.

HOG—The same can be paid of hogs as of cattle. We hear a few say that have hogs to sell they are "well pleased with hog prices." What about their neighbors who have no hogs and the consumer who has to pay high prices for pork and lard with a limited buying power, they will be forced to quit buying high-priced meats, which will make it bad for the producer, killer and retailer. Under present conditions of the process tax and limited buying power, we can not see any permanent advance over present prices. Our best advice is to market your hogs as soon as they are finished; if you have extra corn, feed it with grass to your young hogs, sows and pigs for a profit.

Somebody has miscalculated badly! When we have to import foodstuffs from other countries to feed our hungry people, we deprive our farmers of keeping and using our money in the U. S. A.

The facts are: the more we produce, the more we have to divide; the less we produce, the less there is to divide, the greater the scarcity, the higher the price and the lower the level of living. With best wishes and SERVICE THAT SATISFIES,

NORRIS, BROCK CO. Union Stock Yards, Cincinnati.

IS INFLATION POSSIBLE?

(Frederick Kirker in The Western Star)

General Hugh S. Johnson in a recent article, states that the money policy of the administration was designed to create a mild inflation that would stimulate business. The project failed to have the full effect desired. Strangely enough the people of the United States refused to yield judgment to fear and stood pat on U. S. Currency with the result that the devaluation of the dollar had only a theoretic and not a practical effect. This was because the American people were either too smart or too dumb to know what was going on. I prefer to think that they were too smart.

There are several kinds of inflation of which money inflation is but one. Money inflation means increasing the amount of money, printed or coined, in circulation with a consequent rise in prices and values of all things that must be purchased with money. It should be noted that in historical instances it comes only in connection with wars and is the last desperate means used by a country to secure goods when credit fails. This country is not at war and the credit of the United States, as noted in the price of its bonds, is not in question. Can the credit of the country be made to appear precarious for the stimulating effect that it would have on sales of goods instead of bonds? Not unless some change is made in the real status of financial affairs.

Note these facts. With seven billions of gold bullion in the treasury of the United States to balance five billions of paper money it would be possible to pay off every dollar of paper in gold and still have two billions of gold left. Inflation is impossible with such a balance of gold in the treasury.

That amount of paper money could of course be increased if the printing presses be set running and if increased sufficiently would precipitate a period of inflation. The check here is in the fact that when the channels of trade are bank-full with money the overflow runs back into the United States treasury. This is what has happened in recent years. With all the effort of the government to force money into circulation, the amount now out is less than it was four years ago. Money that flows back into the government pool of the treasury can never cause inflation.

There is a further check to inflation in the power of the government to deflate the dollar to match the amount of gold on hand. With the sliding scale in the hands of Congress, the president, or even the people who accept the money, it is possible to figure what the paper dollar is worth in gold and set a real value on it. Inflation, in the Russian or German sense, could only come after we had sunk that gold in the bottom of the sea.

Money inflation is not probable, even if possible, in this country at present. A credit inflation is possible. This is what the government desires. An increase of private credit would help the country. Lacking that, an increase of public credit might help. That is the present program. How far this can go is an open and interesting question. If the government has authority to pledge the entire wealth of the people of this country in payment of its bonds, then the bonded indebtedness of this country can increase until it approximates the total wealth of the country before the security of that debt may be questioned. We are a long way from that. Whether a government has that prior right in the property of a country that supersedes the right of the citizen to his own, is the big political question of the future.

O. C. Rankin, a Nicholas county farmer, has been raising an average of 1,850 turkeys a year. Following the clean-chick program reduces his losses. In addition to marketing high quality table fowl, he sells day-old poults, and has orders for 2,000 a year.

Twenty-eight of the older boys and girls at Brown Mission in Clay county have organized a Utopia club. Interested in better farming, several are planning to lime and phosphate 10-acre fields for growing permanent pasture.

NEW SERIAL

BY SAX ROHMER STARTS THIS WEEK IN RECORDER

The attention of our readers is called to the fact that a new serial begins this week in the Recorder. The title of the serial is "YU'AN HEE SEE LAUGHS" by Sax Rohmer. It will be recalled that Rohmer is the author of the world-famous Fu Manchu series that ran in Collier's magazine.

In this story the perilous world of oriental crime is laid bare by Sax Rohmer as only he can do it. YU'AN HEE SEE LAUGHS is a story in which the heroic love of a boy and girl is tested to the utmost. Not since the sinister Dr. Fu Manchu himself has there been a more fascinating villain than Yu'an HEE SEE, who moves like a dark cloud of evil through this story of mystery and adventure. With its sustained action, new thrills and suspense in every chapter this story should be read by all the Recorder's subscribers who like a thrilling type of story. It is a serial seething with action. It is a tale of modern piracy, of the dread dagger, of the deadly bath or feathers, of a romantic adventure more breath taking than can be imagined. Read it as it appears in this paper beginning with this issue.

ed by Rev. Howard Laughner, pastor of Park Hills Lutheran church. Monday night, May 6, Eighth Grade Commencement. Class night, Friday night, May 10. Commencement on Saturday night, May 11 at which time Supt. James H. Richmond will deliver the class address. The graduates of the Florence High School are as follows: Sidney Paul Taylor, Edward Lewis Tullis, Gregory Reeser, John Oliver Richards, Forrest Ferguson, Florence Margaret Grayson, Virginia C. Scott, Myrtle Elizabeth Markesberry, Collins Scott, Frances Lee Sebree.

Hamilton High School
Class play on Friday night, May 3. Baccalaureate Sermon May 5 in the School Auditorium. The sermon will be preached by Rev. Roy Johnson. Commencement Program will be rendered Tuesday night, May 7 with Dr. J. N. Ervin as the commencement speaker. The graduates of the Hamilton High School are listed as follows: William Otho Hubbard, Donald Lawrence Perry, Dora Mae Delph.

Supt. D. H. Norris wishes to announce that all pupils who are entitled to promotion certificate from the Eighth Grade to High School will receive same at the High School commencements of their respective schools.

TEACHERS' ACT

HELD INVALID—BACK PAY IS RULED VOID

Frankfort, Ky.—An act of the special 1934 general assembly appropriating approximately $500,000 to public school teachers in forty-three counties and two graded school districts was held invalid by Judge C. Jones in Franklin circuit court.

Judge Jones' decision was given in the suit of the Kentucky county board of education to compel state Auditor J. Dan Talbott to pay Ca. county teachers their portion of the legislative appropriation. The court sustained a demurrer to the petition filed by Assistant Attorney General William R. Atkinson, representing Talbott. Judge Jones held that the legislature acted beyond its authority in passing the act in view of a previous decision of the court of appeals declaring invalid the teachers' equalization fund act of 1930. The constitution, he ruled, provides that such funds must be distributed on a pro rata basis.

The money appropriated by the legislature was due to teachers for salaries and wages for 1931-1932 unpaid when the equalization fund act was declared invalid.

The legislature ordered it appropriated as to include the following counties: Anderson, 708; Bell, $25,217; Breathitt, $29,978; Casey, $26,100; Clay, $38,276; Jackson, $21,194; Knox, $29,403; Laurel, $22,625; Morgan, $24,532; Powell, $7,815; Pulaski, $4,512; Rockcastle, $12,138; Rowan, 055; Whitley, $24,352; Wolfe, $14,257.

Suit to compel Talbott to pay the Bell county appropriation was filed last December and is pending in circuit court here.

ABDUCTION

CHARGE PLACED AGAINST LEONARD GRIFFIN

Leonard Griffin, 26 years of age, was arrested and placed in jail on an abduction charge. It is alleged that he abducted Helen Joyce Denier, 14 years of age, from the home of George Denier of near Burlington. Griffin is the son of John Griffin, who was recently tried and acquitted in the local courts on a charge of murder. Griffin has been employed on the Denier farm as a hired hand.

It is reported that Griffin and the young Denier girl left the Denier home about eleven o'clock at night and walked to the Aurora Ferry. They were picked up there by Griffin's brother and driven to the home of Griffin's mother at Milan, Indiana. Here the couple were apprehended and brought to Burlington by George Denier on following day.

Griffin was given an examining trial before Acting County Judge J. M. Lassing and bound over to the grand jury. He was placed under a bond of $2,000 which he has not been able to give to date. As a result he is being held in the county jail while awaiting the time of his trial.

Northern Kentucky Rural Letter Carriers will hold their annual meeting in the Y. M. C. A. Building in Covington Saturday night, May 4th. The postoffice force here are planning to attend.

FINAL PLANS

FOR COMMENCEMENT WEEK MADE BY THE FLORENCE HIGH SCHOOL

The senior class of the Florence High School will give their class play on Friday night, May 3. The title of the play is "Dotty and Daffy." There are twelve characters in the play, six boys and six girls, and from all appearances this is one of the best plays that has ever been given. It is a comedy, and if you want to laugh, just come and see "Dotty and Daffy." Tickets are being printed and will be on sale at Martin's store. Price of admission will be 15 and 20 cents.

On Sunday night May 5 the public is invited to the Baccalaureate sermon. The services will be held in the High School Auditorium. The sermon will be delivered by Rev. Howard Laughner pastor of the Park Hills Lutheran church.

On Monday night May 6 will occur the eighth grade graduation exercises. Professor H. H. Mills principal of Holmes High School will deliver the main address. Coach Alphin will present the class to Supt. Norris who will award the diploma. On Friday night May 10 will be class night. Then on May 11 the class of 35 will receive their diplomas. The Hon. James H. Richmond, State Supt., of schools, will deliver the commencement address. Mr. Richmond is an eloquent speaker, and your time will be well spent in coming to hear this address. Miss Dorothy McHenry and Mr. Alphin will be in charge of the music for commencement week. Play Friday night.

FLORENCE M. E. CHURCH

The Missionary Auxiliary of the Florence M. E. church met at the church, April 24, at 2 p. m. The society opened with Mrs. Moss as acting president. The society first sang a hymn after which a prayer was offered by Mrs. Mary Carpenter.

There followed the usual business session. Then a program was given by Betty Carpenter and Mrs. Sawyer. The scripture reading was on the subject of lifting after which the society was dismissed with prayer by Mrs. Stephens. The next meeting will be announced later.

PAY INCREASES

ARE APPROVED BY KENTUCKY HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT

An increase of $2.50, or 10.2 percent in the monthly payroll of the state highway department's central office at Frankfort has been approved by the highway commission, effective May 17. The commission also approved establishment of 9 positions.

The increase makes the central office payroll amount to approximately $1,675 a month, compared with the present monthly payroll of $25,105.

At the same time, the commission approved increases of five cents an hour for common and classed laborers, and reduced working hours of such employees from 10 to 8, except in emergencies.

Common laborers will be paid 30 cents an hour under the new scale, while classified laborers will receive 35 cents an hour. With the reduction in working hours, however, the net pay of the laborers will be slightly less than heretofore.

One hundred and two of the 167 employees in the central office received pay raises, which one was reduced.

The many friends of Mr. Earl Cropper, son of Mrs. Lorena Cropper, of Burlington, will be surprised to learn of his marriage to Mrs. Lula King Bancroft, of Memphis, Tenn.

The wedding took place at the First Methodist church in Madisonville, Ky., on Saturday, April 27, 1935.

The bride is a popular and attractive lady of Memphis, Tenn., while the groom has for many years been a highly successful salesman for the John H. Hibben Dry Goods Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio. Mr. Cropper has a host of friends in Boone county who join the Recorder in extending to him and his bride best wishes for a long and happy life.

MR. AND MRS. W. L. KIRKPATRICK ENTERTAIN

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Kirkpatrick entertained last Sunday in honor of Rev. and Mrs. T. P. Middleton of Albany, Mo. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Snyder, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Beemon, Mrs. L. C. Weaver, Albert Wm. Weaver, Misses Laura, Etie and Myrtle Beemon, Mrs. Ruth Aylor, Mrs. Ora Ross, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Walton and Mr. and Mrs. A. Kirkpatrick.

GARDEN

PROGRAM OF K. E. R. A. SHOWS MARKED ADVANCEMENT. 108,000 SUBSTANCE GARDENS PLANNED

Louisville, Ky., May 1.—Recent fair weather prevailing throughout Kentucky has given marked impetus to the garden program of the Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration. Most of the 108,000 substance gardens planned by the Administration now have been planted and are under cultivation.

In addition to the 108,000 relief gardens the Administration has contracted for approximately 3,000 acres of land in various sections of the State which will be planted to vegetables for canning purposes. Work of plowing this ground has been under way for a week past.

Relief clients who raise subsistence gardens have been allocated sufficient seed and ground to raise vegetables to supply the needs of a family of five including such products as are to be canned and dried for winter use. Vegetables raised on the 3,000 acres will be canned by the Administration with the use of relief labor and distributed next winter to the needy in cosmopolitan areas to whom no ground was available for raising a garden.

In 1934 the value of the relief garden program of Kentucky approximated four million dollars. In 1935, according to Dr. E. E. Pittman, State Garden Director, this figure will be surpassed by at least a million dollars.

EVERETT MILLER ARRESTED

Everett Miller, nephew of Joe Miller, now in jail on a charge of chicken stealing, was arrested in connection with the same charge, at Independence, Kenton county, and brought to Burlington Sunday night. Miller was placed under bond which he was unable to give and was lodged in the local jail to await his examining trial. It is alleged that he was connected with the chicken stealing which occurred some time ago in the Union neighborhood.

121 GROWERS

RECOMMENDED SPECIAL BASE CONTRACTS

One hundred and twenty-one "Special base" AAA applications for tobacco contracts covering recommendations for 1991 base acres and 145,657 pounds of base tobacco were forwarded to the State AAA Office, Monday of this week according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

The above are requests for tobacco contracts from growers who could not sign regular contracts and represents approximately 6 1/2 per cent of the total AAA tobacco acreage of the county. The special base applicants will take a 40% reduction in both acres and pounds the same as the regular contract signers.

The tobacco section is expected to adjust the base recommendations and submit their approval by the latter part of this week or the first of next week. Growers will be notified as soon as the accepted bases are returned from Washington.

BAPTIST W. M. U. AND LADIES' AID MEET WITH REV. DEMOISEY

The W. M. U. and Ladies Aid spent a most delightful day with Mrs. R. F. DeMoisey for their charming hostess on April 18. A good program led by Mrs. DeMoisey was enjoyed, and especially the excellent talk by the Rev. DeMoisey. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Stella Lutz with the Rose Marlowe circle in charge of the program.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Shinkle, of Waterloo, celebrated their Silver Wedding anniversary Sunday April 28. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Slayback, of Crescent Springs; Mr. and Mrs. Garnett Dolph and daughters, of Newtown, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Bolivar Shinkle, Jr., and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Luther Surface and family, of Petersburg; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Rogers and daughter of Bellevue; Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Shinkle and sons of McVillie; Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Clore, of Burlington; Mr. and Mrs. Boone Ryle and family of Woolper; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ryle daughter and granddaughter of Rabbit Hash; and Mr. and Mrs. Bolivar Shinkle, Sr., of Waterloo. All had a very enjoyable day.

James Pettit and son Shelby, of Limaburg, were mingling with the crowd in town Saturday afternoon.

THE WILLIAMS PUBLIC SALE A GREAT SUCCESS

The public sale of J. W. Williams at Union on Saturday afternoon under the management of John Delahunty was quite a success. Col. Lute Bradford was at his best. Eleven cows averaged $44.80 per head, one horse brought $1.75 and one sow and nine pigs $45.00. The sale was put over in three hours and one half with everything moved off the grounds. Of the whole amount of $997.20, every dollar was paid with the exception of 10 cents.

PROTECT

YOUR CHILDREN SAYS DR. A. T. MCCORMACK, STATE HEALTH COMMISSIONER

Last year 358 children in Kentucky died of diphtheria. Hundreds of others, who recovered from the disease, sustained heart and kidney damages, one or both, which will rob them of many of the joys of childhood and impair their usefulness, to greater or less degree, throughout life.

All of this waste of innocent lives could have been prevented. All of this damage to health could have been avoided. Ignorance or sheer neglect was alone responsible for the deaths of the hundreds who died and for the physical handicaps with which the other hundreds will be burdened to the end of their days.

No child need today have, much less die, of diphtheria. Modern science has provided a safe preventive, modern medical practice has conclusively demonstrated its effectiveness.

This preventive has been known and in practical use for a number of years. Because of it, many thousands of babies, who would otherwise have fallen victims to the most dreaded disease of childhood, are living today. Because of it, still greater thousands, who would otherwise have been cripples for life, are whole and hearty.

One simple, harmless injection of alum toxoid beneath the skin will usually make the child safe from diphtheria for life. Once in a while, some child will require a second dose to insure complete protection. Your doctor can tell you when this additional dose is needed—by later on making an easy and harmless test called the "Schick Test."

Most of the loss of life from diphtheria occurs among little children. THE DANGER IS WORSE AMONG THOSE BETWEEN THE AGES OF SIX MONTHS AND SIX YEARS.

There is only one way to eliminate from Kentucky the scourge of diphtheria. Just so long as there is any considerable number of unprotected children, particularly young children, in any community, have a diphtheria problem to combat. Simply because your neighbor's children are protected in not going to make your own child safe. He or she, too, must have the protective treatment. HIS OR HER PROTECTION IS UP TO YOU.

You know the danger and serious consequences of diphtheria. Concrete illustrations of this danger and these consequences are all too constantly before you. Alum toxoid is a sure, safe preventive. It has no serious after-effects. Your choice is between certain protection for your child and the constant danger from diphtheria. Which will you choose?

A A A WHEAT

REFERENDUM FOR 1935 WHEAT PROGRAM—VOTING WILL END ON MAY 25

Boone county wheat growers will be called upon May 21 to meet at Burlington and vote "Yes" or "No" on the continuation of the AAA wheat program for 1935. All ballots must be cast by May 25 according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

If the farmers of the United States vote for the continuation of the program, a new contract will be prepared to cover the years of 1936, 1937, 1938 and 1939. Certain changes in the export-trade of wheat the past few years combined with the outlook for export trade in the future makes some type of production control program highly desirable for wheat growers in a parity or fair exchange price for wheat is to be secured.

There are seventeen farmers in Boone county with 270 base acres that have signed AAA wheat contracts with expire with this year's crop. Both contract signers and non-contract signers are eligible to vote on the referendum.

LIME PROGRAM

BACKED BY BOONE COUNTY FARMERS—MEETING HELD AT BURLINGTON ON TUESDAY NIGHT

Forty Boone county farmers who have been leaders in Boone county soil improvement problems met at Burlington last Tuesday night, April 23 and decided that the Kentucky Rural Rehabilitation Lime Program as outlined should be adopted and put in force immediately in Boone county.

The K. R. R. C. lime program proposes agricultural crushed limestone for farmers at the cost of 75 cents per ton. Relief labor will be supplied to pile the stone on the farm and other labor involved in crushing. This represents in most cases a considerable saving to farmer in that the average cost where ground limestone is purchased is from $2.50 to $3.50 per ton laid down on the farm.

Farmers present at the meeting reported during the past 20 years they had used several thousand tons of limestone and in their opinion the use of ground limestone to grow grass and legume crops is the greatest improvement project needed. Every farm in the county can profitably use from 25 to several hundred tons of ground stone.

The following committeemen were appointed to secure orders for crushing stone and report back at the next meeting to be held at Burlington, May 10 at 7:30 p. m.

Burlington—Joel Gray, Frank H. Rouse, Judge J. M. Lassing.

Hebron—Harold Crigler, Hubert Conner, Robert Harp.

Petersburg—J. H. Huey, O. W. Rector, Leland Snyder.

Grant—W. G. Kite, Will Arnold, Lillard Scott.

Hamilton—August Trapp, L. M. Moore.

Beaver—O. W. Cisek.

Union—Dr. O. E. Senour.

Florence—C. L. Lanning, O. R. Russ, N. A. Zimmerman.

Walton—B. W. Franks, J. C. Bedinger, John L. Vest.

Verona—Elmer Elston.

Constance—C. L. Hempling, Sterling Rouse, Clint Riddell.

Bullittsville—E. J. Aylor, Clint Riddell, Eli Williams.

Rabbit Hash—B. C. Kirtley, Hugh Stephens.

All farmers who are interested in having stone crushed should list with their committeemen immediately the number of tons of stone they would like to have crushed.

Six thousand tons should be signed for before the project is started. The immediate listing with your committeemen or at the County Agent's Office in Burlington will greatly aid in getting the project started.

SENDS REPRESENTATIVES TO STATE CONVENTION HELD AT OWENSBORO

The Florence Parents Teachers Association sent Mrs. Arthur Holden, newly elected president of the above organization, and Mrs. Louis Sullivan retiring president to the state convention held at Owensboro, Ky., last week. Mrs. Holden and Mrs. Sullivan made a report on the convention last Thursday night, and in their reports mentioned many things that the Florence Parent Teachers association could do to improve existing conditions, especially along the line of securing new members, and having a type of program that will cause members to attend the meetings. We are sure that many more constructive ideas were acquired by these two delegates, and when put into action are going to improve, and make the Florence Parent Teachers more progressive.

We are very proud of the record this organization has made and what it has meant to the school. New stage furniture and a set of World Books were purchased last week through the P. T. A.

Installation of the newly elected officers will be held on May 16. It is very necessary for all members to attend as this will be the last meeting of the year. Plans for next year's program were made at this meeting so that some of the committees may be appointed and begin work before school opens next fall. The P. T. A. wishes to thank all who have cooperated and given their support to the organization, and solicits your help next year in the continuation of this valuable service.

Mrs. Ida Balsly returned to her home in Burlington Saturday afternoon after a few weeks' visit at the home of Dr. Nunneley and wife near Bullittsville.

WHY PLANT A GARDEN!

Those good citizens among us who will hopefully undertake to make two vegetables grow where one blade of grass grew in the garden are optimistic souls, or experience of most garden fans we know have been signally unsuccessful.

Some years ago a friend of ours decided to grow fresh vegetables in the old back yard. He prepared the soil and purchased such utensils as seemed necessary after conference with reputedly successful gardeners. In tilling he strained his back muscles with labor and his eyesight looking for the first tiny shoots to stick up their heads.

In the end, the best he could figure, his beans cost in excess of four cents each, his corn about a quarter an ear and other products in proportion. It would take about $2.50 worth of his vegetables, figured on a cost basis, to make a soup for two servings. As a money making venture the family vegetables were dismal failures, but there's the main point:

In spite of the facts suggested above, everyone should have a backyard garden. If you are a good gardener you will save money and if you are a poor gardener you will learn a lot about nature and get some exercise that you probably need. If you are a man with a family you can interest the youngsters very much and this is part of their education, to know nature and her ways and there is no better place than in their own yard under the direction of their dad.

UNEMPLOYED YOUTH

Perhaps the most serious depression problem is finding something for young men and women to do when they come out of school. It is not a problem peculiar to the United States. It is found all over the world. Of the 2 million unemployed in the world, upwards to seven million are less than twenty-five years old. The figures are from a recent report issued by the international labor office in Geneva.

Next June the international labor conference will study juvenile unemployment, and in preparation the labor office is gathering information concerning the various methods the nations are using to deal with the problem. But aside from the hope of being able to stimulate private enterprise, there appear but two. One is to keep youth in school longer, which merely defers the problem. The other is provision of labor camps for young men unable to find other employment, a strictly emergency measure.

Task of enabling youth to prepare for and assume responsibility of maturity has to do with the safety and civilization. It challenges the best thoughts of all peoples.

HOGS—AT HOME AND AT LARGE

We've said it a hundred times and we'll say it again: Don't overtake and pass an automobile while rounding a blind curve or topping a hill for the simple reason that you might meet another automobile and then you and the innocent driver will be in a bad fix.

And why endanger your own life and the lives of other people who are riding with you by emerging from a side road without stopping to see if another automobile is whizzing down the highway?

Moreover, is it good manners, to say nothing of good sense, to meet another car at night without dimming your lights?

Many a wreck has been caused by persons riding at night in wagons and buggies without a warning light fastened to the vehicle. It would seem that reasonable amount of sense, to say nothing of for self-preservation, would impel people to give warning, but such is not the case.

...man who drives an automobile while drunk belongs in jail both for his own safety and the safety of others. And it is likely that drunken drivers presently will be jailed.

Many men and women have perfect manners at home and in the homes of others, out on a steering wheel they are roughest, boorish and plain asses. The pitiable part is that bad manners in a home do no physical damage, but

National Capital

By CARTER FIELD

Washington.—Grade crossing elimination is one phase of work relief that can be started 15 days after the President says "Go!" despite Mr. Roosevelt's own recent warning that this was one type of project that would be the slowest in getting under way. The only reason for the 15-day delay is that this length of time is required for advertisement for bids.

Despite the President's expressed concern about delay on grade crossings incidental to the acquiring of the land, approval of the projects, and selection of only important highways crossing mainline railroads, the fact is that all difficulties have been solved by the public roads bureau of the Department of Agriculture. Slightly more than one thousand projects are ready for bids, 756 more will be ready inside a year, and 2,302 additional will be ready within two years.

So officials of the bureau are clamping at the bit, and wondering why the President takes such a pessimistic attitude.

The President's point about acquiring the land is not involved, for in the first thousand projects, now ready, options on the land needed have been acquired by the states in which the projects are located, and the states understand thoroughly that the state treasuries must pay for the land, with the federal government paying for the work, materials and overhead.

The total number of projects for the first year is 1,756, for over a thousand of which the land options are in hand. The total cost would be $184,314,000. The total number of additional projects to be ready within a year is 2,302, at a total cost of $277,567,500. So that within a year work could be started on a total of 4,058 projects, at a total estimated cost of $461,881,500.

In addition there is much other projected work which is ready to go just waiting for White House approval now that the work relief bill is a law.

The bureau of roads is also ready to start at the flash from the White House on road contracts. These are parceled out on the time-honored formula laid down by law, as between the states, so the figures are not so interesting.

Takes to Mining

The government is about to engage in the mining business! It was certainly got in for some other minerals. Outside the precious metals, the government proposes to mine only metals which would not complicate the existing mining situation, or compete with products already in the surplus class. For example, there would be no mining of copper, lead or zinc.

Most important of the metals under consideration, besides gold and silver, are tin, quicksilver, chromium, nickel, tungsten, antimony, and manganese. Incidentally, there is plenty of political dynamite in the last, perhaps enough to eliminate it. Not directly but indirectly. The idea is if manganese mining were developed on a big scale in this country, there might be a move later on to put a sharp tariff on it, whereupon the steel companies would have to pay higher prices than at present, which in turn would make their competition with Belgian steel—its cost lowered in the United States by the recently approved reciprocal trade treaty—more difficult.

In addition to these metals, two other minerals are under consideration. These are special grades of mica and graphite.

There is a bill pending in the senate, introduced by Senator James P. Pope of Idaho, which would allocate a hundred million dollars from the work relief fund for mining. This bill is not expected to pass. But while this is down the same street, the bill is not necessary if the administration wants to act. It has plenty of authority under existing law. The projects could be gotten under way as pure work relief on force account, as operations not arranged by contracts are called.

Experts Approve

The gold and silver mining, decision to enter which has practically been made, are almost ideal from the government standpoint. The experts advising President Roosevelt insist there is no doubt whatever that mines could be worked by the government—for gold and silver—which would produce enough not only to pay the wages of the men employed, and the total cost of operation, but actually to yield a small profit besides. And the beauty of the plan, they point out, is that there would be no element whatever of competition with private business. The government would just take the gold and silver and put it in the treasury. If there were no profit at all, no harm would be done. If there were a profit it would be turned back to the work relief fund for employment in other directions.

Some of the other metals mentioned, especially tin and nickel, are regarded as vital from a national defense standpoint. This country is deficient in them. Mining experts are most anxious to undertake development in this direction.

The main problem of course is that there is a very large stranded mining population, located for the most part near at hand to the points proposed for these government operations. The men are skilled miners, so that no training would be necessary. They would be far happier, carrying on their accustomed work. It is argued, than in working on grade crossings or on public roads, for example. Anyway, there is not a lack, but a surplus, of men needing jobs who could be put to work on grade crossings and roads.

So far the mine experts insist projects are in as good shape as any for putting men to work immediately. All that would be needed would be the Presidential O. K. And they expect that very shortly.

Cotton a Problem

With the AAA under fire from so many quarters, King Cotton remains one of the most important world problems, threatening to save or wreck the administration's plans to lift the farmer up to that "parity" of purchasing power which President Roosevelt is so fond of discussing.

Most southern statesmen have aside so-called threats to American supremacy in cotton. They contend that nowhere else in the world can cotton be produced successfully to compete with the United States. Either the cost is too high per pound, or the quality is too low, they insist.

The threat involved in Brazilian expansion in cotton growing has been discussed at length in these dispatches, including the confidential view of the present Brazilian administration which is that the United States efforts to hold the price of cotton up will crash, as did their own with respect to coffee, and therefore they are not too optimistic. But they hasten on to add that they can produce good cotton at a profit at 6 cents a pound.

This season the United States exported to Great Britain 563,000 bales, as against 1,038,000 last season, and 1,045,000 the season before.

This is partly explained by two things. Japan has finally passed Great Britain as a producer of cotton textiles, and so has become the chief consumer of the raw staple.

But the disturbing fact about the two previous paragraphs is that the United States exported to the entire Orient this season 1,348,000 bales, as against 1,689,000 last season and 1,598,000 the season before.

In fact, the total exports of cotton this season from the United States were 3,555,000 bales, as against 6,033,000 bales last season, and 6,046,000 bales the previous season.

Not an encouraging picture!

Disturbing Facts

Two seasons ago the United States produced 12,961,000 bales of cotton. Last season 12,712,000 bales. This season 9,619,000 bales. AAA restrictions.

What happened meanwhile in the rest of the world? India's record for the last three seasons was 4,100,000, 4,500,000 and 3,800,000 bales. China produced 2,200,000 this season, 2,000,000 last, and 1,571,000 two years ago.

Russia, in fourth place, is crawling up. The increase there is from 1,778,000 to 1,889,000 to 1,937,000 this season. Egypt increased more than half a million bales over two years ago.

Then comes Brazil, generally regarded as the real menace. Two years ago she produced only 373,000 bales. Last year 807,000 bales. This year 1,259,000 bales. Next season?

Peru increased in the three crops from 265,000 bales to 325,000 bales; Argentina from 150,000 to 225,000; Mexico from 95,000 to 200,000; The Sudan from 121,000 to 170,000; Korea from 135,000 to 150,000; Manchuria from 56,000 to 100,000; Belgian Congo from 38,000 to 90,000; Turkey from 60,000 to 90,000, and Greece from 22,000 to 50,000.

The really disturbing fact comes in adding these and other foreign increases in cotton production together. America has decreased her production 3,000,000 bales in the three seasons. The rest of the world this season produced 12,489,000 bales, as against 10,946,000 two years ago.

Defenders of the AAA program insist that the world this year has used up a large quantity of surplus cotton, and that prospects for next year are therefore bright despite this increased foreign production. Meanwhile the dust storms in Texas and Oklahoma, the two biggest cotton producing states, seem to promise further curtailment this year even than had been planned, and correspondingly increased incentive to foreign cotton producers to expand, the short American crop promising a continued high price, even if there were no AAA.

Planning New Taxes

A one per cent tax on all life insurance premiums and a tax on all movie admissions above 10 cents—instead of the present limit of 40 cents—are among the levies that the treasury will recommend to congress some time before this session adjourns. Some of the treasury experts, who were ordered to the job of figuring out the new taxes, liked the idea of the sales tax. But President Roosevelt was consulted about this, and at once turned thumbs down.

One thing the treasury experts do not know—the motives for their being ordered to get up this list of taxes. They are not sure whether this is a bona fide list, which the administration will push through if possible anyhow, or whether this is a "bluff" list, intended by the President to be used as a club in his expected veto message on the soldier bonus.

The reason for their doubt is the suggestions they have received, including the two named above. Because their own thought seems to be that the taxes the administration seems to favor are calculated to stir up more resentment than would be justified by the amount of money they would raise. Especially the movie tax.

This line of reasoning drives the experts to figure that the President is merely getting up a highly objectionable line of taxes so as to get the country excited against the soldier bonus.

FORTY YEARS AGO

From the Files of The Boone County Recorder
(ISSUE OF MAY 1, 1895)

Snow ball winter has to come yet.

Rain is badly needed in some sections of the county.

The foliage on the trees came out very nicely last week.

The showers the latter part of last week gave vegetation a boom.

J. M. Barlow was in town Monday and said 15 cents for wool and $3.25 for lambs are top prices.

As soon as the Heoron boys secure a pitcher they will present a strong ball team for this season.

James L. Riley will have a sale of horses at Ludlow Lagoon on May 4. He will offer some extra roadsters that day.

Most of the farmers in this county will finish planting corn this week, if the weather remains favorable for that work.

J. F. Blythe made a good catch of fish on Gunpowder last Wednesday afternoon, notwithstanding the sign was not right for that class of sport.

L. A. Tanner had a fine Alderney cow with milk fever. He called in Dr. Jacob Tanner, of Heoron, who cured her with new discovery.

This and other neighborhoods were visited by a nice rain the latter part of last week, out in the greater number of neighborhoods in the county no rain of any consequence fell.

W. C. Brown is getting his livery stable nicely equipped, the last addition to his outfit being a handsome double seated conveyance to be used with one or two horses, nice harness and comfortable vehicles.

J. C. Revill is in the city.

T. L. Swetnam, of Florence, was in town Monday.

B. F. Jarrell, of Petersburg, was in town last Thursday.

Eleven Covington whe... took dinner at Mr. Cowen's last Sunday.

Dr. J. M. Grant, of Petersburg, was in town last Wednesday afternoon.

Rev. James Kirtley made his office a pleasant call Monday morning.

Ben Cason delivered his tobacco to Riley & Hogan at Bullittsville, Monday.

J. B. Berkshire will go to Walton today to attend the Senatorial District Committee meeting.

J. O. Huey was in town Monday and reported that some of his neighbors had discovered cut worms in large numbers.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Wilson fell off a fence last Saturday and broke her arm just above the wrist.

W. E. Piper and sons, Master Virgil and Edwin came out from the city last Thursday and remained over until the next Monday.

E. M. Gaines, son of County Clerk A. S. Gaines, has a position with E. M. Bronner & Co., clothiers of 156 5th street, Cincinnati.

James Graham, who lives over in Kenton county, was down one day last week negotiating with Geo. Blythe for a pair of good mules.

Geo. F. Piper arrived from Louisville last Friday night, being called here on account of his oldest child having diphtheria. The child is about well again.

Owen Watts, a leading politician of the Bullittsville neighborhood, was in town Monday. He is an enthusiastic friend of the free coinage of silver.

Dudley Rouse spent several days last week at Hanover, Ind., where his son Arthur has been attending school. Arthur was attacked with fever several weeks ago, and his father brought him home last Saturday. He is quite sick.

Judging from the amount of bloom there will be a heavy crop of all kinds of fruit, excepting peaches which there will be none at all.

A. P. Walton, dentist, will be at his office in Burlington next Friday and Saturday, and solicits your patronage.

J. J. Rucker will shortly be prepared to receive orders for building his mammoth stone room and coal elevator and coal and lumber yards at Constance. He is now getting up the specifications.

Utzing

John and Roswell Walton were visiting his parents last week.

There will be a large crop of apples and pears.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

THERE is one social error that all of us can avoid, and that is arriving at a house before the time set in an invitation. It is preferable to be a few moments late than a few moments early. Few things are more distracting to a hostess than to see in the hurry of last moment preparations, and be caught not quite ready to greet a guest arriving before time. There are hostesses who have the happy habit of being ready in advance of the hour when visitors should come. But for every one of these, there are hundreds of other hostesses who are ready on time but not before, and cores of others who have to scramble to be fully ready on the minute.

What is essential for the one entertaining to be ready to greet her friends is the appointed time, knowing the food of the entertainment, the readiness, also. She should plan to have at least fifteen minutes to spare before arrivals begin. Unless she does this there will not be opportunity for the last minute extras which are sure to crop up. A hostess who is flustered when she welcomes her guests can not be at ease, and this tends to make her friends a trifle embarrassed. Neither of these things gives a good start to the occasion.

An Unhappy Start.

It is the early guest who so often upsets plans. The unexpected, and really unwarranted, appearance of the too early guest is bad enough when there are servants to admit the person, and assist in taking off wraps, but when the hostess has to do everything, which so often is the case, it is difficult for her to welcome the early arrival with the cordiality she wants to express. She must not give the impression of realizing her friend has come too soon, and this means she must not appear to have things wait for her to do.

Such a situation is awkward. It need not happen if we give a little thought to it. For example, if we find it took less time to get to the house than we had expected, we can walk around the block, or wait in some store, if there is one near enough. We must save our hostess from embarrassment by some method, and allow her the opportunity for readiness. We can arrive on the dot of time set, and feel no qualms if the hostess is not ready to receive us. It is for her to be ready then, and it is correct for us to arrive then—but not before. Most hostesses, however hurried during the final moments, are ready on time to welcome punctual guests with gracious hospitality.

Good Humor at Party.

Now that the season for entertainment is in full swing, it is well to consider how to keep what the Europeans call the humor of the occasion good. That is, how to keep everyone in a gay, happy, and contented spirit. This is essential if a party is to be a success. An idea which helps decidedly toward this end is to have conversational subjects either of common interest to all, or so surprising that interest is created. This is particularly true when persons who are gathered together meet for the first time, or so seldom that they are entirely or partially strangers. Such an assembly occurs at club luncheons, church socials and suppers, strange meetings, etc.

Cards with controversial questions or subjects can be passed around, and different groups be given different topics. Or partners can be chosen by matching numbers, or in any of the hundreds of ways that there are, and each couple be given a conversational card. If persons are strangers this forms a basis for getting acquainted.

Painting Brick

Well-aged brick, stucco and concrete require no different paint from other exterior work. If these surfaces are not well-aged, however, they should be given special primers which usually contain tung oil varnishes. Any high quality house paint may then be used for the finishing coats. Or, if preferred, special stucco or brick coatings may be used. Ordinary brick, concrete and stucco are unusually porous. This porosity is an advantage from a painter's point of view because it allows the paint to penetrate deeply and thus secure a firm anchorage.

Mantel Pieces

Just now there is a tendency to have very narrow mantels or to do away with the shelf altogether. Before changing the style of your chimney treatment, be very sure the new style will be an improvement over the present one. If you have a very ornate wooden mantelpiece with center mirror and side shelves with columns, it is not in vogue. It can be simplified, however, to bring it up-to-date without too drastic measures.

CHAPTER I

"Good-by, then, Eileen. And take great care of yourself. I've probably missed the train and everything—but I don't give a hoot. Be sure to write from Marseilles and cable when you get in. And don't forget I'm coming out in March."

The girl clung desperately to her brother, her soft arms locked about him. Matt Kearney could feel that she was trembling, and:

"What's the matter with Kid Sister?" he asked, squeezing her. "Kid Sister's miserable!"

"Because you don't want to go back?"

"No. But because somehow, Matt dear," she whispered very close to his ear, "I feel frightened about this journey. Don't be mad with me. I know it's silly, and I ought to be used to traveling by now. But I've got a wobbly, funny feeling."

Kearney looked down at the tangled curls nestling upon his shoulder; and in the light shining out from the cozy stateroom they gleamed and shimmered like burnished bronze. He hugged her affectionately and told himself that a chill suddenly experienced and resembling cold water trickling down his spine was due physically to the clammy quality of the night, and mentally to the girl's over-wrought condition.

But he was used to Eileen's moods, to the odd streak of superstition—a legacy from their Irish-American father—which sometimes he distrusted but always understood.

"Kid, dear," he said, and stroked her hair, "play fair. Seeling little girls off is bad enough anyway, without giving a fellow the breeze up."

"I'm sorry, Matt. It was utterly Big Pig of me."

She glanced up; and her blue-gray eyes were calm, except that he had a fleeting, odd impression that something—a shadow—had been banished at that very moment from them.

"No—only Little Pig," he said playfully. "I only wish I were coming with you."

"It wasn't fair, and I shouldn't have said it. It's just this beastly fog and having to let you go ashore in it. Give me a kiss, Matt, and we'll go and hunt Jack Rattray—although I really don't know how you're going to get home."

Wisps of mist floated under the lights. Not another soul was in sight on that deck, but there was activity on the deck below, and a tremendous clamor on the dockside. The R. M. S. Wallaroo was going out in the morning—sixteen hours late, thanks to one of those fogs, London Special, which sometimes hold up Thames traffic for whole days. All the other passengers seemed to have retired, with the possible exception of a few stragglers who might have been found in the smokeroom.

One last lingering glance Kearney cast into the cozy stateroom which Eileen was to occupy to Colombo. He would cheerfully have resigned six months' pay to be going, too. The wardrobe trunk, which he had labelled himself, a green hat on the rack above the bed, a camera hung on the back of a chair, a dressing case open on the table. The box of a hundred cigarettes which Dawson Haig had brought down to the steamer that morning lay on the turned-back coverlet, and a pile of magazines on top of an unopened cabin trunk; three novels which Matt had brought for Eileen in the rack beside the green hat.

"Ah, well!" he sighed, "you'll be a comfortable Little Pig. Winter, the purser, is a star turn. You're at his table, and he'll see that everything's right. Jack Rattray is an old pal, so that you won't lack company."

"I shan't lack company," said Eileen archly.

Her mood changed, and she smiled mischievously. But Kearney welcomed the change, and:

"You little devil!" he said, and squeezed her hard. "Don't forget there's a spy aboard!"

"I might hit him over!" said Eileen. "I'll tell Billy Haig!"

"Oh, don't, please do that!" Eileen exclaimed in mock horror. "He might never run out to Colombo to have a cup of tea with me as he promised!" But really her heart was very sad. Because she didn't expect ever to see Dawson Haig again.

She made a charming figure in the light streaming from the cabin door, simply dressed though she was in a jumper and tweed skirt. And Matt Kearney felt affectionately proud of his dainty sister.

"Come on," said he. "Let's go and dig old Rattray out. I must positively beg it. I've got at least a quarter of an hour's walk through dockland, and falling divine luck, a long voyage by motor bus."

Jack Rattray, chief officer of the Wallaroo, was exchanging a few pleasant words with the boss stewardess by the hatch of Number Three hold. But he broke off this not too parliamentary debate when the charming passenger appeared beside him with Kearney.

"What about a final?" asked Rattray.

"No final for me," Kearney replied. He grasped Rattray's hand. "Good-night, and all the best. I know you'll look after her."

Rattray, tall, leisurely, taciturn, smiled his slow smile.

"Sure thing, Bo!" said he.

"You're mocking me!" Eileen cried, and punched the speaker forcibly in the ribs. "I don't have an accent like that. I speak better English than you do, anyway!"

"You speak more English," Rattray drawled provocatively.

"Very Big Pig," said Eileen.

But Kearney left the ship in a happier mood and experienced no return of that unpleasant chill. Eileen was in good company, and the voyage would pass like three days.

"Thank you, sir," said the man on the gangway, as he slipped half-a-crown into his hand. "Good-night."

"Good-night," Kearney called.

He picked his way through litter on the dockside. Just under an arc he paused, turned, and looked back. Jack Rattray and Eileen were standing on the deck by the gangway. He waved his hat and shouted:

"Good-by until March, and good luck!"

"Good-by, Matt," came the girl's voice; and:

"Cherri-ho, old boy."

That was Rattray.

The fascinating activity of those docks claimed Kearney. Here East meets West: produce of the Spice Islands, tea of Ceylon, the timbers of Burma, jostle ironmongery from Birmingham, like check by jewel with chemical products of Silvertown. At night, especially, under dockland floodlights, amid river noises and the hoarse voices of workers, the mystery of the port of London, type of a vast and ever turning wheel of empire, touched the poetry which was part of him. At times he thought of it as a strange, grand song; which he imperfectly understood, which he knew that even Kipling had failed to give its true color; which must elude the highest genius, because, although it was the work of man, it transcended man, being a god which man had created but no longer controlled.

He gave up his card to the policeman on duty, and ten paces beyond, looking back, could see merely a dim blur, marking the site of the box which that official occupied.

"If this d—n fog continues," he reflected, "my prospects are indifferent." He stood there for a moment looking about him and failing to notice a man who, ten paces away, seemed to be watching the dock gates—a tallish man wearing a white raincoat, collar turned up, and a soft brown hat with the brim pulled down. But the other man had seen Kearney—and the sight of Kearney had set him dreaming. Colombo a year before. A year! It seemed only like a week! The mist dispersed before the eyes of the dreamer by the gates. He saw Mount Lavinia hotel, and a petite, slender girl in a blue frock crossing the deserted mahogany dance floor. She had been a sort of revelation, opening his eyes to all that had been lacking.

Had Some One Passed Him—Or Had He Imagined It?

He was among the stars again, could see the twinkling lighthouse cautiously stabbing the tropical night, hear the plaintive tremolo of a Tamil love chant floating up from the village. From these haunting memories he was abruptly jerked back to reality. He withdrew into shadow.

A man was coming out of the gate—so muffled up in a heavy fur-collared coat that his features were indistinguishable. This man turned sharply left, passed Kearney, and was swallowed up in the fog.

And as he vanished, something—an instinct perhaps; or was it a faint odor suggestive of musk—suddenly brought Kearney an unaccountable return of that sensation as though cold water trickled down his spine. He stared into the fog. Had someone passed him—or had he imagined it?

He hated this sensation—as of an indefinite dread—which twice, now, had oppressed him.

Kearney rested on his shoulder. A hansom twisted about with a cry. The man in the white raincoat stood just behind him. And, stock still, peering into the other's face:

"Good Lord!" Kearney exclaimed joyfully, "it's Dawson Haig!"

Eileen watched from the rail until fog hanging over the dockside swallowed up Matt's figure. She turned and look at Jack Rattray. Seeing her expression:

"Whatever's the matter, Eileen?" said he.

"Oh, I don't know, Jack!" she replied. She was angry with herself. "I'm having like a perfect little idiot to-night. And if you ask me why, I can't tell you. It's just Jim-Jams. Except that I think it began with a horrible looking man wearing a fur-collared overcoat!"

"Oh!" said Rattray, conscious that duty called him but held against his will by the girl's unaccountable mood. "When did you see this furry bird? And was it his collar or his overcoat you didn't like?"

"His face!" he looked into the open door of my stateroom while Matt was up in your cabin. I saw his reflection in my hand mirror. When I turned, he wasn't there."

"Do you mean he was actually in the room—fur collar and all?"

"No—foolish idiot! He was standing just in the doorway, and he was smiling . . . the most horrible smile imaginable."

"An Englishman?"

"Oh, no, he wasn't! A Chinaman."

"A Chinaman! In a fur coat! No wonder you were shaken up!"

"There was a queer musky smell, too—"

"Have you seen him since?"

"Yes. I saw him afterwards on the dockside, looking up at me."

"I think that settles it," said Jack Rattray reassuringly. "There was a bunch of stuff shipped by a Chinese agency down Limehouse way for a firm in Sydney. Some d—n silly mistake. They're hauling it out now—a h—l of a job—from Number Three hold. This oriental bird was probably the half-wit responsible. It's given me more trouble than the specie."

"The specie?"

"Yes. We're a Spanish galleon this trip, Eileen!" Rattray smiled his slow smile. "Minted gold from the Bank of England, consigned to the Commonwealth Bank of Australia. Look! It's just coming aboard. Two millions!"

Open lorries were driven onto the dock. Eileen, looking down, could see, as tarpaulin covers were hauled off, that they were laden with small square boxes.

"How feeble!" she exclaimed. "Where's the regiment of guards with fixed bayonets?"

"Not here, my child. Out of date. There's a police car full of 'tees outside, though! Well, I must slip off now. They've rushed this little lot aboard us at the last moment, and I've got to find a safe home for it. Take my tip. Turn in with book and, if you like, I'll have a nightcap sent along in about half an hour. Leave it to me."

"You're a Kind Pig," said Eileen, and squeezed his arm affectionately. She had known Jack Rattray for three years. He had introduced her to Dawson Haig in Colombo—only a year ago. . . .

As he went off with his slow, long strides, she turned and entered her cabin.

Looking at the books on the rack and pulling a wry face, she contemplated unpacking yet to be done. She had been on board since noon, and knew she was desperately lazy. But, then, Dawson Haig had stayed to lunch when it was announced that the ship couldn't sail—and Matt, the good angel, had ching on to the last possible minute.

"Oh, bother!" she said. She was tired but excited. Her mental condition puzzled her. This was not the first time she had traveled alone. She was used to the sea and had taken her maiden voyage at the age of twelve.

The memory of that strange lemon yellow face, glimpsed between up-raised flaps of an astrakhan collar and the pulled down brim of a soft black hat, haunted her ridiculously. Of course, the man was some Chinese shipping agent. The apparent evil of his smile might have been no more than a distorted reflection in the mirror.

She wondered if Dawson Haig would write.

Queer, that odor, like musk. It seemed to hang about. . . . Yes, she would turn in and read.

"You see, Kearney," said Detective Inspector Dawson Haig, staring up at an old print which decorated the bar, "officially, my hands are tied. It's because I've always made a point of finding the loopholes in official regulations that I've got as far as I have."

The bar was sparsely populated. Two firemen, amiably drunk, lolled in a corner. A solitary, seedy-looking drinker sat against the wall, smoking his pipe and taking sips from a tankard. A shirt-sleeved barman made up the company.

Kearney smiled at the speaker. He regarded William Dawson Haig as one of the most remarkable men in London—a man destined to win an international reputation. Haig had been at Stonyhurst with Kearney—Michael Kearney, now United States consul at Colombo, at that time having been stationed in Liverpool. Catastrophe came, just as Haig went up to Oxford. Endowed by his father with a load of debts and a posthumous V. C., he had enlisted in the Metropolitan police force.

"It seems to me," Kearney remembered him saying, "that a man must be judged by what he can do—not by the decorations his ancestors won. I couldn't live in an office, and I can't afford the army. But I'll make a first-rate copper!"

He was today the youngest detective-inspector in the criminal investigation department, with a great future assured.

Haig had laid his hat upon the counter, revealing a head of dark brown hair, cut close at the back and sides, like that of a prize fighter, but leaving a curly tuft on top. His clean-shaven pale face and dancing blue eyes also might have belonged to a potential lightweight champion.

He had pleasantly irregular features, and his smile was a grin which wrinkled up the corners of his eyes irresistibly. When Haig grinned, everybody grinned.

"Regulations weren't made for you," said Kearney, laughing. "But I'm still in the dark. You leave the Wallaroo after lunch, with dramatic farewells, and then bang me on the back at the dock gates at ten o'clock at night!"

Haig raised his tankard, contemplating it with interest, and:

"I gave you a lift as far as Limehouse," he reminded Kearney. "You ought to be thankful for that. And the beer is good."

Kearney banged the counter. The barman replenished the tankards. And, when he had retired:

"What's afoot?" Kearney asked in a low voice.

"I don't know!" was Haig's surprising answer. "I can only think there's been a bad leakage of news. Some time ago, he went on, 'a consignment of pottery was sent from China to a firm in Birmingham. This consignment, unopened, was re-consigned to a Chinese firm in Sydney, per Messrs. King, shipping agents, of Limehouse. It was put on the Wallaroo. I checked it myself, this morning.'"

"Was that how you managed to get down to see Eileen off?"

"It was," Haig acknowledged, "and I blessed the chance! Now, here's what I meant when I said my hands were tied: neither K. division nor Scotland Yard have had power to open those cases of pottery. Oh, it's too d—n silly to talk about—because I know for a fact that they are stuffed with 'gum'!"

"Opium! But why send drugs from China to Australia via Birmingham?"

"I'm glad you asked that," said Haig. "It shows you're interested! The reason is this: the China ships touching at Australian ports get a h—l of an overhauling. Stuff coming from England goes through without difficulty. Those cases are specified to contain Staffordshire pottery, now!"

"Great Scott!" said Kearney. "That's pretty clever."

"I advised a pal of mine—Freeman, of the customs at Sydney—to do what we couldn't do. What happened? The stuff was taken off at the last moment! I got news at the Yard two hours ago."

"But surely you can do something now?"

"I can!" Haig returned. He grinned again and emptied his tankard.

"Open the cases?"

"Oh, no! 'Mrs. Mogridge' who makes our snappy laws, would never allow such a thing!"

"Then what?"

"This: if I can get evidence to-night—evidence I know to be there—I'll search the premises to which the pottery has been moved. Then, I can open the cases!"

"Didn't you say the name was King?"

Haig nodded.

"Messrs. King's warehouse adjoins the establishment of Jo Lung, otherwise 'Shanghai Jo.' Jo Lung is the lad I'm after."

"Who is Jo Lung?"

"I thought," said Haig, sorrowfully regarding the speaker, "you were supposed to be an authority on Chinatown."

Kearney smiled.

"I've written it up for my paper," he confessed. (He was London correspondent of the New York Universe). "But I seem to have overlooked Jo Lung!"

"Don't wonder!" Haig admitted. "He's not an easy man to know. Apart from which, he isn't the prime mover. The Big Chief is the man who supervised the removal of these cases from the Wallaroo tonight."

"And who is the Big Chief?"

"As I'm not sure, I won't answer," Haig replied. "Let's stick to facts. . . . The two firemen, supporting each other lovingly, at this moment reeled out of the bar. As they disappeared, the door reopened to admit a customer who appeared to belong to the same trade as the firemen. A seafaring man evidently, but sober. Directly the barman having served him had retired:

"O. K., Norwich?" said Haig, addressing the new arrival.

Kearney started and stared from face to face; then:

"The lorry's back in King's yard, Inspector," the man reported—and being unloaded."

Dawson Haig nodded, and turned to the melancholy citizen. "Join up, Wickham," he directed sharply. "All clear."

The man sprang up promptly; and Haig grinned into the bewildered face of Kearney.

"My own methods," he said. "The only way to deal with an oriental criminal." Then, to Wickham: "Got the card from Bernardson?"

"Got it at nine o'clock, Inspector. And came straight here. But I'm afraid I shall have to take your place on the Jo Lung job. The Chief sent for me just as I was leaving. They've got the missing witness in the Bond street case. You're to report back at once."

"D—n!" said Dawson Haig. "Also blast! The Bond street case is a flea-bite to what I know to underlie this! Ah, well! Can you talk ill of a Chicago gunman, Wickham?" he asked.

"Afraid not, sir! Lancashire sees me out."

"What about you, Norwich?"

"I was counting on you, Inspector!"

"H—l!" said Dawson Haig; when:

"Obviously," Matt Kearney interrupted, "you're forgetting me! I don't claim to talk like a Chicago gunman, but I have, I am told, a recognizable American accent."

Haig hesitated, staring, then:

"By heaven!" said he, "my bumping into you tonight has been a double blessing! Wickham," he glanced at the latter—"you'll come back in the car with me. Norwich, c rry on—but with Mr. Kearney, here, in my place."

"And now, Kearney, listen: here's priceless 'copy' for you—thugh I don't know how you're going to get back—"

"It doesn't matter, I'll find a way."

"You'll have to gamble on a stray taxi. But this is what I want you to do. . . ."

What IS
a Sound Loan?

A sound loan for a commercial bank is a loan which the borrower believes, and the bank expects, will be paid within a reasonable time—a loan which if not fully repaid at the maturity of the note is substantially secured by regular periodic installments.

Loans that are regularly reduced enable a bank to accommodate patrons whose need may be more essential. A bank must have a turn-over of money in the same way that a merchant must have a turn-over of merchandise, with this difference—bank's turn-over affects the credit facilities of the entire community.

The ability and intention to repay a loan by a planned program, and within a reasonable time, is the essence of a good loan. The giving of collateral does not repay a loan. Collateral is merely a pledge to guarantee the borrower's ability and promise to repay the loan within a reasonable time.

MODIFICATION FOR TOBACCO CONTRACT
A modification of the AAA tobacco contract, in regard to total acreage and limitation on production for home consumption is announced through the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

The total acreage planted to crops will be in no way limited by the tobacco adjustment contract. The limitation on basic commodities is to apply only to wheat, cotton, other tobacco and peanuts this year. In other words there will be no limitation in the tobacco contract this year on corn, hogs, dairy cattle, beef cattle, rye and grain sorghums.

The limitation on wheat is for grain planted for sale. There will be no limit on the amount of wheat harvested this summer for home consumption on the farm or for use as feed for livestock on the farm. Under the tobacco contract, the sale of wheat this year will be limited to the average 1932-1933 commercial average.

Any or all of the to acco rented acres may be planted to crops for home consumption or to feed crops for livestock for home consumption. It will not be permissible to plant commercial crops on the rented acres.

FARMERS VOTE ON CONTINUATION OF WHEAT PROGRAM

Agricultural Adjustment Administration has announced that the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, that wheat growers will be asked to vote on May 25 whether they desire to have the adjustment program continued.

An outline of a proposed adjustment program for wheat for 1935 through 1939 will be put before contract signers for approval or disapproval.

This program would be similar to the one now in force. Contract signers would receive rental and benefit payments calculated upon the same base as is now being used. The rate and condition of benefit payments would be determined beginning of each marketing year, just as was done with the present program.

The Secretary of Agriculture would determine the amount of adjustment to be made each year, but it never would exceed 25 percent of the individual's base acreage.

Provision would be made for minor adjustments on individual farms to take care of crop rotation and other proved farm practices.

The local administration of the program would remain with county control associations made up of contract signers.

R. B. HUEY JOINS JERSEY BULL ASSOCIATION

The Boone County Jersey Bull Association was honored the past week with the membership of the Jersey herd of R. B. Huey and Son of Burlington, Route 1. Mr. Huey owns one of the leading Jersey production herds in the state and for years has followed a constructive program.

The present members of the Association are O. R. Russ, Robt. Houli, Ben Nichting and R. B. Huey and son. These members cooperatively own four bulls selected from the best production blood lines available. The bulls are exchanged by the members every two years. Their daughters are tested for production and for comparison in improvement over their dams. The Bull Association plan combined with the Dairy Herd Improvement Association testing program gives the best known and most reliable plan for dairy herd improvement. Greatest chances

HOME HYGIENE AND FIRST AID CLASSES THROUGHOUT KENTUCKY

Washington, D. C.—Teach the women to care for the sick in their homes through Red Cross Home Hygiene classes! Teach everybody what to do in time of accident through First Aid classes! This is the spring program of the Red Cross chapters in Kentucky, according to a statement made today by Admiral Cary T. Grayson, Chairman of the American National Red Cross. This program reaches a climax during the month of April. Seventy nurses are already authorized to teach classes in Home Hygiene and forty counties have already started the work. Eighty-eight counties have completed classes in First Aid.

Enrolled Red Cross nurses act as instructors of Home Hygiene classes. In order to give these instructors an opportunity to perfect their teaching technique the National Red Cross is sending Mrs. Charlotte Heilman, of the Red Cross Public Nursing staff, to Kentucky to give a series of one-day Institutes.

W. E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company, Detroit, has notified the Collins & Vest Company, Chevrolet dealers in Walton and Erlanger, of the appointment of a new manager for the Norwood zone.

Effective immediately, the Norwood zone, which serves Chevrolet dealers and owners in this city and its vicinity, is under the management of D. C. Corbin, who comes to this city from Omaha, where he was zone manager. Mr. Corbin succeeds F. E. Zorniger, who has been appointed assistant advertising manager of the company at Detroit.

BIRTHDAY OF A BENEFACTOR

Disease is far more deadly than dynamite and there's a lot more of it. But for some reason we pay more attention to the discoverer of dynamite than most of us will to a birthday which falls on May 15th, which is foolish, for on that day was born a man to whom the whole world should certainly doff its cap.

Sir Ronald Ross.
He is one of the world's great pioneers for science and humanity, but his discoveries were made very quietly in the hospital and laboratory. And few know that what this modest Englishman found about malaria, the mosquito, and quinine, changed half the world. The stomach of a mosquito is a pretty small place to go poking about for facts. But Ross found there a fact that everyone who lives where you do ought to know. It is this:

A mosquito which has bitten a malarial person draws into its stomach of the infected blood. In the process of digesting this blood, the mosquito's stomach separates out the malarial germs which multiply and directly infect the next person who is bitten. In other words, the mosquito's stomach is a tiny malarial factory, and the only real carrier of this dread disease.

Sir Ronald well knew that mosquito bites are pretty common and the chance of infection pretty certain. This discovery, if he had stopped there, would only explain why we are miserable, and some die from malaria. But he went much further than that. He wrote his book "The Prevention of Malaria" and said then that killing all mosquitoes would stop it, but this being impossible, the only way to control it is by regular dosing with quinine. It is still the only worldwide remedy.

REV. HAMMOCK WILL RECEIVE DEGREE

Louisville, Ky., April 30.—Rev. David Hammock, pastor of the Union and North Benson Baptist churches, is one of the seventy-three men scheduled to receive degrees at the Commencement exercises of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, April 28-30. He is applying for the Th. M. (Master in Theology) degree.

The Rev. Mr. Hammock has served the Union and North Benson Baptist churches in connection with his Seminary work. During this time the churches have gone forward under his leadership. He is remaining in Louisville this summer and will continue to serve his churches.

Mr. Hammock received the A. B. degree from the University of Richmond in 1931. He also attended Cumberland University, Lebanon, Tenn. While in college he served as pastor of a Baptist church at Washington, Va.

A THOUGHT FOR THE TAX-PAYER

Those who believe that the eventual solution of the railroad problem must be government ownership of the lines, would do well to take a look across the Canadian border.

Canada is served by two large railroad systems, each of which provides good service, operates equipment and charges the same rate for freight and passenger transport.

One system, the Canadian Pacific, is privately owned, privately financed, and privately managed, and has generally earned a reasonable profit for its investors. During bad times, when profits have been small or temporarily non-existent, the owners have had to pay their own way—they have no public treasury behind them to foot the bill for losses.

The other system, the Canadian National, is publicly owned. It was financed by a great bond issue guaranteed by the Canadian government. In all the years of its existence it has continuously created deficits to be paid out of the public's tax money. Its total deficit runs into the hundreds of millions of dollars—and is the direct cause of a substantial percentage of the total tax bill paid by the Canadian people.

There is no reason to believe that the American people would experience better fortune with government ownership of railroads. The Canadian National system has apparently been freer from political influence than is the usual government venture in this country; its managers have been men of integrity, ability and position. In the United States, the chances are that the deficit would amount to many times that of Canada, due to the political buccannery, and to the fact that much more railroad mileage would be involved.

If the people are persuaded into believing government ownership is the only way out of the vexatious railroad issue, heaven help the taxpayer!

PIONEERING DE LUXE

Who says that the last frontier has vanished? The Federal Emergency Relief Administration has its plans all complete to move several hundred farm families from the Northwest up into Alaska, where agricultural conditions are said to be fine, in the Matanuska Valley.

Every one of these modern pioneers will be settled on a 40-acre tract of improved land, with a good house fully equipped except for plumbing and comp. farm equipment. Schools, a movie theater, stores, churches and a creamery and cannery will be built for them by Government. Each complete farm will cost the homesteader $3,000, payable over thirty years with interest at 5 per cent, but no interest collected for the first four years.

This, it seems to us, is pioneering de luxe. These new settlers in Alaska will not have to undergo the privations and hardships which the homesteaders went through who built their sod houses in the Northwest a couple of generations ago. We wonder whether they will develop the hardy character and independent spirit of the pioneers who settled our own Great West. Our observation of human nature leads us to fear that they will more likely complain that the Government hasn't done enough for them.

Perhaps, twenty or thirty years from now, we will see a new drive in Congress for farm relief for the distressed agriculturists of Alaska.

THE FARM AND HOME (Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

Cleanliness is the best way to fight poultry diseases, or rather to prevent them. Be sure that water and feed containers are clean and so constructed that they cannot get into them. Moving chicks to clean ground once a week is a wise precaution.

The less tender and cheap cuts of beef have a good flavor and are as nutritious as the more expensive cuts. If cooked for a long time at a low temperature in moist heat, they can be made tender. Less tender cuts of beef are round, chuck, neck, flank and shank.

Churning should be stopped when the butter grains reach the is over-churned and forms a large size of wheat kernels. If the butter lump, too much butter milk is incorporated. This often results in off flavors in the butter.

Frening of tobacco rarely occurs except on land that has been limed or on virgin soil. Lime may have been blown or washed on the field or applied as a soil treatment. Lime tobacco land only sufficiently to grow the desired legume, and apply it after the tobacco crop.

Off flavors in milk are usually due to strong feeds, weeds in the pasture or improper handling of the milk. Wild onions are especially bad in the spring. Taking the cows off grass at least an hour before milking helps to eliminate off flavors.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

A second milk route has been established in Bath county for the Carnation Milk Company plant at Mayville, and a third route and a milk receiving plant for Owensboro are being considered. The company is now receiving milk from 425 Bath county cows.

McCracken county farmers and business men are enthusiastic about the soil erosion control demonstration to be made along Massac Creek. Thirty thousand acres are involved, most of it in small farms tended by owners.

Thirty Harlan county farmers will follow complete fruit spray schedules as recommended by the Kentucky Experiment Station. 1200 grape vines were set this season and there is much interest in fruit growing.

The Blue Grass Jersey Cattle Club is planning to hold a sale on June 10th. Fifty-five head of good, clean cows, bred and open heifers have been consigned to the sale. All animals consigned were selected by a committee.

The Boyle County Farm Bureau has as one of its projects this year the construction of at least 10 community sheep dipping vats. The number of sheep in the county has increased materially in the last two years.

Thirty thousand pounds of lespedeza seed will be used in Knox county this season. Tneo Lockhart of Gray community, will spread 200 tons of limestone on his 150-acre farm, and five farmers at Davis Bend are planning to spread 100 tons.

Logan county farmers are considering the production of 100 acres of tomatoes for a commercial canner.

Fifty Henderson county 4-H club members are fattening pigs for the annual swine show in Evansville, Ind.

As a result of a county-wide study course called "The Dress-Up Ensemble," Jefferson county homemakers clubs are planning a "county dress revue" for June.

ATTENTION

A quilt show and a tasty sandwich luncheon will be held at the Hopeful Lutheran church on May 30. The luncheon will be served until 9 P. M. At this luncheon will be served strawberries, ice cream, home made cake, sandwiches and coffee. A luncheon of this kind, prepared by those who know how, should be attractive to all. A price of 35c will be charged which fund will go toward paying for certain church activities.

The quilt show and luncheon are sponsored by the Ladies Aid Society which is sufficient guarantee that the program will be carried out just right.

LAST SUNDAY

WAS KENTUCKY'S "GO-TO-SUNDAY-SCHOOL DAY"

May 5th was the twenty-first Go-to-Sunday-School Day for all the Sunday Schools of Kentucky. This movement was started by the Kentucky Sunday School Association and was originated by Rev. George Joplin, who was General Secretary at that time. He felt that while the Sunday Schools of Kentucky were making progress, they ought to grow faster. Believing that good business men would use large publicity, he conceived the idea of having one special day when attention of everybody in the state would be called to going to Sunday School.

May 3, 1914 was the first Go-to-Sunday-School Day. During the few weeks preceding this, Gov. Jas. B. McCreary issued a proclamation inviting all the people of Kentucky to be in the Sunday School of their choice that day. Ten days later, President Woodrow Wilson sent a telegram in which he said: "The Sunday School lesson of today is the code of morals of tomorrow. Too much attention cannot be given to the splendid work being done by the Sunday School teachers of Kentucky."

The result that first year was that the attendance at Sunday School was more than doubled. Since then, the campaign has developed so that now it includes five Sundays, beginning with the first Sunday in April—Church Members' Day; April 14—Family Day; April 21st—Friends' Day; April 28th—Neighbors' Day. The climax of the whole campaign was May 5th, 1935.

This movement has already been of great value to our State in increasing the membership in both Sunday Schools and Churches.

WOOL CLIP SALE

TO BE HELD JUNE 10 AT WALTON

Boone county wool growers will offer the county wool pool clip for sale Monday, June 10th at Walton according to H. E. White, President of the Boone County Wool Pool.

Buyers will be notified that sealed bids for both first grade and rejections will be received on that date.

The directors and members met at the court house in Burlington, Court day and reported that the sign-up was progressing rapidly and growers were giving good support. They voted that all wool must be listed or signed up with the committeemen before June 1. Buyers will pay best prices only when they know exactly how many fleeces they are buying. For this reason every grower should list his flock with his committeeman immediately.

Last year Boone county growers sold 10,500 fleeces weighing 58,500 pounds through the county pool.

RURAL

CARRIERS CHOOSE NEW OFFICERS. BOONE COUNTY CARRIERS HONORED WITH OFFICES

J. T. Stevens, Alexandria, was re-elected President for the fifth time, and Elijah Stephens, Burlington, Secretary-Treasurer for the seventh time, last week when the Northern Kentucky Rural Letter Carriers' Association and its Ladies Auxiliary held their annual election and business meeting at the Covington Y. M. C. A. The membership includes carriers from Boone, Kenton and Campbell counties.

Roy Lutes, Florence, was elected Vice-President, Executive Committeemen elected were A. H. Jones for Boone County, Calvert Kirkpatrick, Kenton county, and Robert Wheeler, Campbell county. Stephens was elected delegate to the state convention at Middlesboro, July 5-6. William J. B. Barnes, Williamstown, Vice President of the state organization was the principal speaker.

Mrs. J. B. Barnes was the principal speaker before the women group, which elected these officers: President, Mrs. Calvert Kirkpatrick, Ludlow; Vice President, Mrs. James Spillman, California; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Elijah Stephens, Burlington.

Plans for a district meeting of letter carriers June 1 were discussed.

O. K. Whitson, of Verona, was a visitor in Burlington Monday.

SENATOR JOHN T. MURPHY WILL OPEN CAMPAIGN FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR MAY 15

John T. Murphy, State Senator from Covington, will open his campaign for Lieutenant Governor at Covington, May 15, at 8 P. M. He will speak at the Covington Public Library Auditorium at Robbins & Scott Streets.

Delegations from all counties in the Fifth Congressional District will be present to hear Mr. Murphy's key note speech of the campaign. Mr. Murphy's card, announcing his candidacy for the Lieutenant Governorship will be found in another column in this week's Recorder.

CORK USED IN MODERN ROOF KEEPS HOUSES WARMER IN WINTER AND COOLER IN SUMMER

African explorers protect themselves from the merciless tropical sun by wearing helmets lined with cork. An insulating lining of cork is also used to preserve food supplies as they are transported cross-country in refrigerator cars. Your own ice-box at home is probably cork-protected against the heat of your kitchen. Have you ever wondered why? Simply because heat will go through cork about as readily as you could walk through a brick wall.

Now you can put a roof on your home that combines the insulating value of cork with the weather protection of a slate. A leading manufacturer of roofing materials has perfected a cork-insulated shingle that has an outer surface of a durable slate and an under surface of cork; and between the two—welding them together, is a layer of tough, heavy, asphalt-impregnated felt.

These cork insulated shingles are fire retardant and weather-proof. They are offered in colors to meet the most exacting requirements. It is said that a cork insulated shingle roof will keep a house warmer in winter because it keeps the heat in; and cooler in summer, because it keeps the heat out.

H. L. Waggoner and Jack Burdette, of Hardinburg, Ky., were in Burlington Monday night delivering a truck load of mattresses to the Boone County Relief Office.

B. B. FLEEMAN, FORMER RECORDER EMPLOYEE, FOUND DEAD

The many Boone county friends of B. B. Fleeman who was formerly connected with the Recorder as a printer, were grieved to hear of his death Wednesday. He was found dead in his bed at his room in Dayton, Ohio. Mr. Fleeman held a lucrative position at the Veterans' Home in that city. It is the opinion of his friends here that no one ever came into the county who was better liked. Mr. Fleeman worked in this office for six years and left Burlington about six years ago. He was an excellent printer and always did his work in a highly acceptable manner.

Mr. Fleeman was a native of Illinois.

MRS. O. M. ROGERS ENTERTAINS

One of the prettiest May luncheons was that given on Friday by Mrs. O. M. Rogers of upper Erlanger road. It was decidedly a tulip luncheon, the whole lower floor being beautifully decorated, and each table bore a vase of this attractive flower. Contract bridge followed the delightful menu, the list of guests including Mrs. Watson Trauter, Mrs. Edward Doyle, Mrs. Charles Stark, Mrs. George Carroll, Mrs. Harry Percival, Mrs. Philipeau, Mrs. Ivan Respass, Mrs. Percy Thompson, Mrs. Hagen, Mrs. Edmund Hawkins, Mrs. Henry Franklin Childress, Mrs. Harriet Frazier, Mrs. Edwin Victor, Mrs. Charles Robert Sater, Miss Sudie Day, Miss Bess Marshall and Miss Lucy Blackburn.

SUPT. JAMES H. RICHMOND UNABLE TO DELIVER FLORENCE COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

As we go to press we are advised by Principal W. R. Davis of Florence High School that James H. Richmond, State Supt. of Schools, will be unable to deliver the commencement address owing to the fact that he has been called unexpectedly to Washington on important business. Prof. Davis has secured in his place Mr. Mark Godman, State School Inspector, who will make the class address. Mr. Godman is a clever and entertaining speaker and the Florence audience will not be disappointed.

Edgar Maurer, Ted Cress, Dudley Rouse and Wm. Phillips visited friends in Petersburg Sunday afternoon.

NEXT MONTH

TO SEE START ON NEW ERLANGER SEWER

Work on the $100,000 sewer project for Erlanger is expected to be begun within a month or six weeks, Ralph E. Moser, District Manager of the National Re-employment Service, Covington, reported yesterday to George F. Collopy, Kenton County Commissioner and Chairman of the Fifth District Reemployment Committee.

This project, which provides for construction of two disposal plants in Erlanger, will require 10 to 12 months for completion, Russell N. Victor, Erlanger City Atty., said last night. It is expected 175 men will be employed at the peak of activity.

Bids for the project will be advertised probably next week, when Trustees of Erlanger have accepted an agreement for a loan of approximately $90,000 from the Government, Victor said. This agreement, received from the Federal Government Monday, will be acted upon at a Trustees' meeting. The acceptance will be filed with Federal authorities Friday. Bids must be advertised for three weeks before contracts are awarded.

The sewer project is to be financed by a Federal grant of $42,000 and a Federal loan of $98,000.

Applications for employment increased in April, Moser reported in his monthly news letter to members of the District Reemployment Committee. He said 123 new applicants registered during the month.

"In this same period 433 referrals were made, and 160 persons placed in employment, 50 per cent in private industry," Moser said.

Moser reported that reconstruction of the Dixie Highway through the city to Main Street virtually is completed. Pier work on the Covington end of the Fourth Street bridge between Covington and Newport will be begun soon, he said.

PASSING

OF MRS. F. H. ROUSE GREAT SHOCK TO THE COMMUNITY

It was quite a shock to the community to learn of the death of Mrs. F. H. Rouse. While she had been more or less an invalid for a long time it was not expected that her death was so near at hand. When it was reported Tuesday morning that Mrs. Rouse was dead it was a great shock to her many friends in this vicinity. Mrs. Rouse had taken quite an active part in the various interests of Burlington and will be greatly missed in these connections. Mr. Rouse has the sympathy of every one in his loss.

Mrs. Lena Edna Rouse, (nee Hedges) passed to the great beyond on Monday evening at 8:40 P. M., following an illness of 15 months due to injuries from a fall. She leaves to mourn her passing a husband, F. H. Rouse, two brothers, F. D. Hedges, Chicago, Ill., and Dr. C. C. Hedges, College Station, Texas; two aunts, Miss Mary Hedges, Covington, Ky., and Mrs. Sally Wilson, Elsmere, Ky.; one niece and one nephew, besides a number of other relatives.

Mrs. Rouse was an active member of the Eastern Star and was a past matron of this order and also was the matron at the time of her death.

The funeral will take place from the Hopeful Lutheran church, on Thursday, May 9, at 2 p. m. (fast time) conducted by her pastor, Rev. H. M. Hutter. The burial will be in the Hopeful cemetery under the charge of Chambers & Grubbs, Undertakers.

LOCAL RELIEF

OFFICE MAKES REPORT FOR MONTH OF APRIL

The Local Relief Office distributed during the month of April to Relief Families in Boone county the following surplus food commodities:

Canned Beef	2280 lbs.
Canned Veal	324 lbs.
Canned Mutton	380 lbs.
Dry Skim Milk	1008 lbs.

One hundred and thirty-nine comforts were also distributed. Seed potatoes distributed also amounted to 18,300 lbs., along with a supply of other garden seed, to enable families to grow subsistence gardens.

Comforts distributed were produced by women labor taken from Relief Rolls.

Mrs. Bess Rouse is ill at her home in Burlington.

ELECTRIC

RATES WILL BE REDUCED IN ERLANGER

Residents in Erlanger will receive a reduction in electric light rates beginning May 16 and effective on the June bills, it was known definitely at the meeting of the Erlanger Council Thursday night.

According to Russell Victor, Erlanger city attorney, the reduction in rates will follow in four classifications. For the first 30 kilowatt hours, a drop from 9 cents to 8½ cents per kilowatt hour will be adopted. The next 60 hours will cost 4½ cents instead of the former 5 cents per hour. An additional 60 hours will receive a reduction of one-half cent, reducing the charge to 3½ cents. All over 100 kilowatt hours will be reduced from 3½ to 3 cents per hour.

The official notice was received by the Erlanger Council in the form of a letter from G. A. Eichelberger, assistant to the president of the Union Light & Power Co., Covington. Following the reading of the letter to the Council a resolution was passed adopting the notice for the city records.

According to Phil G. Vonder-smith, general manager of the utility company, the reduction at Erlanger was but one of several voluntary reductions made by the Union Light, Heat & Power Co., for northern Kentucky communities in recent months.

City Attorney Victor stated that for some time Erlanger had been in financial arrears, but money has been accrued and all debts were cleared April 1, putting the city on a paying basis. The agreement with the light company including the stipulation that the reduction would be made only if the city paid off all back debts, he said. This was one and the reduction in rates was put through, Victor stated.

SENIOR PLAY

TO BE REPEATED BY FLORENCE HIGH SCHOOL THURSDAY NIGHT

The graduating class of Florence is going to give its Senior Play entitled "Dotty and Daffy" again Thursday night, May 9, in the High School Auditorium, beginning at 8 o'clock fast time. This is one of the best plays that has ever been given in Florence. The senior class had no idea of giving the play twice, but due to the popular demand they are going to repeat it at the same price of admission.

Don't forget class night Thursday May 10. The program will begin at 8 o'clock, fast time. Remember the graduating exercises Saturday night, May 11th. The Hon. James H. Richmond, State Supt. of Schools, will deliver the Commencement address. Supt. D. H. Norris will present the diplomas. Special music has been secured for the occasion from Georgetown College. Make plans to attend all of these programs.

A CORRECTION

In last week's issue the list of graduates of the five county high schools was given. Through an error on the part of some one the names of three girls were omitted from the Florence High School list of graduates. The names of Alma Zapp, Gladys Britt, and Alice Coady should have been included in the list. Of course the mistake was made unintentionally and the Recorder is glad to make the correction.

MAN FINED

FOR DRIVING WHILE INTOXICATED

Jack Cullum, Cincinnati, O., was arrested and brought to Burlington by Sheriff Cotton and Deputy Walton on the charge of driving while intoxicated. He was lodged in jail Monday night and was tried before Acting County Judge Lutes on Tuesday. Cullum was fined $50 and costs. It was reported that Cullum was driving on the Dixie Highway in Boone county in an intoxicated condition and as a result ran into a telephone pole and damaged same. Another man who was riding with Cullum was turned loose since it was brought out that he had nothing to do with driving the car.

Mr. and Mrs. Denzil Carpenter spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Will Carpenter.

CHANDLER WILL OPEN CAMPAIGN IN NEWPORT, THURSDAY NIGHT

Lieutenant Governor A. B. Chandler of Versailles plans to open his campaign for governor in Newport, Ky., Thursday night. The meeting will be held in the Newport High School Auditorium. According to the newspaper reports plans for the opening of Mr. Chandler's campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor have assumed definite form as Chandler supporters surveyed the results of several days of intense activity.

The Campbell Co. Retail Merchants Association announce that arrangements are being made to provide for 3000 persons in the main auditorium of the school. Loud speakers will be installed outside the school building to accommodate an overflow crowd if there should be one.

SUSPECTS' WIVES HELD IN LOOKOUT HOUSE CASE TO FACE INQUIRY

Wives of two men said to have been implicated in the $500 robbery of the Lookout House on the Dixie Highway, March 18th, the $1,000 robbery of the Liberty Theatre, Covington, several months ago, and a recent hijack-kidnaping near Jeffersonville, Ind., were arrested in Covington and charged with being accessories after the fact in connection with the roadhouse hold-up.

They registered as Miss Vivian Holliday, alias Mrs. Arthur Lohan, 19 years old, Covington, and Mrs. Bernard Pfiffer, alias Mrs. Roland Rogers, 23, Louisville.

Covington police were questioning them behind locked doors. They were named as accessories in warrants sworn to Monday by James Brink, manager of the Lookout House.

Husbands of both now are at Jeffersonville, Ind., to answer on the same charge.

A fourth man, G. H. Alexander, Covington, now is being held in that city under bond of $20,000. He is said to have been the "finger man" in the Lookout House robbery.

ERLANGER TRUSTEES PLACE HIGH LICENSE FEE FOR DANCING WHILE LIQUOR IS SOLD

Dancing will be expensive in Erlanger if the dancing is done where the dancer can slake his thirst. At the meeting of the trustees an ordinance was adopted placing a license of $1,000 for a dance hall if it is operated in conjunction with a saloon. The council also decreed that there was room for only four saloons in the community. There are four of these establishments in operation already and no more will be permitted.

Russell Victor, attorney for the city, was authorized to go to Louisville and file acceptance of the Government's loan for the sewer project. A total of $140,000 is to be used, of which $98,000 will be loaned and $42,000 given to the city by the Government. The work on the sewer, it is hoped, will be commenced by June 15.

A request for rights-of-way on Routes 25 and 42 was made by George Lyons, engineer of the Kentucky Highway Commission, in order that the work of building the underpass might be begun within the next forty-five days. The project is to cost $150,000.

"QUILTERS" HELD ALL DAY MEETING SATURDAY

The Sophia Webster Lloyd Memorial Society held their all-day meeting Saturday. A rising vote of thanks was given to all persons assisting with the program and luncheon given April 20th, the birthday party for Mr. Lloyd. A silver thimble has been offered for the Quilter that has attended the greater number of quiltings during this year. A record has been kept by the Chairman and the thimble will be awarded S. W. L. M. S. for the Society.

Each Thursday we will quilt, but (Decoration Day May 30 we will not work). Saturday, June 12 will be an all day meeting.

FLORENCE DEBATE TEAM ATTEND BANQUET AT LLOYD HIGH SCHOOL

The Florence Debate Team comprised Misses Gene Lutes, Helen Taylor, Lillie Taylor, Mary Kate Scott, Alma Zapp and Edward Tullis, attended the debate banquet held at Lloyd High School last Monday evening. Both teams report having a very enjoyable evening. After the banquet the team attended a show in Covington. We are very proud of the record made by the Florence debating teams this year, and we are looking forward to next year with a good bit of optimism, since only two members of the team graduate.

OMAHA

IS WINNER OF THE KENTUCKY DERBY

A gallant son of a gaunt sire drove down to victory in the sixty-first running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs Saturday.

The winner, a chestnut colt, named Omaha, owned by Wm. Woodward, Chairman of the Jockey Club of New York, was a handy victor over Roman Soldier, with the Milky Way Whiskol in third place, and the filly Nellie Flag fourth.

In turf terms the winner of the Kentucky Derby of 1930 outbred himself when he sent his son Omaha out to do a better deed than he himself did. In 1930, Gallant Fox, son of Sir Gallia had, owned by the same William Woodward won the Kentucky Derby, defeating Gallant Knight and Ned O. His first son to reach the age of three duplicated the feat of his sire and won as handy a victory as did his daddy.

Filly Nellie Flag Fourth. Omaha was phased slightly toward the finish by Roman Soldier, a horse which has been racing in the South, and therefore should be in superb condition. The eastern owned colt's margin of victory was two lengths. Further back came Whiskol, which ran a fair race. The filly Nellie Flag, brought up for the short portion of the purse.

The greatest crowd that ever saw a Derby braved the worst weather conditions in which a Derby could be run. Cold and damp up to the running of the third race, colder drizzle set in and continued throughout the running of the Derby and for the remainder of the day.

The miserable weather probably cut into the attendance but at that it is doubtful where more persons could have been accommodated.

4000 CATTLE

IN BOONE COUNTY TESTED FOR BANGS DISEASE

Dr. Kenneth W. Ryle, of Burlington, reports that approximately 4,000 head of cattle have been tested for bangs disease in Boone county under Federal Supervision since the project started last fall.

Bangs disease commonly known as contagious abortion represents the greatest disease loss to Boone county dairymen when lowered vitality and loss of calf crops are considered. No practical, successful, medical cure is known. The testing for animals affected and the elimination from the herd is the surest method of eradication.

All dairymen as well as beef cattlemen should take advantage to clean up their herds while the Federal Government pays for the reactors on the appraisal basis. Herds should be listed for this work immediately as only a limited amount of money has been allotted for payment for reactors.

Herds may be used for testing by calling Dr. K. W. Ryle, Burlington or the County Agent's Office in Burlington.

FARM NEEDS

SHOWN IN STUDY OF HOUSING CONDITIONS

Washington, D. C.—Outstanding needs of the farm home, as indicated by 17,981 cases investigated by the Department of Agricultural Extension of Purdue University, are principally sewerage, paint, and screening, according to a report received by the Federal Housing Administration.

Of the farms investigated the following percentage table was formulated: 95 per cent were found to be in need of a safe method of sewage disposal; 95 per cent were in need of new paint; 41 per cent required more adequate screening; 31 per cent, miscellaneous repairs and replacements; 28 per cent, foundation repairs; 25 per cent, more closet space; 14 per cent, kitchen sinks.

The purpose of the Purdue investigation were to promote sound and attractive building and to protect the farm home from unnecessary depreciation; to develop conditions which promote comfort; to provide provision of conveniences which will end needless drudgery; and to encourage a suitable setting for the farm home.

Howe Cleek, of Verona, was in Burlington Monday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Slekmann and daughter spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hewett and family of Saylor Park, Ohio.

Political Announcement

We are authorized to announce:

SENATOR JOHN T. MURPHY

as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary, August 3, 1935.

THE WISE GUY

You know the jay-walker—in fact, you've probably burned your tires at some time or another in avoiding him. He crosses the street wherever and however he pleases. He takes intersections on a diagonal. He's never content to follow the regular path. He thinks he's saving time. But is he? The dodging, jumping and backing use up more time than it would have taken to follow the regular path. And he is taking a needless risk.

The jay-buyer knows a way to buy things cheaper. He knows of a man from whom he can buy radios at half price, of a small mail-order house that will sell to him at wholesale prices. His favorite pastime is telling his friends what suckers they are and how much money he could have saved them had they only come to him before furnishing their new home or buying a car.

He thinks he is saving money, but somehow or other he just cannot make his income go as far as his acquaintances who read the advertisements and buy standard goods from reputable merchants whose guarantee stands for something.

BEDS, SOFT AND HARD

Scientists have come to the conclusion through laboratory tests that for the brain worker six hours, sleep on a downy couch is better than eight hours on a hard pallet. A hard bed in eight hours builds less energy than a soft bed can in six hours.

The tests also tend to show that the brain works more efficiently but utilizes more energy if two hours are cut from the normal sleep period. In the light of the discovered relation of the soft bed to the number of hours of sleep one requires, it is presumed that a soft bed was used to make the latter test.

Perhaps the professors are right in their deductions, but the laity will have difficulty in reconciling these scientific discoveries with the fact everybody has learned by "hard" experience that those accustomed to a hard bed find as great if not greater difficulty in adapting themselves to yielding spring and downy mattress than those born to a soft bed find in habituating themselves to a hard couch.

Who has not returned to his own soft bed after many nights sound slumber on the body-bruising ground or strange unyielding beds and awakened the next morning feeling physically sore and mentally weary all because of being unaccustomed to a soft place to sleep?

THE BIRD WITH THE BROKEN WING

A friend with whom the writer was in conversation the other day, contended that "youth must have its fling" and that the young man or woman who did not sow at least a moderate crop of "wild oats" was overlooking a good deal of worthwhile experience.

We have always insisted that the so-called "wild oats" crop, was entirely unnecessary and extremely hazardous; that the harvest in a million instances, consisted in the end of a good many tares and very much chaff.

We have in mind, as we write, a young man formerly of our acquaintance who practiced the "wild oats" theory and sowed them to the limit. They buried him the other day, a derelict mentally and morally and for five years, a stench physically, in his own nostrils.

Our friend's contention that young people may reform in years to come and turn out to be good and respectable members of society, makes us think of Hezekiah Butterworth's verses under the caption of "The Bird with a Broken Wing." I walked in the woodland meadows, Where sweet the thrushes sing And found on a bed of mosses, A bird with a broken wing. I healed its wing and each morning It essayed its old sweet strain; But the bird with the broken pinion Never soared as high again.

A RECORD OF EVENTS

The Boone County Recorder is the best-read medium of news and advertising in Boone county. Having more subscribers in the county than any other publication, it goes into practically every home, and is well read, that is, carefully and completely, from front page to back. A lot of direct-by-mail advertising and a great number of publications are scanned carelessly and thrown aside, but not the weekly newspaper.

The Recorder contains a chronicle of the happenings of Boone county, the things that you and your family and friends are doing; interested in. As such it is read in its entirety every week, including the advertisements of progressive local merchants, who use it to keep their customers informed about their bargains and seasonal merchandise.

The events that are recorded in this newspaper constitute a history of Boone county. A file of the Recorder, twenty or thirty years hence, will be a more complete record of local events than will ever be found in a school text book.

Editorial of the Week

THE COST OF CRIME

(Lancaster Central Record)

The cost of crime in this country is far more extensive than the court procedure necessary to bring the apprehended offender to justice, nor does it stop with the expense of handling the convicted criminals. The lot of the ordinary organized criminals of this country amounts to hundreds of millions of dollars annually and rightful owners of property are thus deprived not to consider the ordinary small offender in larceny cases.

It has always been a problem for the government to handle the criminal element but it is perhaps as serious if not more so today than ever in the history of this country. How can it be curbed, is an everyday question. There may be many ways to look at it and elements to enter into consideration of crime prevention.

Education for the rising generation if it could be extended to the view of making it a disgrace and having the rising generation look at wrongdoing or law violation in this way. They should be taught respect for law and fear of the consequences of law violation. But presently the most effective way is to let it be well understood that there will be certain apprehension, swift and immediate trial and certain punishment with such severity as to deter the would-be offender against the effects of his wrong doing. It is certain and severe punishment to those apprehended held up to all would-be violators that is the most effective remedy against crime. The silly soft-hearted doctrine of giving the first offender a chance and coddling and fooling with the criminals of this country will not give effective protection to the law abiding citizen. His property and his personal safety must ever be assured by the state and dealing with the criminal with sufficient harshness as the most effective method.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 23, 1935.

Editor of the Recorder: I am reminded by the date on wrapper of my paper that my subscription expired May 1 and am enclosing Postoffice money order for $1.50 for another year.

We have been away from Kentucky now for nearly 3 1/2 years, but still look forward to the paper's arrival to see what we may learn of interest from "The Old Home."

However, after so long an absence, and the many changes of all sorts that have taken place, there, much of what we find is almost like foreign news. But with standing that, as some one has said, "Once a Kentuckian, always a Kentuckian" is, I think, quite true with my family.

We always are anxious for any news from the old home.

Most cordially,

WILLIAM T. CRISLER

SEEN and HEARD

around the

National Capital

By CARTER FIELD

Washington.—The beautiful friendship between James M. Curley and Franklin D. Roosevelt, which grew so vigorously in the spring and summer of 1932, and appeared to bloom in 1933, seems to have wilted. No official statement as to just why the governor of Massachusetts and the President of the United States are no longer David and Jonathan is forthcoming, but there are rumors aplenty.

Back in the golden days of this friendship there were many friends of both who predicted that James Roosevelt, sometimes called the favorite son of the Chief Executive, would one day, with the backing of Curley, be governor of the Bay state. But now this prospect is also out of the window, for the time being at least. James no longer holds forth at Cambridge. He has moved to New York, perhaps temporarily, but certainly with no obvious intention of retaining his residence in Massachusetts.

Unkind critics say the instigator of the move was none other than the President himself, and that it was not wholly unconnected with the cooling in the friendship between himself and Governor Curley. It was partly through James Roosevelt that Curley was so successful in getting many of his friends and lieutenants put on the federal payroll in key positions. Certainly most of the appointees desired by Curley had the endorsement of James Roosevelt when they went across the desk of Patronage Dispenser Farley, the genial postmaster general.

In fact, Farley was even willing to appoint former Representative Peter F. Tague as Boston postmaster, on Curley's recommendation, although both Senators Walsh and Coolidge had made it clear they would block his confirmation.

Got Cold Shoulder

Back in his campaign for the governorship Curley confided to the Massachusetts electorate that he, if elected, would be able to bring home a lot of federal appropriations to the Bay state, whereas, he hinted what could Massachusetts expect of an old line Republican like Bacon?

During the recent visit of New England governors to Washington to demand help for their closing textile mills, to insist on something being done about Japanese competition, and to protest against the cotton processing tax, Governor Curley, it appeared to some of them, rather got the cold shoulder.

In fact, one of the governors remarked afterwards that when he came to Washington from now on he was coming alone.

Which is a far cry from the days when Roosevelt was clapping Curley on the shoulder, telling him how sorry he was he could not put him in the cabinet, inquiring whether he would not be acceptable to Mussolini as ambassador to Rome, and later, on this blowing up, offering him the Polish embassy.

Just as Curley's recent speech before the General Motors show at Boston, when he sided with the New Deal rather effectively, was a far cry from his speeches, either in 1932 or 1931, from which his auditors got the distinct impression that Roosevelt was one of the world's noblemen, of unequalled ability.

Who threw the first stone is always an interesting question, and there is a lot of speculation about this case, especially since James Roosevelt was literally moved out of Massachusetts by the President. But certainly Relief Administrator Hopkins and Public Works Administrator Ickes have not helped to smooth matters over. To put it mildly, they have not looked out for Governor Curley's interest. Curley hit back vigorously, as he always does, whereupon the White House itself gave him a reception which did not enhance his prestige with the other New England governors.

Italy Clamps Down

Negotiations—quite unofficial—with Italy to induce that country to remove her very drastic restrictions on American imports, have gotten precisely nowhere to date, and the prospect is not very bright. Italy has clamped down on imports of American automobiles, office machinery, farm machinery, cotton, and dozens of other products to just one-fourth of the 1934 figures. And the 1934 figures were not very large!

But the representatives of Italy, discussing the situation informally with State department officials, say they would be glad to buy if they only had something to use for money! And it is proving very difficult to answer them. For what they mean, of course, is that they cannot go on indefinitely buying more than they sell. So it comes down to this: America must take more Italian goods if she wants to keep on selling to Italy as she did up to this month. (The restrictions have just gone into effect.)

"What do you want?" the State department negotiators in effect asked the Italians:

"We want your market opened up for our lemons, tomato paste, silk and hats—straw and felt hats," the Italians replied in effect.

There is enough political dynamite in that answer to wreck any political party, and the terrible part of it is the Italians know it as well as the State department officials who were nonplussed at the answer. Which is one of the reasons why Secretary of State Hull's reciprocal trade agreements have not made more progress.

Curiously enough the Italians have not manifested the expected desire that something be done about wines. They are just discouraged about America as a wine market. They believe the country has lost its taste for good wines, and while they of course do not concede that French wines are superior to Italian wines, they know that France is suffering from the same dis-appointment.

As a Wine Market

A very important Italian official in Washington recently dined with some Anglo-American friends. They had all been born in Italy, and he presumed of course that their taste in wine would be good.

"Maybe it was a hint, and I did not recognize it," he told the writer. "Maybe they thought I would at once send them a case of really good wine from the embassy. But the fact is they served me some perfectly miserable wine. I think it was California. Certainly it was not imported. My own thought is that if Italian people, as a result of American prohibition, have had their tastes so impaired, what hope is there for our recovering even the market for our wines that we had before prohibition?"

California, and to a lesser extent New York, state and some other sections, are certainly out to get whatever market there is in this country for low-priced wines. California's problem on this is simple, but interesting. When prohibition came, many California vineyards were plowed under. Then arose a tremendous demand for grapes from would-be wine makers. So the price of grapes soared. California overdid the planting in attempting to meet this demand, but this was not apparent until along about 1930, because it takes grapes some time to come into bearing.

Then, to get rid of the grapes at some price or other, there developed the business of experts making wine for people in their own cellars, thus avoiding the tolls of the law. This business mounted to unbelievable proportions in the last two years of prohibition. Then it blew up, and it became necessary to market the California wine in the normal way. Which California has been doing, to the great distress of foreign wine makers.

But any tinkering with the wine tariff in behalf of Italy or France, or any other country, will find a solid phalanx of Californians ready to die in the breach, if necessary.

From Cotton to Corn

Prospects that the South will buy less corn from Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and other big corn raising states of the Mid-West are already disturbing senators and members of the house from that region. So far there are no political repercussions in the corn raising states, but they are coming, unless some very shrewd observers miss their guess very badly.

What has happened is this: cotton planters, taking money not to raise cotton, in many instances have turned to corn. This is said to be true all through the cotton belt. But the cotton belt has always been a splendid market for middle western corn. Just to cite a typical example, Georgia formerly bought about 60,000,000 bushels a year, though perfectly capable of supplying her own corn needs without bringing in a bushel.

So this splendid market for mid-west corn just may not be there this year! Whereupon there will be very loud outcries indeed against a government which has paid the southern planters not to raise cotton.

It is rather curious, but in the old days before the boll weevil became such a menace in the southeastern states, the Department of Agriculture campaigned all the time for diversification. The department experts wanted the cotton planters to turn to other crops, to produce their own pork, their own milk and butter, their own corn, etc.

The boll weevil came along after years of intensive but utterly futile effort in this direction. Some sections were transformed. In one county of Georgia there is a monument to the boll weevil, in a tribute to the increased prosperity its ravages eventually produced for that section.

Gets Another Push

Now along comes the cotton curtailment program, and gives another push in the same direction. Which is all very well for the South—though there are those who have their grave doubts about that, what with the speedy development of foreign cotton production, which makes one wonder about the future—but what about the producers who formerly supplied the South with what the South is now raising? Particularly the corn growers of the Middle West?

This particular storm has not burst. Yet it would be most timely at the moment, with AAA under fire about the cotton processing tax, with New England and southern mills closing down allegedly because of Japanese textile competition, and AAA none too popular anyhow.

No one in Washington seems to be taking a long range view of the problem. But it is most interesting that the storm center of trouble seems likely to be in the Middle West—the states from Indiana to Iowa—by harvest time. This is important because if the storm center were in the South, while there might be plenty of political thunder and lightning there, no one would figure it very seriously with respect to political prospects next year.

(ISSUE OF MAY 8, 1895)

The dry weather has injured the wheat crop in some bottoms.

It is hoped that the cut worms are to be short lived this season.

The Keelyites will have their annual picnic on the first Saturday in July.

A juvenile inmate of the county infirmary, named Noble, died last Thursday evening.

Rev. R. E. Kirtley will preach in the Baptist church in Burlington on the 3rd Sunday of this month.

Little Mary, youngest daughter of Sheriff Roberts, got a shoe-button in her nose last Saturday and it became necessary to put her under the influence of chloroform in order to extract it.

Walton is contemplating building telephone line to connect with Burlington and Union should then build lines to Florence and thus a very useful system would be brought at once into existence.

Timothy Howe, who had been an inmate of the county infirmary for about 10 years, jumped from a window in his room in the second story last week and received injuries from which he died a few days thereafter. He was a stone mason and the night he jumped from the window he dreamed Dr. Lassing, of Union, had written for him, and he started in his sleep. Before he got entirely out of the window he awoke and hung from the window sill for some time. After he struck the ground Mr. J. F. Blythe heard him calling, when he went out and found him and took him in and did all he could to relieve his suffering. He was 84 years old.

Frank Kirkpatrick and Mrs. W. E. Piper came out from the city last Wednesday to see their sick brother.

David Beall was in town Monday meeting his many friends. The Blue Grass evidently agrees with David.

E. H. Blankenbaker, of Florence, was in town Thursday morning. Howard comes early and hurries back.

Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Brady returned on Tuesday evening of last week from a very pleasant visit of about three weeks to friends at Jacksonville, Illinois.

The wastebasket at the postoffice had a full day Monday. A big batch of "Box-holder advertising arrived. —Ilmo Jimplicute. And one never sees the wastebasket stuffed with local newspapers, now does one?

When a newspaper takes a definite stand on some proposition, vigorously defends or assails, some cause or issue, a lot of people are ready to applaud and say "atta boy," but just let that paper attack some scheme or pet idea of those same people, and immediately it becomes in their estimation a radical banner, scandal sheet or yellow journal. It's the same old story, the opinion depending on whose ox was goaded.

What IS
a Sound Loan?

A sound loan for a commercial bank is a loan which the borrower believes, and the bank expects, will be paid within a reasonable time—a loan which if not fully repaid at the maturity of the note is substantially reduced by regular periodic installments.

Loans that are regularly reduced enable a bank to accommodate patrons whose needs may be more essential. A bank must have a turn-over of money in the same way that a merchant must have a turn-over of merchandise, with this difference—bank's turn-over affects the credit facilities of the entire community.

The ability and intention to repay a loan by a planned program, and within a reasonable time, is the essence of a good loan. The giving of collateral does not repay a loan. Collateral is merely a pledge to guarantee the borrower's ability and promise to repay the loan within a reasonable time.

COUNTY BASE BALL NEWS
The Petersburg base ball team will play the Bellevue team on Saturday afternoon of this week. The game will be played at Bellevue and will be called at 2 o'clock. This should be a fine game and no doubt a large crowd of base ball fans will be on hand to root for their favorite team.

The Midway base ball club postponed its game Sunday with the Bellevue team on account of the rain. However, there will be a game at the Midway park next Sunday afternoon, May 12. Any teams desiring games with the Midway club should write or see Conner Carroll, captain of the team, or Cliff Norman. Fans should not forget the Sunday game.

By all means a Boone county Base Ball League should be organized for the coming season. Such a league will stimulate interest in the game. In order that a league might function properly there should be at least four clubs as members. At present three clubs have agreed to enter, namely: Petersburg, Bellevue and Rabbit Hash. A fourth club must be enrolled to make the league a success. Any town or community in Boone wishing to join the league should see, call or write at once R. S. Hensley, Grant, Ky. Boone county has always had a league and a good one at that. It is hoped that there will be one for the present base ball season.

FLORENCE 4-H CLUB

The X-1-ALL Club held a very interesting meeting last Tuesday, April 30th.

The meeting was called to order by our Vice-President and the Secretary gave the roll call.

Most all members and three adult leaders were present.

Mrs. McHenry, unit one and two sewing leader, Mrs. Ryle, unit three and four sewing leader, and Mr. Chas. Tanner, leader of the dairy project.

The captains and members of the club were called on to give a report of their project.

Most all of the poultry members have begun their project.

After all reports were given, the members, the leaders and Mr. Forkner decided that our club picnic would be held June 10, and our club tour, July 16.

Then our meeting was adjourned by repeating our club pledge.

Mary H. Butts, Club Reporter

"THE HEBRON NORBEH CHAM-PION 4-H CLUB"

The Hebron 4-H Club met Thursday May 2nd. In the absence of our President, Geo. Hankins, Ryle, was asked to call the meeting to order. The minutes were read by the secretary.

The captains of each group gave a detailed account of their particular project. There were four leaders, namely, John Crigger, poultry; Robt. Graves, tobacco; Mrs. Reimer, canning; and Mrs. Nichols, sewing. Each of these leaders gave a very interesting talk explaining the progress of their boys and girls.

A committee was appointed by the acting president to make arrangements for the tour on June 19th.

We appreciate the co-operation of our members, leaders, captains and County Agent, and hope for a successful 4-H year.

We adjourned by repeating the Club pledge.

Anna Mary Grant, Club Reporter.

The Juniors of the local High school gave a party for the graduating class Friday evening at Devou Park. Those present were William Brown, Elizabeth Holbrook, Harry Blackburn, Vera McClure, Lou Ella Berkshire, Allan Berkshire, Thelma Aylor, Harold Ogden, Donald Kirkpatrick, Frances Finn, Betty Lucas, Leon Ryle, Albert Sebree, Alberta Pettit, Leslie

ATTENTION

A quilt show and a tasty sandwich luncheon will be held at the Hopeful Lutheran church on May 30. The luncheon will be served until 9 P. M. At this luncheon will be served strawberries, ice cream, home made cake, sandwiches and coffee. A luncheon of this kind, prepared by those who know how, should be attractive to all. A price of 35c will be charged which fund will go toward paying for certain church activities.

The quilt show and luncheon are sponsored by the Ladies Aid Society which is sufficient guarantee that the program will be carried out just right.

W.N.U. SERVICE

CHAPTER I.—Matt Kearney, young American living in London, says good-bye to his sister Eileen, on board the steamer Wallaroo bound for Colombo. The Wallaroo is conveying $2,000,000 in gold to Australia. Eileen has a presentiment of coming evil, which affects her brother. On his way home Kearney meets an old friend, Inspector Dawson Halg, of Scotland Yard, who is very much in love with Eileen. Halg is on the trail of opium, which he is convinced is concealed in Jo Lung's warehouse. Called to other duty, Halg delegates Kearney, with Detective Norwich, to visit the place and find out what he can.

CHAPTER II

A heavy wooden gate, set in a high, old brick wall, did not look very promising. Partially defaced by time and weather, the name "Jo Lung" might still with difficulty be read thereupon. Just beside the inscription was an electric bell push, and to this Detective ive Sergeant Norwich applied his finger.

"Don't Forget the American Accent, Sir," He Whispered.

"Don't forget the American accent, sir," he whispered.

"I can't," Kearney replied. "So they tell me here."

This cul-de-sac was curiously quiet, although its blind end terminated very near to the river bank. Here, the fog was thick again. Kearney conjured up a picture of the Wallaroo, lying far downstream, and of a cozy stateroom. Eileen would be in bed now, propped up, reading. He hoped she was happy. He was very fond of Eileen.

Suddenly a small door, set in one wing of the greater one, opened quite silently inwards. The light of an electric lamp of that pattern carried by the police shone into their faces. Behind the lamp, indistinguishable in the darkness, appeared a stooping figure, shadowy.

"What you want, please?" asked a soft, monotonous voice.

Peering hard, Matt Kearney made out that the speaker was a dark blue turban. The doorkeeper was not, as one might have anticipated, a Chinaman, but an Arab bowab.

"Mr. Jo Lung," Norwich replied distinctly. "I have brought him a customer from the United States."

The bowab turned light upon the speaker's face, and:

"I don't see you here before," he commented.

"Maybe not," Norwich returned. "But I come from Mr. Bernardino. Look at this."

He held out a card. Bony brown fingers, grasped it and placed it close before the light of the lantern; then:

"All right," said the guardian of the gateway. "Please come in."

The two stepped into a little courtyard. The Arab proved to be a gaunt man with a lined and pock-marked face, sunken eyes and an ominous expression.

They crossed to a corner of the yard, mounted four stone steps, and entered a dimly lighted passage, having a window with an iron grating overlooking the courtyard. The place was stuffy and full of cigarette smoke. It was evidently the sanctum of the Arab night porter.

"Please wait," said the bowab, leaving them together in the dimly lighted room. Shuffling footsteps died away in some dark place beyond, and Kearney was about to speak when Norwich shook his head urgently.

Standing there in an oppressive hush, a long way off in the building, Kearney heard a sound.

Although at first he failed to identify it, immediately he knew that it was horrible. It was a very high sound, between a piping and a squeal; higher than the note of a rat. It was, paradoxically, so shrill as to be nearly inaudible.

Then, suddenly, he knew of what it reminded him... the amplified squeak of a bat! It was chilling; terrifying; in some way—unclean.

He exchanged a rapid glance with Norwich, and Norwich stood like a man petrified.

"For God's sake! What was it?" Kearney whispered.

"I can't imagine, sir... Shh! Some one coming!"

"It was like... laughter..."

The emporium of Jo Lung occupied all the rooms on two floors of a rambling old building, eight or nine rooms in all, and each one literally crammed with treasures. At times Kearney imagined that the covered-in ways of old Damascus lay just around the next turning; that the Street Called Straight, and not Limehouse Causeway, adjoined this winder-khan. On entering other rooms, he was transported to the Seraglio palace, and thought that he stood in the treasury of the sultans.

Only the manner in which these priceless items were displayed served to dissipate such illusions. They were piled carelessly upon rough, trestle tables.

Here were lacquer cabinets, chests, and caskets, antique and modern; each one a choice piece. Damascened swords, Venetian goblets, whole services of Ming porcelain; prayer carpets of a quality seldom seen outside a museum; a collection of books in exquisite bindings; a great quantity of antique silver.

A highly civilized and well-dressed Greek did the honors. "Mr. Jo Lung is unfortunately away," he explained to Norwich. "But if I can help, I am at your service. No doubt," turning to Kearney, who was endeavoring to hide his bewilderment, "you have a definite idea what you are seeking?"

Kearney conquered his astonishment. He endeavored to recall Dawson Halg's instructions. Jo Lung was the biggest "fence"—or dealer in stolen goods—in all London! Surprise visits had never yet caught him napping. This was a new move. Detective Sergeant Norwich had memorized a long list of stolen jewelry—principally foreign; and their job was to try to identify even one item in Jo's emporium. On this, Halg could act... and the cases of opium lay in an adjoining yard!

"My friend, Mr. Bronsen, has several commissions," said Norwich. (Matt Kearney was "Mr. Bronsen.") "But mostly colored gems."

"Yes," Kearney broke in. "I'm commissioned by a New York client to complete a collection of sapphires."

"Sapphires!" The Greek raised heavy eyebrows. "I fear I am unfortunate. If Mr. Jo Lung were here he might be able to help you. But to the best of my knowledge we have few sapphires in stock at present. They are not," he smiled slightly, "very profitable just now. However, you shall see."

They passed along a corridor, went down three naked wooden steps and picked a way through what seemed to be a collection of lamps—lamp of perforated brass, and of silver, and of gold; lamps from Arabia, from China, and from Japan.

Detective Sergeant Norwich was all eyes.

They entered a room resembling a small shop, and the Greek, stepping behind a narrow counter, pulled out a tray from beneath and opened it for the visitors' inspection.

It was as he did so that the almost insupportable silence began to bear down upon Kearney. The treasure house of Jo Lung was the most silent place he had ever known in the heart of a city. Its silence was uncanny.

"Unless Mr. Lung has others in the safe," the Greek said, "these are the only colored gems in stock at present."

Kearney, resting his eyes upon the jewels, suppressed an exclamation in the nick of time.

The tray was arranged with some artistic care, and in its center, under the harsh, unshaded lamp which the Greek had switched on, blazed a group of amazingly matched fire opals.

Kearney clenched his teeth and bent low, peering down.

Here lay evidence to justify a search of Jo Lung's premises! Beyond any possibility of mistake, this was the "Dakenham necklace"—the famous rope of opals which his Aunt Hilda, Lady Dakenham, had taken with her upon the ill-fated voyage of the American yacht, Miss Minnesota, lost with all hands in the Persian gulf, less than a year before!

Yet—a query leaped to his brain—was it evidence?

"You are admiring the opals?"

The Greek's voice seemed to come from a great distance.

Kearney pulled himself together.

"Yes," he said, and met the unblinking gaze of the man's dark eyes. "I was buying opals. I should buy these."

"You would be wise. But you know Mr. Lung's methods of business?"

"Yes. Even if I wanted to buy, I haven't the cash!" He was cool enough now. He added: "These sapphires are indifferent. I'm sorry."

The Greek replaced the tray, and: "Perhaps you will honor us with a visit, Mr. Bronsen, next time you visit England," he suggested. "Special requirements such as yours cannot always be met at short notice."

He led them to another room.

"What have you here?" Norwich asked curiously—"in these cases?"

Kearney was slightly ahead when the Greek paused and looked back as Kearney observed a little memo-book, bound in green leather, lying upon the first step.

Without attracting attention, he stooped quickly, picked it up, and slipped it in his pocket. Here, perhaps, was evidence!

In the act of turning to rejoin Norwich, who was examining a massive silver—something—a slight sound—prompted Kearney to glance across the shadow-haunted expanse of the big room below.

It opened directly out of the lobby of the bowwab and contained miscellaneous bulky exhibits; a vast place in which only that one light was burning. Its dim reflection touched a distant landing.

And on this landing a woman stood! She was encased, mummy-like, in a long, clinging fur coat of what Kearney took to be brown ermine.

Her blue-black hair was brushed straight back from her brow; her small, chiseled features resembled a pale cameo, but her lips were poppy red. Unfathomable eyes were represented only by straight, nearly horizontal shadows; and one singularly long, white, ghastly hand rested on her hip.

He stared—stared again... and the apparition had gone!

Had she been watching him? Had she seen him pick up the book? Or had she any real existence at all—was she a product of his excited imagination?...

In a soundproof room, well but simply furnished as an office, a man sat before a large desk. The room was in darkness except for a shaded lamp upon this desk. Near to it, back against the wall, was a mechanism which at first glance one would have taken for a radio set. The seated man, his bowed back to the room, was engaged in manipulating this apparatus; and suddenly, as a result of manipulation, a voice cut into the silence:

"I hope to see you again on your next visit, Mr. Bronsen," said the voice. It was that of the Greek.

"Sure thing. I'll be here." That was Kearney.

There came a creaking sound of footsteps and the slam of a door. The visitors had gone.

The man at the table disconnected the apparatus and swung about in his revolving chair. A soft black hat lay upon the carpet, with a fur-lined overcoat having a deep astrakhan collar. This man's skin resembled the peel of a dried lemon; his jet-black hair was stretched back from a receding forehead. Half-closed eyes were like slits in the yellow face, and his lips were red and beautifully formed, their redness accentuated by a small, black, bow-shaped mustache which arched above them.

It was a smiling face, but something in it inspired terror in the man upon whom those half-closed eyes were turned. This latter was a stalwart Chinaman, moderately well dressed in European clothes, who might, at some time, have been a sailor. He had the mask-like, immobile features of his race and calling. Only by a slight movement of small, sleney hands, did he display his discomfort.

Slowly, the slit-like eyes in the yellow face of the one who watched him opened and the red lips smiled.

Fully opened, those eyes were terrifying. Some might have found it hard to define wherein their terror lay. Except that they seemed to be super-normally bright, they were, in an animal fashion, fine eyes. Their dreadful quality consisted in one simple difference: their whites were really white—whereas that part of the normal human eye is invariably tinted. The result, being phenomenal, was horrifying.

The man in the revolving chair spoke slowly, and his voice, like his eyes, was super-normal. He was a big man for a Chinese, and fleshy... but he spoke in a key in which Caruso sang!

"What did I tell you, my friend? Your mean soul said, 'It is business.' I said, 'It is a plot.'"

"I was considering Excellency's interests."

"And this," continued the flute-like voice, "is how you consider them. You admit a disguised police officer and a stranger, tonight—tonight, above all other nights!"

"I believed—"

"I never accept excuses. Ah!" A muffled bell rang.

"Open the door. Here is Polodoss."

The Chinaman opened a balze-covered door, admitting the immaculate Greek. As he entered:

"You were wrong, Jo Lung," he said to the one who had opened for him. He turned to the man at the desk. "Excellency was right. The card was certainly obtained by fraud. Of one man I can say nothing, but the other was a detective!"

"Ah!" came the reed voice. And the speaker stood up, his eyes half-closing again. "I am sure of it... I was listening to every word!" He pointed to the apparatus on the table.

"No harm has been done, my lord," the Greek continued. "I was cautious. It is regrettable, but it was remedied. The baleful glance of those half-shut eyes was directed again upon Jo Lung. 'Tonight, it is more than regrettable,' the reed voice declared. 'This is the second mistake of a disastrous day. The first was the shipment of valuable goods in the Wallaroo. My plans, my careful plans—to be destroyed by fools!'

"Notice of change came so late..." The dim bell rang again. Polodoss opened the padded door, and a woman came in.

Her blue-black hair gleamed like a raven's wing. Her long dark eyes were ever so slightly oblique, and she had a petulant red mouth, small and delicately chiseled features, and held her head disdainfully high. Her long, slender neck rose above the collar of the brown ermine coat, which she held tightly about her in a manner to have reminded a critical observer of the once admired Rossetti type. Her complexion was peach-like but dark, and silk-clad ankles and tiny shoes peeping beneath the fringe of a black lace frock had a dainty and patrician elegance.

She was imperially petite, alluring yet menacing. The Greek and Jo Lung stepped aside deferentially as:

"Yu'an," she said, and the voice of this cold woman had a deep, warm, caressing note, "who were those men? I saw them from the stair."

"Come in and shut the door," the Chinaman replied. "Did either of them see you?"

"No, I don't think so."

"Do you—suspect them?"

Polodoss solicitously passed her a card. "This is the introduction they brought, my lady, and Mr. Bernardino had advised us that they were coming."

The woman took the card, glanced at it, and tossed it onto a side table.

"Are you ready to leave, Yu'an?"

"I have a telephone call to make to the Wallaroo," he replied. "There has been much bungling. I must speak to the doctor."

He stooped, dipping his hand, a plump, waxen hand with tapering fingers, into an inside pocket of the heavy fur coat which lay at his feet. Suddenly he glanced up, the china white of his eyes glaring.

"I removed my coat as I entered the warehouse," he said, "and carried it here. I have dropped my notebook."

Something in those words broke through the high disdain of the woman watching him. Where the eyes of Yu'an had gleamed whitely, hers, in opening, grew black, as though the iris distended.

"Your notebook?"

"Yu'an, clutching the arms of the chair, continued to watch her, his drooping lids slowly, slowly covering those ominous eyes. The others were watching her also.

"I said so. It contains... our death warrants!"

The woman clasped her slender throat—a curious gesture. "Ah!" she cried—"I am blind! It must be! I saw one of those men pick up a small notebook! It was like yours—it must have been yours! On the steps from the Silver room."

Followed a moment of tense silence. All were watching the Greek.

"You saw this Polodoss?" Yu'an whispered in flute-like tones.

The Greek was very pale. "I had stepped back. I remember turning up the light on the stair."

Yu'an, his eyes now apparently quite closed, turned in the woman's direction. "Open the door, go down to those stairs, quickly, quickly, and tell me if you decided yourself."

Some, but not all her disdain deserting her, the woman turned, opened the door, and swept out of the office.

"Jo Lung," Yu'an continued, "follow her. Your life and mine depend upon what I tell you. If those pigs have found and taken that notebook, our necks are hung upon a slither thread. There is fog—but they must be overtaken. That book must be back here, upon this table, within an hour."

Jo Lung moved silently towards the door.

"Two men," Yu'an added.

"All shall go—"

"And send for the Adder..."

As Jo Lung disappeared, Yu'an turned his apparently closed eyes in the direction of Polodoss. At mention of that name—"the Adder"—the Greek's face had grown clammy with perspiration. It trickled down from his hair into his name—"the Adder"—the Greek's face had grown clammy with perspiration. It trickled down from his hair into his thick eyebrows.

And Yu'an began to laugh. He did not show his teeth in laughter. His red lips merely seemed to thicken—and his eyes closed as he laughed—high hideous squeals, like the amplified note of a bat...

The Flannagan Tobacco Grading Bill

An open letter to tobacco farmers by J. C. Lanier, former tobacco specialist for the AAA, the department that drew up and sponsored the present tobacco control programs.

Please allow me through the columns of your newspaper to express my opposition to the so-called Flannagan tobacco grading bill, which is now pending in Washington before the house committee on agriculture.

If this bill becomes a law it will compel all tobacco growers who sell their tobacco at auction to have it government graded prior to its sale. It does not provide for compulsory grading where tobacco is sold otherwise than at auction. The bill further provides that the cost of the grading service shall be charged against the buyers. It also gives to the secretary of agriculture the power to designate those markets where tobacco must be graded. Any grower who refuses to have his tobacco graded by a government official will be guilty of a misdemeanor, which is punishable by a fine or imprisonment. The effect of this bill will be to deprive a grower of the right to sell his tobacco as he sees fit. It will compel him to submit his product to grading by a government grader, whether he wishes to do so or not.

The contents of this bill are not generally known, and many farmers have been influenced by their county agents to advocate the passage of this measure, without knowing what the measure proposed to do. This organized propaganda by government officials to enlist support for this measure is highly effective; and it is time that those who are opposed to this bill should give expression to their opposition to it.

An examination of this bill discloses many features abhorrent to the average farmer. It is my purpose in this article to analyze the bill and to point out these objectionable features, so that growers may be advised just what the passage of the bill will mean to them. The most objectionable feature of this bill is the compulsory feature, which will compel all growers selling on markets designated by the secretary of agriculture to have their tobacco inspected and certified by an authorized government grader. Many farmers do not desire their tobacco to be graded by government officials, since they know from actual experience that it is worthless, and in many instances positively injurious, where tobacco is sold at auction to representatives of the tobacco companies. They know from actual experience that the opinion of a government grader, who is paid to inspect every basket of tobacco and to buy each tobacco on his own judgment, will do no more than provide that tobacco shall be sold by grades, nor does it provide that cognizance must be taken by the buyer of the grade indicated by the government grader. There is no provision in this law or in any other law by which a buyer can be compelled to pay any price per grade for his tobacco purchases. The grading provided by this bill, therefore, will at best merely indicate the opinion of a government grader, which opinion may or may not be correct, and which opinion is not binding upon either the buyer or the seller.

There is a massed opposition among tobacco growers to the compulsory features of this bill. In spite of the intense activities of county agents and extension men, who are diligently lobbying for the bill, an investigation among farmers will show that a large majority of them are violently opposed to being compelled to submit their tobacco to government grading. Not so long ago more than a hundred growers left their homes and farms and went to Washington, at their own expense, to express their personal opposition to this bill. These men were outstanding farmers who knew conditions and who were familiar with government grading. They represented the highest type of citizenship in our country and represented a class that can not be bought by the tobacco companies, nor coerced by county agents, nor intimidated by government officials. Also, more than twenty-five thousand farmers have signed petitions protesting against this grading bill and double this number could easily be secured if efforts were put forth along this line. The opposition of these men to this measure can not be discounted by a mere statement by the sponsor of the bill that these men are "warehouse pets." It is not at all convincing to the growers to tell them that those who are opposing this bill are their enemies, since it can be established in every community where the contents of this bill are known that the farmers themselves generally oppose it.

If government grading were desired by the farmers, or if it would benefit them, it should not be necessary to write into this bill a mandatory provision, with a criminal penalty for the refusal of a farmer to accept this service. If government grading were advantageous to the growers, they and the warehousemen would be clamoring for the service, instead of opposing it. It is well known that wherever grading has been offered to the growers on a voluntary basis it has proved unsatisfactory and of no value, and has not been accepted by the growers.

Where grading has been made compulsory under state laws, it has proved a failure. In the state of Maryland there has been a compulsory grading law in effect, but only a few days ago, because of its total failure to accomplish any good, it was abolished by the Maryland legislature. In the dark-furred areas of Virginia, where a compulsory law exists, the service has been a dismal failure.

The tobacco production adjustment program, which has brought untold blessings to the tobacco growers, has been a voluntary program whose success has been made possible by the voluntary co-operation of almost all the growers. These same growers have willingly co-operated with the AAA will not be satisfied now to have this harsh and arbitrary compulsory measure forced down their unwilling throats, nor will they force those who force it upon them. Especially do the farmers of the Carolinas and Georgia and other tobacco-producing states resent the attempt by Mr. Flannagan, representing a district that grows less than three million pounds of tobacco, to force his ideas upon them based neither upon a knowledge of the industry nor upon any practical experience.

Congressman Burch of Virginia has offered an amendment to the bill, which follows closely the referendum clauses in the Rankin act in the act. Under this amendment, the farmers in the various tobacco-producing areas will be permitted to vote upon the adoption of compulsory grading. The amendment is entirely in line with the principles upon which the present agricultural adjustment programs have been based; yet those who are clamoring for the enactment of the compulsory bill are bitterly opposed to allowing the farmers themselves to express their sentiments on this legislation.

The enactment of this bill without the referendum clause in it will certainly raise a storm of protest throughout the entire tobacco-producing belt, and will have far-reaching ill effects on the continuation of the present voluntary program. The tobacco situation at the present time is well in hand and, as a general rule, prices are satisfactory and farmers are satisfied to be let alone.

There is absolutely no present necessity of muddying the waters with this kind of legislation, which any man familiar with tobacco knows will be of no value to the tobacco growers.

Not only is the bill objectionable because of its compulsory features, but it is objectionable because of the expenses of administration, which will be a heavy burden upon the back of the tobacco growers. The bill contains a provision that the cost of the service shall be charged against the buyers, but it is beyond the confines of reason to believe that the buyers interests will absorb the expenditure for a service which not even the proponents of the measure assert will be of any benefit to the buyers. It has been estimated by the proponents of this measure that the cost of this service will not be less than $1,200,000 per year. If this figure is correct, it inevitably follows that this sum will be paid by the tobacco growers, in lessened returns for their tobacco. There can be no doubt but that under this bill this tremendous cost will be levied upon the tobacco itself and will, therefore, be paid by the tobacco growers. And for what?

If figures and statistics governing government grading of tobacco tended to show that this service added to the cash returns of the tobacco growers, this expense might be justified upon that ground. But the story as told by statistics conclusively shows that government grading has added nothing to the prices received by farmers for their tobacco. On markets where government grading has been in operation, the statistics clearly indicate no price advantage accruing to the growers because of this service.

Government grading of tobacco is no new thing. During the season of 1933 all tobacco sold at auction on the Eastern and Oxford markets in the middle belt of North Carolina, and on the Farmville, Smithfield and Washington markets in the bright leaf belt of North Carolina, was government graded. The table of averages published by the North Carolina department of agriculture shows that tobacco markets in 1933 shows that prices on those markets having government grading were no higher or lower than prices on markets operating without government grading. The following are the official figures for those years on all markets selling four million pounds: The Durham market, ungraded, averaged 18.67. The Louisville market, ungraded, averaged 16.96. The Farmville market, ungraded, averaged 17.28. The Oxford market, graded, averaged 17.28. The Henderson market, graded, averaged 17.84.

In the east Carolina belt in 1933, the Washington market, graded, averaged 14.30. The Smithfield market, graded, averaged 14.86. The Farmville market, graded, averaged 15.54. The Kingston market, ungraded, averaged 16.01. The Robersonville market, ungraded, averaged 15.21. The Rocky Mount market, ungraded, averaged 16.34. The Greenville market, ungraded, averaged 16.82. The Wilson market, ungraded, averaged 16.82. The Goldsboro market, ungraded, averaged 15.59. These figures cover all markets in this belt selling more than seven million pounds.

During the 1934 selling season, one market in the east Tennessee belt was completely government graded, while the other markets adjacent to that market and selling under similar conditions were not graded. Published figures show that the graded market averaged 15.33, while all other markets of comparable size in that area averaged over 16 cents.

The statement recently made by the sponsor of this bill that government grading has added 10 to 15 per cent to the total returns to tobacco growers is ridiculous and absurd in the face of these facts. Every statistic covering tobacco sales proves to the contrary. There is no foundation in fact to show that government grading has ever added the slightest amount to the prices received by growers for their tobacco.

Government grading as proposed under this Flannagan bill is not desired by the growers. On those markets where government grading has been available during the past several years, the tobacco farmers who patronized those markets have clearly indicated that they do not desire this service. Last year, on markets where government graders were available, not more than 10 per cent of the farmers availed themselves of the opportunity to have their tobacco government graded. In areas where the service has been available it has been discarded, because the growers themselves have discovered, after giving the service a trial, that it was of no value to them. Hundreds of farmers have made public statements that they have tried government grading and that it was not of any advantage to them.

That government grading is not desired by the growers is further demonstrated on the Lake City, S. C., the Danville, Va., and the Smithfield, N. C., markets. About four years ago, at the invitation of the warehousemen, a government grading service was instituted on these markets, and every facility was placed at the disposal of the graders, in order to give the system a fair and impartial trial. Warehousemen advocated the adoption of government grading, in the hope that it would result in higher prices to their customers. Since warehouse commissions depend to a large extent upon price averages received for tobacco, it is most obvious that any service tending to increase the price averages would be favored by the warehousemen. After a thorough trial of the service on those markets, the farmers almost entirely discarded it, and although special efforts were made to induce them to have their tobacco so graded, practically none of the farmers in those areas will accept grading. The sentiment among growers who have tried the government grading is almost unanimous against it.

This is true: If this bill is passed, and this grading service rammed down the throats of the tobacco growers without their consent, it will contribute most largely to a breakdown in the present program. The attempt to force this compulsory bill upon the growers is a blatant attempt to make a political saddle horse out of the successful tobacco program, in which those who are sponsoring this bill had no part. The tobacco farmers ought to know that this bill is not being sponsored by those who have worked with the growers to perfect the present tobacco program. Neither Mr. Flannagan, the sponsor of this bill, nor the bureau of agricultural economics, that drew the bill, had any part in the formation or institution of the present tobacco production adjustment program. These are the former officials of co-operative marketing associations, who now so earnestly favor this bill, claim credit for the great improvement in present conditions among the tobacco growers. I can not believe that the bill is favored either by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration or by the secretary of agriculture.

It is being favored, however, and actively sponsored by the New York Tobacco Exchange, an organization formed for the purpose of speculating in tobacco. So far, tobacco has escaped the manipulations and the clutches of the Wall Street gamblers. This exchange can not operate unless tobacco is government graded and, therefore, this gambling outfit, of which a former official of the Kentucky pool is now the chairman, is actively advocating the passage of this Flannagan grading bill, in order that they may fasten upon the farmers' tobacco crop the blighting hand of the gamblers and speculators and Wall Street manipulators. It takes the reason to believe that this crowd is advocating this bill because they love the farmer.

Borrowing a quotation from Mr. Flannagan's recent radio address, if former officials of discredited co-operative associations, together with Wall Street speculators, have joined hands with Mr. Flannagan to press for the enactment of this compulsory measure for the benefit of the "little grower," the "one-legged man," and the "ordinary grower," then it is time for all tobacco growers to follow the advice of Mr. Flannagan when he admonished them to "beware of the Greeks bearing gifts."

There are many other reasons why this bill should not be enacted, but if for no other reason, it should be killed in order to prevent the establishment of a gambling exchange to deal in farmers' tobacco. In conclusion: It is a far cry from the voluntary co-operation so splendidly given by the tobacco farmers to the compulsory provisions of this law. It ought not to be a criminal offense for a farmer to dispose of his product as he sees fit without interference from a horde of men appointed from Washington. I and a multitude of other tobacco growers are satisfied with present conditions. We do not desire that our tobacco be governed by government officials. But above all, we do not want this law imposed upon us by interests foreign to our interests, until the tobacco growers at least have had an opportunity to express themselves on this measure.

I agree with Mr. Flannagan in only one of his statements made over the radio, and that is that I, too, want an honest expression from the tobacco growers on this question. If he is sincere in this statement, he should immediately convene a meeting of the representatives of government graders, in the amendment as proposed by the Burch amendment.

PROGRESS MADE WITH LIME PROGRAM
Boone county farmers are rendering strong support to the K. R. R. C. lime program according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The sign-up goal of 6000 tons set up by the K. R. R. C. is expected to be reached by the committee meeting at Burlington, Friday night, May 10th.

The K. R. R. C. lime program offers Boone county farmers the greatest opportunity to secure ground agricultural limestone for soil improvement ever offered. The contract calls for stone to be crushed for farmers at a cost of seventy five cents per ton, more or less not to exceed 10 per cent more or a maximum of 62.5 cents per ton. Relief labor is supplied to do all work involved in gathering stone and its preparation for crushing. Where relief labor is not involved, the cost is 21.5 cents less per ton.

Those farmers who have used agricultural limestone for the production of grass and legume crops and for soil improvement know its value and are the first to list their orders. Limestone properly used forms the first foundation stone for soil improvement. Every farm of any size in the county can profitably use 50 to several hundred tons of crushed stone. Where money for crushing is not available K. R. R. C. credit may be secured.

Farmers interested in this work should notify their local committeeman or the County Agent's Office in Burlington before Friday night of this week. More than 1000 tons were listed at the County Agent's Office the past week.

Last week's paper gave a list of local committeemen. To this list should have been added August Trapp and Hugh Stephens for Carlton precinct, and Melvin Moore and J. L. Jones, Jr., for Hamilton precinct.

HOW LONG CAN WE "TAKE IT?"
There is at least one calling that hasn't been depressed during the past few years. Not only has it held its own, but it has managed to go forward and put more and more good round dollars in the till. That calling is Tax Gathering.

According to a recent editorial in the Los Angeles Examiner, officeholders of the country now receive about $5,000,000,000 a year in taxpayer salaries—and the mount is steadily rising.

Public payrolls list over 3,250,000 people—and that list is constantly lengthening.

Last year over 90,000 new names were added to the Federal payroll alone—in addition to increased political employment in practically all of the 175,000 subordinate governments the country has to support.

Every citizen has to chip in to pay the bill the politicians create. The people pay—directly, through income, property and security taxes. They pay a larger amount indirectly, through taxes levied on everything they use—from a pack of cigarettes to the winter fuel. A recent estimate places the cost of government at over thirteen thousand million dollars a year—nearly one-third of the nation's income.

In the words of The Examiner, "All the unnecessary governments and all the superfluous politicians are demanding and imposing more and more taxes on industry, more and more taxes on productive pursuits, more and more taxes on the public generally." The American people have shown they can "take it" when it comes to paying taxes—but serious observers are beginning to wonder how long the people will permit official waste and extravagance to absorb money that is needed for jobs, industrial expansion, home-building—in brief, for recovery.

lot boxes was discovered, he says. The election laws in existence before passage of the run-off primary bill provided that all ballots after the count was completed, should remain in the ballot boxes until four months after the election. The run-off primary bill, taking no note of this provision, calls for a second primary early in September, one month after the August primary, if in any of the nine state races no candidate receive an actual majority of all the vote polled. Since the ballots in the August primary must remain in the boxes four months, a complete set of new boxes must be provided for the September primary.

MARINE SERVICE
AFLOAT AND ASHORE
Macon, Ga., May 1.—A limited number of well qualified applicants between 18 and 25 years of age, will be accepted in May by the U. S. Marine Corps District Recruiting Station in the Municipal Auditorium here. Interested persons can obtain full information and application blanks by writing Lieut. Col. H. W. Stone, the officer in charge.
Marines serve afloat and ashore with infantry, artillery, machine gun, motor transport, signal, and aviation units and have the opportunity, as vacancies occur, to be considered for transfer to the activity for which they are best qualified. The most able applicants are selected to fill the vacancies. A very high average of performance in the Marine Corps, results from this careful selection.

A SURVEY OF KENTUCKY
There are thirteen prehistoric Indian mounds and other sites in Boone county, Kentucky, and are described in detail in "An Archaeological Survey of Kentucky," a one thousand page volume, published by the University of Ky., which has just come from the press. This publication has the distinction not only of being one of the most comprehensive surveys of its kind to be published for any state in the union, but is also one of the most elaborate monographs to be published by the University.
The authors, William S. Webb and William D. Funkhouser, are well known in Kentucky and elsewhere, and their book is the result of more than 20 years of exploration in the state.

Seventy-one county maps and 106 illustrations are important features of the volume. For each county an outline of the physiography is presented, followed by descriptions of the burial sites and the mounds. The various artifacts and relics including arrowheads, banner stones, hominy holes, beads, ancient jewelry, all come in for their share of discussion.

Copies of the publication may be obtained by addressing the University of Kentucky, Lexington.

5550 TONS

LIMESTONE LISTED IN K. R. C. LIME PROJECT

Boone county farmers are interested in soil improvement and use of agricultural limestone according to the reports of the soil improvement committeemen at Burlington last Friday night. More than thirty committeemen and leading farmers were present at the meeting.

Reports of committeemen on the K. R. C. lime project showed that a total of 5330 tons of stone for crushing had been listed and that 2660 more tons could be secured immediately. Reports of committeemen absent are expected to enlarge amounts listed.

The following tons by precincts were listed by committeemen present:

Rabbit Hash—250 tons; Burlington—225 tons; Hebron—700 tons; Petersburg—No report; Grant—350 tons; Hamilton—No report; Beaver—360 tons; Union—100 tons; Florence—No report; Walton—680 tons; Verona—550 tons; Constance—40 tons; Bullittsville—350 tons; Office Sign-Up—176. Total—5330 tons.

The immediate completion of the organization and the starting of the lime project was ordered by those present: Hubert Conner, J. P. Vest, Howard Huey, Joel Gray, H. G. Hightower, O. W. Cleek and W. H. Rucker were elected as an executive committee with Judge J. M. Lassing, representative of the County government, to complete the set up with the K. R. C. for getting the project started.

The above project conducted in cooperation with the Kentucky Rural Rehabilitation Corporation involves the use of relief labor in preparing the stone to be crushed at a cost of 75 cents per ton to the farmer. This represents the cheapest price that has ever been offered. Requests for crushing should be listed with your local committeeman or at the County Agent's office in Burlington immediately.

HEBRON TO HAVE A PUBLIC PARK

The movement which started a few weeks ago to make a park of the Rucker lot in Hebron is showing fine results. Quite a nice lot of shrubbery and other plants were put out last Saturday afternoon. This work should not stop until the park is made a pretty and inviting spot, which will improve the appearance of that town. There will be another meeting at Hebron next Saturday afternoon. There is to be some grubbing of trees of small growth and it is hoped there will be more men donate their help.

GRANT COUNTY

SURPASSES ALL OTHERS, EXCEPT ONE, IN TOTAL INDEBTEDNESS

Frankfort, Ky., May 9.—The total indebtedness of Grant county amounts to $515,229.49, Nat B. Sewell, state inspector and examiner, said today in a report to Governor Lafoon.

Sewell pointed out "two-thirds of all the counties are larger in area and three-fourths are larger in population; fifty other counties have a larger valuation of property for purposes of public revenue and only one county in the state has a larger amount of outstanding interest-bearing warrants."

The indebtedness he said, "represents a per capita of indebtedness for the county of more than $52, while that for the state as a whole is approximately $13."

"It would be necessary," he declared, "to levy a tax of $3.05 upon every acre of land in the county in order to produce sufficient revenue to liquidate all present public indebtedness."

However, Sewell said, county officials were endeavoring to refund the indebtedness represented by county warrants by "issuing 4 per cent bonds payable in equal installments over a period of 20 years in lieu of the 6 per cent warrants now outstanding."

4-H CLUBS COMPETE
Boone County 4-H Clubs will compete for demonstration team, and sewing club girls style show honors at Burlington High School Friday morning, May 17th at 9:00 A. M., according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

The winners of the contests will represent the county at Junior Week held at the University of Kentucky, Lexington, June 3rd to the 8th.

EARLY & DANIEL CO. AWARDS 4-H CLUB SCHOLARSHIP

The Early & Daniel Feed Company has announced the awarding to Boone County 4-H Clubs a $15.00 scholarship trip to Junior Week at the University of Kentucky, June 3rd to 8th. The award will go to one of the winners of the County 4-H Contests held at Burlington next Friday according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

This is the fifth consecutive year that the above Company has rendered their splendid cooperation. The three hundred Boone County 4-H Club members and sixty adult leaders appreciate the help and wish to express their thanks for the unsolicited cooperation in this agricultural and home economics improvement program.

SCHOOL BOARD

OF KENTON COUNTY TAKES INSTRUCTIONS FROM STRIKING STUDENT BODY

A victory was recorded for approximately 700 striking Kenton County school pupils when members of the Kenton County Board of Education, in a special meeting at Independence, Ky., Monday night, voted unanimously to retain N. T. Hooks, principal of the Independence graded and high schools.

Approximately 350 Independence school children refused to attend their classes last Friday when they learned that Hooks was not tendered a contract for the coming year and that G. K. Gregory, principal of the Butler (Ky.) High School was selected to succeed the present principal.

Voicing their disapproval to such action, more than half of the Independence pupils went on a strike, and the number of strikers increased Monday morning when the classes were opened. Delegations of Independence strikers traveled to Piner, Ky., where approximately 350 students in the Piner graded and high schools joined in the fight to retain Principal Hooks.

Efforts also were made to secure the support of the students at Crescent Springs and Park Hills, but this failed when Principal Jas. Caywood at Crescent Springs refused to permit the Independence delegation into the school.

Return To School
A special meeting of the Kenton County Board of Education was called Monday night, and the members immediately voted to rescind their previous action of offering the principal that Hooks would be given a contract for another year.

A delegation of striking pupils attended the meeting, and appearing satisfied with the action of the board, agreed to have all of the "strikers" return to school Tuesday. A check revealed that all of the pupils were back in classes at Independence and Piner Tuesday morning.

WHEN SPRING IS IN THE AIR

This is the time of year when that seasonal "disease," spring fever, runs its course. One of its more common manifestations is an urge to clean up one's property, in order to get rid of winter's accumulation of rubbish, both indoors and out.

These individual clean-up campaigns are usually inaugurated for the purpose of improving a home's physical appearance—but, whether the property-owner realizes toward fattening his pocketbook, as much as they eliminate many ordinary and unnecessary fire hazards.

The attic is one of the places in the home where odds and ends accumulate—and it is also one of the commonest starting places for residential fires. That accumulation of ancient newspapers—those dog-eared magazines—those old clothes which you'll never wear again—that broken down furniture, all offer an invitation to fire. Start your clean-up campaign by giving these cast-offs to the needy either directly or through some local charitable organization, where they can give comfort and use again. Then burn the sheer rubbish—and be sure to accomplish that latter task on a windless day, with the aid of an incinerator.

Closets should be subjected to the same process. And the chances are that your basement is in about the same state of disorder as your attic. Due to the nearness of the heating plant, basements are one of the most prolific sources of fire and should be kept free of papers, rags and improperly stored inflammables.

Spring is likewise an excellent time for having the furnace and heating equipment gone over, to prepare it for fall. Another worthwhile job is inspection of electric wiring.

Spring is here! Clean up—lest you burn up.

COUNTY CLERKS

NEED NOT BUY ADDITIONAL BALLOT BOXES FOR RUN-OFF PRIMARY

Frankfort, Ky.—County clerks need not purchase additional ballot boxes for the September run-off primary election, but may use the same boxes that are utilized in the initial August primary, Kentucky Court of Appeals held in affirming judgment of Jefferson Circuit Court.

The decision was handed down in a test case brought by Jefferson Circuit Court to prevent County Clerk John P. Grieb from purchasing $2,500 worth of additional ballot boxes for the September primary.

Grieb contended the law required that ballots cast in the August primary be preserved until 10 days before the November election, thereby making it impossible to use the August oboxes in September.

Other County Clerks were reported to be contemplating the purchase of approximately $30,000 worth of additional boxes in the event the Court of Appeals upheld Grieb's contention.

Time Limit Defined
Ballots cast in August, Appellate Court said in its opinion, must be preserved only until they are certified by the Secretary of State and until the time allowed for filing contests has expired.

"It was not the intention of the Legislature," the opinion read, "in enacting the run-off primary election law, this year, 'to unnecessarily burden' the taxpayers with the unnecessary expense of purchasing a second set of ballot boxes for use at the September run-off primary."

Earl Mudman, of Woolper, was a business visitor in Burlington on Monday morning. Mr. Mudman says he has one of the best crops of alfalfa he ever raised.

LARGE AMOUNT

PAID BY KENTUCKY IN INTERNAL REVENUE

Frankfort, Ky., May 13.—There was paid into the Federal treasury from Kentucky last year in internal revenue $86,498,015.36. Only 10 other states in the union paid more into the treasury.

Within the year there was returned to Kentucky for relief of the unemployed $16,515,781, less than 20 per cent of the sum collected in Federal taxes from the state.

Kentucky is below average of the states in the amount contributed to supplement Federal relief funds. The average is said to be 12 per cent from the states and 8 per cent local contributions. Kentucky has contributed 6 per cent, and local contributions have been 8 per cent. Kentucky taxpayers paid $6,325,332.03 in income tax in 1934, of which corporations paid $3,333,09. Agricultural adjustment taxes collected in Kentucky totaled $6,684,467.35. Miscellaneous internal revenue amounted to $73,488,215. Manufactured tobacco produced a great portion of that sum.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Dr. and Mrs. Marshall K. Denny of Lancaster, Kentucky, announce the engagement of their daughter, Shirley Hudson, to Mr. Philip Tallafiero, of Erlanger, Kentucky. Mr. Tallafiero is associated with the business interests of Erlanger and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Tallafiero of that city. Miss Denny is a member of the faculty of the Lloyd High School.

FLORENCE 4-H CLUB

The members of the Florence X-L-all sewing project met at the home of their adult leaders last week.

Unit one and two sewing members met last Thursday afternoon at Mrs. McHenry's home, and unit three and four sewing members met Thursday of last week at the home of Mrs. Ryle.

It was reported that both groups are going to be helpful to make their sewing project for this year a great success.

Mary H. Butts, Club Reporter

Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Porter and family were Mr. and Mrs. Otis Rouse, of Petersburg, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Rouse, of Covington, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rouse of Richmond.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Rouse, Mr. and Mrs. Wilford Rouse and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Karl Rouse were calling on Mr. F. H. Rouse Sunday night.

119th ANNUAL ### MEETING OF AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY

A distribution of 7,517,548 Bibles, Testaments, and portions of the Bible during 1934 in 120 languages and dialects and in more than forty countries was reported at the 119th annual meeting of the American Bible Society held in New York City on Thursday, May 9. The report stated that since the institution of the Society in 1816, a total of more than 281,000,000 Scripture volumes had been placed in circulation.

The circulation in the U. S. was greatest in the middle west, more than a million copies of Bibles, Testaments, and portions being distributed from Chicago. Over 30,000 New Testaments were supplied to the chaplains in the camps of the Civilian Conservation Corps. Circulation among the colored people was larger than in any year since the beginning of special recognition of the Negro population a third of a century ago. Distribution of complete Bibles through the entire United States was thirty percent greater than in 1933.

It was reported that the total number of languages and dialects in which Scripture translation has occurred now reaches 954, the entire Bible having been translated into 175 languages and the new Testament into 374.

That Universal Bible Sunday was observed more widely than ever was indicated through the receipt of more requests from more denominations for more material than in any previous year.

Income from the supporting churches increased thirteen percent but a falling off in gifts from individual donors occurred.

Operating on a budget slightly over $700,000, exclusive of funds received and expended abroad, the financial year ended without a deficit.

157 CORN-HOG

CONTRACTS SIGNED BY BOONE COUNTY FARMERS

One hundred and fifty seven AAA Corn-Hog contracts signed by producers last Friday and Saturday according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

The above contracts represent those who signed contracts last year and have no change in their corn or hog bases this year. Thirty seven producers in which some change in either corn or hog base or who signed applications for contracts for the first time this year will sign contracts in the near future.

The above 157 contracts will be forwarded to the State Board of Review at Louisville this week, audited and forwarded to Washington for the first adjustment payment.

Miss Atha Rouse, a nurse at the Bethesda Hospital, Cincinnati, attended the funeral of her cousin Mrs. Frank Rouse last Thursday, and also spent a few hours with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Rouse.

FLORENCE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

TO GIVE SOCIAL JUNE 3
The ladies of the Florence Christian church will give a strawberry and ice cream social on June 8th. The social will hold forth from 5 P. M. to 9 P. M., on church lawn. Salad, sandwiches and coffee will also be served. In addition, a bazaar and fish pond will be added attractions.

BELLEVIEW BAPTIST MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETS

Dr. T. W. Ayers, a Pioneer of Healing—Mrs. Zora Scott; Grace McBride, the Devoted Nurse—Dorothy Cason.

Bro. Smith gave a short talk on personal soul winning and the song "Fling out the Banner" was sung by group.

Next meeting will be Thursday, June 6th.

ATTRACTIVE COLOR EFFECTS OBTAINED WITH UNUSUAL ROOF

A process which deposits a layer of cork on the underside of asphalt shingles has been perfected by a leading roofing manufacturer. These shingles combine weather protection and roof insulation in one unit which can be applied at one labor cost. They have an outer surface of durable slate that is fire-retarding and weather-proof, and the under surface of work is said to keep the home cooler in summer and warmer in winter, with resulting saving in fuel costs. These shingles have the further advantage of attractive appearance. Being extra thick, they cast deep shadow lines and are manufactured in several colors which can be used singly or in combination to produce practically any desired color effect.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS

FOR THE CONSOLIDATED TELEPHONE COMPANY

The following new subscribers have been added to the list of the Consolidated Telephone Co. ## BIG BONE BAPTIST CHURCH ORGANIZATIONS HOLD MEETING

The W. M. S. and Y. W. A. of Big Bone Baptist church met May 9th with Mrs. Kenneth Aylor to hold its regular business meeting. Everyone had a wonderful day, there being about 18 members and quite a few visitors, totalling about 53 in all present.

The morning was spent singing over different events which were to take place that day. The time seems very long from one month to next when we can have our splendid meeting again.

At the noon hour a very delicious dinner was spread in honor of Mrs. Aylor's birthday this making everyone enjoy the event even more.

At 1:30 the meeting was called to order by our worthy president Mrs. Bertha Huff, a song "the touch of his hand on mine," was rendered by the group and a talk by Mrs. May Harris. Our pastor Bro. R. A. Johnson, also gave a talk.

We had a call for new members and Mrs. Etta Jones responded to the call which of course made all of our hearts rejoice.

We are expecting to have Mrs. Sleets with us the 2nd Thursday in June to teach the "Book of Asia." We are looking forward to this lady being with us and would be glad if any of the neighboring societies could be with us to take the book.

Our business meeting will be one week earlier on account of the meeting named above. It will be at Mrs. Tom Hamilton's the first Thursday, June 6th. All members are urged to attend as we are going to sew for the Orphans Home.

Mrs. Paul Aylor, Chairman.

BURLINGTON BRIDGE CLUB

Mrs. Newton Sullivan entertained at her home Tuesday with a bridge luncheon. The guests were Mrs. Carroll Cropper, Kirtley Cropper, George Porter, Jno. Laing, Jr., D. R. Blythe, G. W. Tolin, T. Utz. First prize was won by Mr. G. W. Tolin and second by Mrs. Carroll Cropper.

Robert Clore received one of the major awards in the National Contests sponsored by Waters-Genter Division of the McGraw Electric Co., for salespeople selling their products. Mr. Clore entered a contest given by his company of writing one of the best theses.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Fowler were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Fowler and daughter of Hebron, Monday night.

Little Marjorie Lee Sullivan has been on the sick list the past week.

OSCAR VEST

TO MAKE RACE FOR RAILROAD COMMISSIONER - CARROLLTON RESIDENT ANNOUNCES AS DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION TO OFFICE

Oscar Vest, of Carrollton, is a candidate for Railroad Commissioner in this, the Second District, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary to be held on August 3rd, 1935.

His formal announcement follows:

In seeking re-election and Democratic Re-nomination for Railroad Commissioner in the Second District, I do so wholly upon the record I have made in the conduct of that office. During my service as a member of the Kentucky Railroad Commission, I have at all times carefully guarded the interests of the farmers, manufacturers and shippers and the records will show that I have been instrumental in bringing about a reduction in freight rates and improved conditions. As a manufacturer and shipper of ice, I am fully alive to and understand the needs of the class I represent.

There are a number of important matters now pending before the Railroad Commission which are of the greatest interest to shippers and I would like to have a part in making them effective.

To the Democrats of the Second District, I am deeply grateful and I trust that I may merit a continuance of their confidence and support, pledging them faithful and efficient service. Also do I bespeak for my candidacy the cooperation of the farmers, manufacturers and shippers of the District. Keep a manufacturer and shipper on the Railroad Commission.

While I shall endeavor to see as many of the voters as possible, in the meantime, I solicit and will deeply appreciate the support and influence of every one in the Primary.

OSCAR VEST.

WALTON MEN

STAGE PITCHED BATTLE AT TWO-WAY HOUSE

A free-for-all pitched battle was staged at the Two-Way House Friday night between four men from Walton and others who had gone to the road house to dance.

What, with the breaking of beer bottles, beer mugs and chairs by the parties engaged in the battle, little remained that made the dance hall appear to be a nice quiet place.

The story goes that no one really knew what the fight was all about. The exchange of a few hot words between two men brought others to their rescue only to get into the fighting too.

It is said that Fred Price, proprietor, was called to separate the fighters and his reply was, "Can't come right now, I'm looking a hamburger." So, others were called and after making four arrests, quietude reigned.

The men arrested on charge of disorderly conduct gave names of Herbert Shears, Jim Cleek, Harold Conrad and Harold Shears, all of Walton. After a night in jail they were released on bond.

Mr. Harold Benham, of Baltimore, Maryland, is here for a few weeks visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Hempling, and to be present for the graduation exercises of the Hebron High School, of which her nephew, Mr. Vaughn Hempling is one of the graduates. Mrs. Benham, a former Boone-co. school teacher, continues an interest in the progress of the schools.

GROW YOUR OWN FOOD

Wise this year is the man, especially in the town or country, who can obtain enough ground to grow at least a portion of the food requirements of his family.

Food prices are higher than they have been for five years. And they will go higher. Protests by consumers will do little good. For it is not a case of profiteering. It is a case of shortages, first induced by crop curtailment, and later aggravated by the severe drought of last summer.

Consumers should realize that there can be no material reduction in food costs at least this year, probably next. Protests will be useless, so the wise man will do the next best thing. This is to grow what he can for himself and his family. And this is comparatively easy in the country and smaller centers of population, where necessary ground is not hard to get.

HOME TOWN BASEBALL

While the ball parks of the larger cities are thronged by cheering crowds, the star performance of these athletic heroes do not mean so much to the average town as the little old game between rival villages, schools, factories.

The little home town ball games on a thousand grounds throughout our land are a democratic school in all the lessons which baseball teaches, and a democratic pleasure ground where every American boy and sport lover has his chance. The boy who longs for athletic thrills may not be able to find his way to the more or less distant city where the kings of the diamond perform their mighty wall-ops. But at least he can get on some school or home team or try for it.

If the suppleness and science of baseball exist in some degree in his mind and hand, he will make his own place in his little world and acquire a new object in life. Every town and every school ought to have a ball team, and business men, students, and the people generally should back it up, and root for it with cheers and cash.

BATTLING ADVERSITY

The American farmer is learning the truth of the old saying that "Troubles never come singly."

Last year the most disastrous drought of recent times gripped a vast area that normally is the most productive in the nation, and destroyed grain, livestock and other produce. This year dust storms are being equally destructive.

Adversity such as this demands the most aggressive, intelligent and courageous action possible. It calls on every quality of mind and spirit the farmer possesses. And, it tests to the limit the farmer's principal weapon in his fight for stability—the agricultural co-operatives.

The co-ops and their members are not faltering. They are not giving in. As problems increase and grow, they simply work harder. Questions of production of price levels, of supply and demand, of governmental policy toward the farmers, are being subjected to the microscope of hard logic.

Under these conditions, it is impossible to believe that the farmer will not pull through. And when he does, and the farm skies clear once more, he will have added an inspiring page to agricultural history.

WHISKEY TAKES THE STEERING WHEEL

In a recent series of graphic bulletins, the National Safety Council points to a tremendous increase in drunken driving during the past year, and to a substantial gain in the number of deaths and injuries due to mixing alcohol and gasoline. The first twelve months of repeal may have been beneficial to some. Severe is the drunken driver problem, it has become doubly severe now.

The best statistics obtainable indicate that five to ten per cent of both drivers and pedestrians involved in traffic accidents are under the influence of liquor. These statistics, in the belief of the Council, understates matters, since a multitude of accidents occur in which drinking is a factor but is not reported for one reason or another. A short time ago a thorough survey was made of 119 accidents involving 116 injuries and fatalities—and it showed that in 60 per cent of the accidents alcohol was involved.

Reports from traffic departments throughout the nation back up the fact that drunken driving is showing an astonishing gain. Drunken driving arrests amount to from 20 to 100 per cent more than they did a year ago, and police authorities likewise state that a rising percentage of accidents can be ascribed to whiskey.

Here is a problem that involves the health, life and property of every citizen. It is a problem that must be fought by us all, drys and wets alike. Under the best of conditions, highways and streets are potentially dangerous—and they become slaughter-houses when whiskey takes the steering wheel.

CAN'T BLIND CHILDREN

(Daily News, Saginaw, Mich.)
We sometimes overlook the fact that what the children learn in school room is only a part of their education. Recently the board of education in a middle western industrial city appointed a committee to make a survey of the citizenship training that was being given in the city's schools. The committee presently reported that the courses were making a fine showing, except for the fact that the children were learning too much about their city outside of school hours.

In class the children were taught all about the principles of government, how it is supposed to operate, what the ideals of democracy are. Then in their homes and among other contacts they were finding out that things don't always work that way. They were discovering that the practices in democratic government don't always jibe with the theories. The result was that they were concluding that their school room training was all very pretty, but that it didn't mean much.

A child who hears his parents boasting about some evasion of the law, who sees teachers going unpaid while political gangs are loading up the public payrolls preparatory to election day, who sees criminals escaping justice, is receiving a liberal education in government that can't be found in the school books. No wonder if he begins to think that ideals don't mean much in government.

The antidote, of course, is a different attitude on the part of his parents and citizens generally. We can put all the fine theories we like into the school books, but they won't have much unless we ourselves show a disposition to follow them. We can't achieve perfection over night, but if by our example we inspire our children with a sincere feeling that political virtue is worth while we will be doing much toward obtaining it. If we demonstrate disregard for it we cannot complain if they roll over our teaching rather than that of the school books.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

An Associated Press dispatch from Chicago April 6, had the following: "Hick-town" courage may whip economic adversity, even in a big city.

Fred W. Anderson owner of a department store in Cozad, Nebraska, a town of 1,300 population, said yesterday, and 500 Chicago business men sat around and listened. The secret, said the speaker, is: "Advertise. It's the life-blood of every business." "In my hick town," he added, "I found it pays."

Washington.—A new gold strike in Alaska, old-timers who know that territory insist, is the only thing that will save the pioneers who are now being taken to that distant land by a benevolent government in the hope of giving them a fresh start in life and making them self-supporting.

For the simple truth is that Alaska, while a most interesting part of the world for tourists, is not precisely the sort of Canaan that our forefathers who came over in the Mayflower, or earlier with John Smith, were seeking. Nor is it the agricultural paradise that the later pioneers found along the Ohio and Missouri rivers. There is plenty of evidence to support this contention, but it is an old saying that no one, much less any government, is willing to profit by another's experience. The cruel facts have to be discovered afresh for each generation.

Warren G. Harding dreamed the same sort of future for Alaska that the Relief administration envisaged for the down and outers it is sending to the frozen North. When a small boy in school, he had read about the acquisition of this marvelous territory for only a few million dollars. He had read how more gold than the purchase price had been taken out. Yet there remained marvelous natural resources, coal, lumber, furs, water power without end—and salmon. Not to mention an agricultural domain so rich that its products, put up in glass jars, had played an important part in inducing congress to vote $50,000,000, in the early Wilson days, for the construction of a railroad to open this marvelous territory up to one and all.

The railroad was built, but the expected results did not follow. The population of the territory was actually declining instead of increasing. Harding was told what was the matter. It was that governmental red tape snarled up every effort for advancement. Everything had to be transacted via Washington, which was a long way off, both in miles and time.

Herbert Hoover, then secretary of commerce, was also impressed. He grew fond of the story of the three bears, one variety being under the Department of the Interior, another under Commerce, and the third under Agriculture! He made speeches about the absurdity of it.

What Harding Found

So Harding took the three secretaries to Alaska, intending to listen to the various problems and difficulties by day, and sit around the table each night with the three cabinet members involved, snipping away the red tape. Beautiful! But what did he find? That if he cut away this red tape, and the red tape winders went back to the states, Alaska would lose its chief industry—red tape winding! The clerks and officials whose jobs depended on this same red tape would return to "civilization" and the white population of Alaska would be reduced by just that number.

Which is no joke at all when it is considered that the total population along the fifty-million-dollar government railroad, from Seward to Fairbanks—longer than from Washington to Boston, just the distance from San Francisco to Los Angeles—is 6,000, including Esquimaux!

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, father of the present incumbent, discovered that the rich agricultural land so much boasted about has a normal rainfall less than that of eastern Colorado. It would grow good crops the first year the frozen land was plowed, and after that would really need irrigation! Secretary Hoover discovered the salmon industry was suffering from too much activity. They were killing off the fish.

Secretary of the Interior Work was distressed to learn that the coal, which had been thought so valuable it had been protected into a naval coal reserve, was of such poor quality and cost so much to get on shipboard, that down through the panhandle, including Juneau and Sitka, they bought coal from British Columbia instead!

All discovered that the boys who had gone to war from Alaska did not come back. They stopped off somewhere in the states where opportunities looked better. So let us hope for the sake of those now pilgrimaging up toward Skagway that a new gold field is discovered!

New Commerce Head

Despite the fact that the Chamber of Commerce of the United States has picked a new president who happens to be a very close personal friend of President Roosevelt—a classmate at Harvard, both of old upstate New York families, and all that sort of thing—prospects remain that the chamber will continue to have just as little influence in Washington as it has since Hoover left the White House.

If anyone could be calculated to "get somewhere" with the White House, it would be Harper Sibley. In the first place, the personal relation of the two families is so close that Mrs. Roosevelt, when stopping in Rochester with Mrs. Caroline O'Day last fall, stayed at the Sibley home. In the second, Mr. Sibley's economic views are by no means as far removed from those of the President as the news dispatches about the chamber's meeting would have one believe. A very close friend of many years standing tells the writer that he is one of those rich men who regard the rich as being "trustees" not "holders" of wealth! Which sounds very New Dealer, indeed.

There is another angle, however, on which his fellow members of the chamber, in picking him for president, relied rather than on their misgivings about his economic views. This is his ability to work out a compromise, and to induce those with whom he is working to co-ordinate. He is said by those associated with him, either in his lines of business, charitable or church interests, to be marvelously persuasive, though no one claims that he is an orator.

But the whole picture is wrong—meaning the picture viewed by those who think that Mr. Sibley is going to be able to steer the President tactfully away from the New Dealers and brain trusters, and back into safe and sane economic channels. President Roosevelt is just not that kind of person, and there is no club, whatever, in Mr. Sibley's hands which rouses any fear, whatever, in political minds.

Can't Scare 'Em

It is not possible for an organization like the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to frighten politicians. It is a collection of very potent figures. In business, but their potency is too diffuse, too scattered, spread out too thin, to bother men running for the house or senate. Or even for President.

Two accomplishments very dear to business hearts have been put over in the last few months, but the machinery that accomplished it was not the chamber, nor any other huge aggregation of widely diversified and spread out business interests.

One of these was repeal of the pink slip publicity for income tax returns. This was done by two agencies, working independently. One stirred up the newspaper editors of America. Practically all of them began writing editorials against income tax publicity, many of the editorials advising people to write to their senators and representatives. Later they carried extensive stories about the effect of letters and telegrams on congress, which naturally provoked more.

The other was the Pittsford organization, which circulated repeal slips, and worked up the people to write to Washington. It was this resulting avalanche of letters which did the trick.

Then there was the modification of the public utility holding company legislation. This was made possible, despite the power of the President on Capitol Hill, by the utilities inducing their stockholders to write to their senators and representatives. Most of the legislators were amazed to find how many utility stockholders were among their constituents. And when they saw these stockholders were watching the legislation, the picture changed.

In the old days big business leaders controlled political bosses. Their whippers were respected. Politicians are just as timorous as ever, but they have to be shown that voters in their states or districts are on the warpath. Then they break records flopping.

Bailey's Big Fight

Two generations ago Arthur Pue Gorman, senator from Maryland, won undying fame, and nearly attained the Presidency by conducting a filibuster which killed the famous so-called Force bill.

Today North Carolina's senator, Josiah W. Bailey, is conducting a fight just as dear to southern hearts—the battle against the anti-lynching bill.

The cleavage is along practically the same lines—almost strictly geographical. The chief difference is that in those days northern Democrats and western Democrats—though there were mighty few of them in office—stood shoulder to shoulder with the southern wing of the party. Today the bill so obnoxious to southerners is actually sponsored by a New York Democrat, Senator Robert F. Wagner. Both Kentucky senators are voting with its advocates. (Kentucky has a lot of negroes voting!)

Maryland, though its percentage of negroes voting is as great as that of Kentucky, stands firm by the Gorman tradition. There's a reason, too. Remember what happened to Governor Ritchie?

Boosters of the anti-lynching bill insist the spirit is entirely different from that of the bill talked to death under Gorman's filibuster, despite heroic attempts to force it through by Henry Cabot Lodge. They say anyone who opposes the bill condones lynching. Southerners point to the statistics, which prove that lynchings have decreased amazingly, and ask why the federal government should trample state rights to intervene in a situation which is fast correcting itself.

Object of Bill

If the proponents of the bill will consider the merits of the Force bill controversy, they will find less difference than is at once apparent.

The object of the Force bill was, avowedly, to insure honest elections, honest polling lists, and honest ballot counts in the various states. Actually, it was aimed at preventing, by federal troops, disfranchisement of negroes in the South who wanted to vote for the party of Lincoln; aid coming from leaders of that party who wanted their votes—who had to count their votes, honestly, or not, in Louisiana and Florida, to elect their President in 1876.

The object of the present anti-lynching bill is to prevent mobs interfering in the administration of justice—avowedly. Actually its chief purpose is to carry favor with negro voters in the northern, western and border states of those fighting for the bill. It is as purely a local interest bill as a tariff measure, like in communities where products are protected, hated in communities which as a result may have to pay higher prices.

Petrified Hickory

Nuts in Sandstone
Some petrified hickory nuts, imbedded in sandstone, are now on display at the Dixie Hardware Co. These interesting geological specimens were found by Tilman Roberts, motorman of the Fork Ridge Coal Company, while he was digging out some sandstone in the back of his garden in Cabin Hollow. The nuts are clearly that of hickory nut variety and have been retained much as hickory nuts grow at present.—Middlesboro News.

Real Optimist

In Penitentiary
Portable typewriters are very convenient little machines for people who are moving about a good deal. Hardly in that classification though, is a prospect from whom the Standard Typewriter Exchange had an inquiry Neal Bowman, in the penitentiary and under a death sentence at that asked for descriptions and prices of portables. Strangely enough, he was also enquiring about durability. He said, "Will Gothic type last as long, without flattening, as this kind of type?"—Lexington Leader.

Odd Place To CARRY THE RING

The old story about a bridegroom's being unable to locate the ring at the critical time had a new twist here Saturday. When the minister called for the ring, the bridegroom fumbled around in different pockets, then turned to the bride and said, "I gave it to you." She said, Yes, but she had given it back to him, didn't he remember? "I'll bet," he exclaimed, "that's what's been hurting my foot!" So the minister called time-out, and the bridegroom went out in another room, took off his shoe, came back with the ring, and they were married.—Lexington Leader.

One Way To ## Protect Car

A young man left the race track after the eighth race, bearing with him a large and apparently heavy bundle, swathed in newspapers. He stopped at a car parked on one of the side streets, deposited his bundle carefully, and proceeded to open up the hood of a little blue coupe. Then he unwrapped what seemed to be the main part of the car's engine and began putting it back in place. Catching our eyes fixed upon him with a little suspicion, he turned and smiled very proudly.

"Nobody's going to steal this car," he said.—Louisville Herald-Post.

Glasgow Claims Record For Rats

Evidently, Glasgow, has more rats than any town on the globe according to our vision. Never before have we seen so many pests as are cavorting around the town in their daily performances—eating and gnawing their way into business houses and causing great damage. The latest prank pulled by the hungry scamps was to gnaw a hole through the wall of Mrs. Eva Ritzer's Hat Shop, cat on several of her new hats, destroy many pairs of hose, and leave heaps of chewed paper and debris scattered throughout the shop. There is little doubt that a large number of rats invaded the shop at the same time. So much destruction could not have been done by just a few of the pests. So, merchants, in order to protect their stocks, are going to place poison or file the sight of their automatics. Use some kind of weapon, any way.—Glasgow Times.

NATURAL FORCES AID BUSINESS RECOVERY

By R. S. HECHT
President American Bankers Association

ALTHOUGH, as official studies of business conditions show, business is still far from having struck its full stride, nevertheless, I believe that it is undoubtedly true that the natural economical processes which have always brought the nation out of a slump are now and have been for some time steadily at work laying the foundations for more active and normal business conditions.

R. S. HECHT

I believe that there is growing a broader public perception that the people of this country must make their own prosperity and not wait for the Government at Washington to make it for them. In other words, normal economic vigor and vitality of the United States is slowly but inevitably bringing a return of natural business recovery.

The Fundamental Cure

Like a doctor, the administration can help nature. But the fundamental healing processes will come from natural causes and not from political remedies. Despite the slackening of business now apparent, despite expressions of disappointment we hear from various quarters, nevertheless I am confident that these fundamental healing processes, if not spectacular, are none the less surely at work.

Gradually our business leaders are showing greater confidence in the future and are assuming a more forward looking position. I firmly believe that if we will make up our minds to replace fear psychology with confidence psychology the results will fully justify such a new attitude.

BANKERS' ASSOCIATION STIMULATES ADVERTISING

The American Bankers Association's Advertising Department reports rapid progress of the use by banks of the informative bank newspaper advertising prepared by it for members to assist them in rebuilding public confidence and good will in their communities.

The central theme of this advertising service deals with the "essential line of economic and social service that all sound banking inherently renders the depositor and the public," the report says, showing that "it is not banking laws which make banking useful and safe, but that fundamentally it is honesty and skill in management under private initiative."

The Advertising Department is supplying about a thousand members of the association with newspaper and other advertising material. The newspaper material totals about 50,000 advertisements annually. The growth of the work of the department is shown by the following figures: On September 1, 1934, the number of banks being served regularly each month was 623. The total number on April 1, 1935, was 924, an increase of 301 regular subscribers, or 49 per cent in a period of seven months.

WAR ON BANK ROBBERS

National Bankers Association Pressing Active Steps to Protect Members—
Losses Cut

Imprisonment or death of many desperate bank criminals the past year has brought no appreciable reduction in attacks on banks, James E. Baum, in charge of the American Bankers Association Protective Department, has reported to his organization.

In the six months ended February 28, 1935, he says, banks were targets for 169 daylight holdups and 40 night burglaries. He added that although banks that are not members number only about half those enrolled in the association, they suffered a far greater rate of attack, namely, 51 per cent of all the bank robberies committed during the period.

Losses Show Decrease

During the period under report, bank burglars and bandits exacted tribute amounting to $943,551 compared with losses totaling $1,267,000 a year ago, he said. This reduction in losses is attributed to the time-locking restrictions and other limitations in the exposure of surplus cash imposed last year by underwriters and several bank supervisory authorities.

The sharp reduction in the material loss of money and securities resulting from bank robbery this year was "overshadowed by the killing of 2 bank employees, one bystander and 5 arresting officers," and since last August bank robbery also cost the lives of 15 criminals and caused physical injuries to 10 bank employees, 12 bystanders, 9 arresting officers and 8 bandits, a total of 62 casualties.

Investigations by the association's agents resulted in the arrest of 36 forgers, 42 bandits and one burglar, or 79 of the 141 bank criminals reported as being apprehended during the period.

DEATHS

MRS. MARY ALICE BAKER

Mrs. Mary Alice Baker passed away Sunday night May 5, after a lingering illness at the age of 87. She was a faithful member of the Lutheran Church. She is survived by two grandsons. She was the oldest and last of the old Baker family.

Funeral services were conducted at the Lutheran church Wednesday at 2:30 P. M. Rev. H. M. Hauser delivered the discourse.

Funeral arrangements were in charge of Daniel Bullock.

MELVILLE FREEBURN

Melville Freeburn, aged 45 years, passed away Monday noon at his home Lyndale Road, Exjewood subdivision, near Erlanger, after a short illness with pneumonia. He was a Canadian by birth and had resided in Northern Ky. nine years.

He was a silversmith and was employed by the Queen City Silver Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rowena Freeburn.

Funeral services were conducted Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock by the Rev. R. E. Brown, pastor of the Erlanger Christian church, at the Tallaferrero Funeral Home. Interment following in the Highland cemetery.

ARTIE M. HAFER

Mrs. Artie Mesia Hafer, daughter of a family of nine children of Isaac and Maria Anderson, Clore, born at Hebron, Ky., June 21 1858, died at Hebron, Ky., May 6, 1935, aged 76 years 10 months and 15 days.

Married to Thomas Hafer, son of Henry and Harriet Goodridge Hafer, at Hebron, March 12, 1874. Her husband preceded her to the grave on Nov. 30, 1926. To this union were born nine children, two dying in infancy; Miss Lola Hafer, who died Sept. 20, 1903, and Mrs. Bert S. Jones, who died Sept. 2nd, 1927.

Mrs. Hafer had united with the Hebron Lutheran church Nov. 21, 1886, and had been a faithful member on through the years for she had lived her entire life in this community.

Funeral services were held at the church, Thursday afternoon, May 9, 1935, by the Rev. Harold Beemon of Florence, assisted by the Rev. Frank Hartman, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Ludlow, Ky.

She has entered into that Peace that passeth all understanding, and having lived a life toward the rearing of a large family, she has answered the summons, and so quietly, peacefully, painlessly, gone on into that Great Beyond that we bow in reverence and submission to the will of a Divine Power.

William Mills, who lives on the Bernard Gaines farm, was taken to a specialist in Cincinnati last week, who pronounced him suffering from brain fever.

Mrs. Nettie Hughes was taken to Christ Hospital Monday. Her many friends hope she will be back soon much improved in health.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Cook were shopping in Covington Monday.

Surviving are Walter O. Hafer and Mrs. Spencer Aylor of Ludlow, Ky.; Mrs. Phelps Walton, Mrs. Allie Walton and Mrs. Earl Aylor of Hebron, Ky. These children, 11 grandchildren—Mrs. H. L. Walton, Mrs. Fred Wahl, Edwin Walton, Mrs. Leroy McGlasson, Mrs. Earl McGlasson, Misses Wanda Lee and Ardell Hafer, Miss Shirley Aylor, Melvin Aylor, Lola Mae Walton and Earl Glenn Aylor; 6 great-grandchildren—Donna L. Walton, Virginia Earl, Melvin Ray, Galen Walton and Rodney Edwin McGlasson and Leland Spencer Walton, a brother of W. L. Clore of Constance, and a sister, Mrs. Hattie Aylor of Hebron, revere the memory of a devoted mother and sister.

CHAPTER I.—Matt Kearney, young American living in London, says good-bye to his sister Eileen, on board the steamer Wallaroo bound for Colombo. The Wallaroo is conveying £2,000,000 in gold to Australia. Eileen has a presentiment of coming evil, which affects her brother. On his way home Kearney meets an old friend, Inspector Dawson Haig, of Scotland Yard, who is very much in love with Eileen. Haig is on the trail of opium, which he is convinced is concealed in Jo Lung's warehouse. Called to other duty, Haig delegates Kearney, with Detective Norwich, to visit the place and find out what he can.

Kearney felt a tremendous sense of relief when he found himself out again in the narrow lane. Even the fog seemed friendly. Dimly to his ears came a sound of voices which seemed to proceed from the little courtyard that he left behind. Apparently Norwich did not notice these sounds.

It was good to be free of that strange building, with its silence out of which the breathing of hidden watchers seemed to come; its ghastly emptiness, as of a place unoccupied, deserted, yet which he knew by virtue of some extra sense to be illusive. The Arab doorkeeper, the Greek—and that strange woman—had not been the only occupants of Jo Lung's emporium that night. There were others—many others, watching, listening. He knew it—he had felt it all the time.

By virtue of some mutual understanding, Kearney and the Scotland Yard man paced along to the neighboring street in unbroken silence. But, the corner turned.

"Those opals!" Kearney began. "I knew you had spotted something there!"

"I had. You've got your case clearly enough if you don't dispose of them before tomorrow. Those opals belonged to Lady Dakenham, who was lost at sea ten months ago! How in the name of all that's wonderful did Jo Lung get hold of them?"

"H'm!" said the Scotland Yard man, and his tone betokened disappointment. "There's no case in that, sir. I suppose they must have been washed ashore. Where did the accident happen?"

"In the Red sea or the Persian gulf!" Detective Sergeant Norwich laughed. "Outside our beat!" he said.

"Then you mean there's nothing you can act upon?"

"I'm afraid there isn't, Norwich confessed. "Everything in the place is of number one quality. But there was nothing that I definitely recognized. In fact, if you ask me, we were spotted!"

"Do you think so?"

"I'm positive!"

"Yes," Kearney murmured. "I'm afraid we have wasted our time. Something annoying in view of the fact—unless we can get hold of a wandering taxi—that I have a long, foggy journey ahead."

Norwich laughed again. "Hard luck, sir," he said. "There's a cozy fire, an armchair, and a pair of slippers waiting for me at Stockwell. But my orders are to report back to Leman Street."

"That being the case," said Kearney cheerfully, as they groped out onto Commercial Road East, "we part company. I shall head towards the station. I'm calling Haig as soon as I get back!"

Kearney peered through swirling mist along perhaps the unloudest thoroughfare in all London. Not a figure moved as far as his sight could pierce the fog. He had done nothing to help Dawson Haig, but certainly he had secured some unique "copy."

He glanced back. Norwich had disappeared.

He had gone ten or fifteen paces when suddenly he pulled up again. . . . A sound had reached him—a short, muffled scream. Stockwell he stood, and listened.

Dim, distant noises reached him, the rumble of remote lorries, that muted booming which is the lifeblood of the port of London pumping through its many arteries; fog signals. He could detect no footstep—no other sound.

It was close upon midnight. He pulled up again as he saw two things of interest: one, definite, the other, perhaps chimerical. Either unpleasant memories of the establishment of Jo Lung still haunted him, or he had seen a curiously small, active figure dart into the shadow of a doorway not twenty paces behind!

His heart beat faster. The head lamps of what looked like a taxicab dimly visible through fog! Indeed, perhaps the sound of the motor, although he had not recognized the fact, had prompted him to pause, to turn.

The little notebook in his pocket! He had meant to speak to Norwich about it, but changing his mind had determined to examine it himself and then to hand it over to Haig when he met him. His idea that it might prove to contain some piece of evidence of value to Scotland Yard assumed a new and grave importance.

Coming upon it after the discovery of the Dakenham opals, he had appropriated it without scruple. Now, watching slowly approaching head lamps, and questioning the reality of that figure which he believed he had seen dart into hiding, he remembered that he was unarmed. And he wondered.

Nearer and nearer came the lamps. He stepped out onto the edge of the curb and raised his arm. The man pulled up.

Kearney opened the door, uttered an audible gasp of relief, jumped in, and banged it shut behind him. Twisting about, Matt looked through the rear window.

Baleful eyes glared in at him! Someone, indistinguishable except for his eyes, was clinging to the back of the cab!

"My G—d!" Kearney whispered. Suddenly, those weird eyes, which seemed to belong to no tangible body, disappeared. . . . The taxi was well under way now.

Kearney crawled through the open window, looking back.

Fog . . . desolation . . . nothing!

But one or two belated pedestrians, notably a constable, as the taxi passed into Fleet street, observed upon the luggage rack surmounting its roof what looked like a rolled up blanket, or, as another thought, a very dilapidated kit bag.

Dawson Haig hurried across the little court in which Kearney's rooms were situated. The old manservant who looked after the place opened the door at once. He knew Haig well.

"I'm sure it's very important, sir," he said, "but Mr. Kearney had to go across to the office the moment he arrived home."

"But what's this about some book?"

"The book is lying on the desk up stairs, sir, with a note, and my orders are for you to go up."

Two minutes later he sat at Kearney's table, reading the note which his friend had left. Haig had not removed his white raincoat. A yard car was waiting—and a ghastly duty called. . . .

But, as he read, his expression changed—grew puzzled—and then indicated sudden excitement. The little leather-bound memo book, to which Kearney's note chiefly related, lay upon the table beside him. It was really an advertisement issued by one of the shipping companies, containing a calendar and all sorts of odds and ends of information about tides, and such-like material.

He picked it up again, glancing at the curious penciled entries it contained. The book was newly issued, and these were few. Some were unintelligible, being written in what looked like a combination of cipher and Chinese. But others, opposite to certain dates, set him furiously thinking.

Suddenly he stood up, shed his raincoat, and dropped it with his hat on the floor. By heavens! he might be better employed here, than down in Limehouse!

The first of these intriguing notes appeared against the date the 11th—the day which had just passed. It read as follows:

"D 21—25—32. B 7—B 4."

The last number—B 4—had been written on the margin of the opposite page as though it were an afterthought, but a delta and pencil line indicated that it should be added to the others.

Under date of the 13th was: "Paris. Suleiman Bey's."

For the following three days the diary contained no notes, but under date the 17th the following appeared: "D 41."

A gap until the 22d, and then occurred the entry: "Mohammed."

On the following day, the 23d, the writer had scribbled something which Haig was unable to read. But on the 24th came this curious item.

"13° 34' N, and 41° 5' E."

Finally, against date the 25th, appeared a cross in red ink. This was the last entry.

Dawson Haig reread Kearney's note and looked for and found a leaflet referred to. It was one issued by the steamship company, and it gave the dates at which the Wallaroo touched ports en route to Brisbane, Australia.

Very deliberately, although his brain was on fire, he compared certain entries in the memo book with this leaflet. The date, the 17th, corresponded to that at which the ship reached Marseilles; the next—the 22d—to that when she arrived at Port Said! The final dates meant, nothing to him, except that he estimated them to correspond to the Wallaroo's position at some place south of Suez.

Of course, Kearney might have set him off on a wild-goose chase, and these entries bear no relation to the voyage of the Wallaroo. But, considering where the book came from, what was he to think?

And "B 4" was the number of Eileen's stateroom!

"What the devil does it mean?" he said aloud.

He turned the leaves back. If only he could read those hieroglyphic notes! But they were meaningless. He stared again at the entries in the diary. Then a possible explanation presented itself. Of course! He should have thought of it before!

These notes related to Jo Lung's abandoned dope-running enterprise! This theory almost covered the facts, but left him uneasy about the entry "B 4" until, sitting back in Kearney's chair and smoking furiously, a possible explanation came of this also. The cabins of all suspected persons, who might be revenue or police agents, had been marked by the plotters, and for some reason Eileen had fallen under suspicion.

"That's it!" he muttered. At which moment the phone bell rang, and:

"Is that you, Haig? Kearney speaking. I'm hung up at the office. Have you grasped the facts about the memo book I pinched from Jo Lung's?"

"Some of them. It needs a good many hours' work and a man who knows Chinese. But I think it does the hanging trick. Good for you! Shall you be long?"

"I may be an hour. Can't say."

"Then I shall have to push off. I'll take the book with me. I'm on my way back to Limehouse—"

"Limehouse! Why, at this hour?"

"An awful thing has happened, Matt—Norwich has been murdered!"

"What!"

The words had a stupefying effect upon Kearney. Norwich murdered!

That cry in the fog! The shadowy figure in the doorway . . . the unmistakable figure which had looked in at the back of the taxicab!

"You left him somewhere at the corner of Three Colt Street?" Dawson Haig went on rapidly.

"Yes—yes—that's right."

"He was found, some time later, dead in the door of a warehouse. His pockets had been rifled—everything taken. Looked like the work of a common footpad, but I know it wasn't! I didn't know until Wilson phoned me and told me about the book. Now I've read your note and studied those entries, I'm pretty sure the murderer was looking for this incriminating evidence on the table before me! You had a d—d lucky escape!"

"But—Kearney gasped—"how was poor Norwich killed?"

There was a slight interval; then: "I don't know," Haig replied. "From the account given by Limehouse and confirmed by Leman street, he seems to have fallen in with a stray panther."

"Stray panther? What on earth do you mean?"

"Well, they tell me his throat is horribly torn, but not by a knife-cut. The thing's teeth pierced his jugular. He bled to death. Thank God you're safe, old scout."

"But—the Wallaroo. . . ."

"I'm putting a good man aboard the Wallaroo. . . ."

CHAPTER III

The person variously known as "Yu'an" and "Excellency," wearing a plain blue house robe, paced up and down Jo Lung's office. The dark-eyed woman seated in a chair near the door watched him uneasily.

"They do not return," he crooned presently. "This may mean death, but you sit there very quietly, tender blossom."

"What can I do?"

"You have done all that it lies in a woman's power to do. You have perhaps ruined me. Jo Lung, who did his share, will fall in that ruin, and Polodoss with him."

He continued to walk up and down, once pausing to glance at a clock on the writing table.

"We are watched," he said, in his reedy voice, "because of the trade, the petty trade, which is done here. And because of a series of blunders, those who are watching these small things may be rewarded unjustly by a glimpse of the great."

Ceaselessly he paced the floor, until: "All left more than an hour ago," said the woman suddenly; "and we cannot trust the Adder. If he has. . . ."

"His orders would justify it." Into the high voice crept a soothing note. "What does it matter, most beautiful, provided that it corrects the consequence of your folly?"

"My folly!" the woman exclaimed, and laughed indignantly. "How was I to know when I saw the man pick the book up that it was not his own—that it meant so much?"

"A woman who is beautiful," the Chinaman replied softly, "is desirable. But there are many. A woman who has not only beauty but also intuition is a worthy companion."

He resumed his promenade and presently began to laugh. As the short squeals of his evil mercurial rose higher and higher, reaching a note unattainable by any normal human voice, the woman shrank back in her seat.

"Tonight," said the man who laughed, "I shake off the dust of England from my feet forever, or I lay my bones in this cold island."

"Let us start!" the woman implored. "What are we waiting for?"

"Tender flower," the reedy voice replied caressingly, "a clever man knows how long to wait. It is only the fool who flies when no enemy pursues him. I have promised you a rope of pink pearls twice as long as your body. This, also, is the length of the rope used at executions in England."

Dawson Haig sat back in the chair, replacing the telephone. A tramcar was passing along the embankment beyond the gardens. He knew those all-night trams with their cargo of weary Fleet street workers. He listened to the familiar sounds and bled through an opened bedroom window behind him.

"His throat was mangled as though he had met a wild animal. . . . The jugular had been penetrated. . . ."

That was what Leman street had reported. Automatically his hand touched the little-leather-bound memo book. In leaving the establishment of Jo Lung, Matt Kearney had picked up something which meant life or death to. . . someone.

Haig believed he knew that someone's name; began to believe that what he had failed to find in Singapore might lie here under his fingers.

"The jugular. . . penetrated. . . ."

He no longer doubted that poor Norwich had been followed by agents of that someone. And for this—this very book upon the table!

Yes! here lay the clue, if only he could unravel it. . . . Here, on the table, lay something which meant the hangman's rope for the Big Chief!

Good G—d! It was maddening! He bent again over the pages of the diary. And now, suddenly he found himself listening—listening for what?

"He bled to death. . . ."

Dawson Haig thought of those words, and, at the same moment, thought he detected a faint sound in the bedroom behind him!

He sat rigidly still. Definitely, something was moving in the bedroom—gently, lightly.

Haig turned very quietly in his chair and looked towards the half-open door leading into Kearney's bedroom. . . . silhouetted against it he saw a crouching figure. . . .

The fact flashed through his mind that he was unarmed. . . . Gently but unmistakably, he could hear the door opening behind him. With assumed indifference, he walked towards the lobby, and went out. . . .

In five seconds he had snatched from the wall a Japanese sword (the lights in the sitting room had been switched off), unsheathed it—turned. . . .

And as he turned—he saw it. . . . As a man he could not regard this visitant who fabulously had gained admission to these chambers. But he saw the Thing which, he could not doubt, had killed poor Norwich!

It was bending over the writing table—a small, thickset figure, enormously deformed, humped, grotesque. . . . long arms and disproportionately large hands. But the head—the head, glimpsed for a moment in the lobby light!

Nausea swept over him at sight of that small, malignant head, that nearly hairless head, like the skull of an infant. The brow was no more than an inch and a half high, and the nose upon a small, dark face, was represented by two distended nostrils. The chin retreated into the neck, but the upper lip below those flattened nostrils protruded inhumanly. . . .

The creature turned its little sunken eyes upon him. He saw two enormous teeth, exaggerated canines, curved downward over the lower lip—white, and gleaming. . . .

For one instant he saw a sort of supernatural dread hold him spellbound. Then, sword in hand, he leaped. . . . But, quickly as he leaped, the Thing was quicker. Like a shadow, the white-lype turned its little sunken eyes upon him. He saw two enormous teeth, exaggerated canines, curved downward over the lower lip—white, and gleaming. . . .

by some preparation of Indian hemp, with supernatural daring and agility. Running back to Kearney's writing table, he pulled up, fists clenched. The memo book had disappeared!

Absolute silence prevailed in the office of Jo Lung. The woman smoked cigarettes ceaselessly one after another. Yu'an paced the carpet with his heavy yet cat-like tread. Suddenly:

"We shall be trapped," the woman said. "Why are we waiting? All—or the Adder—may be caught at they return."

Yu'an glanced at the speaker through slit-like eyes. Then silently he extended a plump yellow hand in the direction of the wall behind the desk. In one of the openings of the switchboard glowed a tiny speck of light.

"The blue lights are on," he returned contemptuously. "Even if we were surrounded—neither would we be taken."

Came the muffled note of a phone bell.

Yu'an stepped quickly to the table and took up the receiver. "Yes?" he said.

"Something is afoot," Polodoss reported. "Shan announces that the party which set out from Leman street is now leaving Limehouse—bound in this direction. What are your orders?"

"As already arranged," the high, piping voice replied. "I am now going to join Jo Lung. There will be no sea tonight, so we shall cross in the cruiser."

"Where do you wish me to join you?"

"At Trieste on Thursday morning—the usual place."

Yu'an replaced the receiver. "The police! I knew it!" cried the woman, springing up.

He faced her. "With you," he said softly, in Chinese, "the police are like an evil dream. One would think, Orange Blossom, that you fear them. This is not flattering to me."

His voice rose very high on the last note. The woman called Orange Blossom summoned all her natural arrogance to confront him, but that cloak of high disdain which she wore so gracefully somehow had slipped from her.

As the portly Chinaman moved slowly in her direction, she shrank back, nearer to the door. With a curious smile of arched red lips she turned aside, slipped off his blue house garment, which he hung in a cupboard and resumed his heavy overcoat, taking up the broad-brimmed black hat from the table. Then:

"Come," he said, "we are going. Jo Lung waits for us."

THE GARDEN

Timely Topics

By John S. Gardner, Ky. College of Agriculture

PEPPERS—Whenever it becomes warm to stay warm, peppers should be set in the garden. In order to hasten fruit-setting, and to make setting heavy, the same fertilization recommended for tomatoes several weeks ago should be given.

The plants should be set in the row from 18 to 24 inches apart, and the rows should be at least thirty inches from other upright crops, and 5 feet from tomatoes and other crops that tend to "run."

No insects of any consequence bother peppers, but they suffer, sometimes, from black rot of the blossom end. This is caused, generally by their standing in poorly drained land or land in which extremes of moisture and drought alternately take place. In this they resemble tomatoes.

There are three general kinds of peppers, and the varieties are as follows: For sweet peppers, or "mangoes," Ruby Giant; for flavoring, Long Red Cayenne; and for making meat-sausage, Birdseye.

EGGPLANTS—At the same season that peppers are set, eggplants should be set. Soil and fertilizer requirements are similar. Many persons have difficulty in bringing their eggplants to fruiting, because of the blight disease and because of the activities of the black beetle. Both these pests are controlled by thorough application of

During the first few weeks, turkey poulters require more protein feed than do chicks. The ration used for chicks may do for poults, provided protein is added in the form of buttermilk or skim milk. Crooked breast bones may result from lack of minerals.

Producers and owners of baby chicks are making money in Fleming county despite high feed costs.

Bordeaux Mixture, of the strength of 4-4-50. Although a gardener may use the prepared form of Bordeaux which is necessary merely to stir into water, a better product results when the original ingredients, bluestone, lime, and water are used. An easy way to make Bordeaux was described in these columns several weeks ago, that removes the difficulties met in mixing small quantities, such as home gardeners generally use.

Because the effectiveness of Bordeaux spraying depends on complete coverage, gardeners who anticipate growing eggplants should see to the condition of their sprayers. New York (purple) and the old favorite Black Beauty, are the eggplant varieties to use.

OKRA—With the warming of the ground comes the time to start okra. The seed is uncertain in germination and therefore a good way to sow okra is to sow it in clusters of two or three and thin to one seedling. The plants should stand 18 inches apart in rows 3 feet from any other vegetable. Fertilizing with phosphorus, as for tomatoes, is suggested to make pods set freely and early. No pests trouble okra, and the varieties are White Velvet or Green Velvet.

BEANS—Bi-weekly planting of beans, 5 feet of row per member of the family, should continue through May. Toward the end of the month, gardeners who have not yet tried the Horticultural shell-bean, should try 50 feet or so. Used shell-out, after the beans are fully formed, Horticulturals tend to break up the monotony from using ordinary beans. Two kinds are offered, Dwarf and Tall. Where the Mexican Bean beetle is not so destructive, the Tall Horticultural makes an excellent fall cornfield bean.

During the first few weeks, turkey poulters require more protein feed than do chicks. The ration used for chicks may do for poults, provided protein is added in the form of buttermilk or skim milk. Crooked breast bones may result from lack of minerals.

Producers and owners of baby chicks are making money in Fleming county despite high feed costs.

THE DIME CHAIN LETTER

We hope the Postoffice Department's campaign against the dime chain letter craze will succeed but feel constrained to doubt it. This scheme, which has now spread to Cincinnati, is in effect a lottery, hence it violates the postal laws. But postal officials are handicapped in proceeding against it. A letter can not be confiscated in this country without a search warrant. To swear out search warrants for the millions of "Send-a-Dime" chain letters that are now swamping the postoffices of the land would be a labor of Hercules.

The only effective defense against the scheme is common sense. Let's see how it works. An individual receives a letter, including a list of six names. He is asked to send a dime to the top name on the list, then to scratch out that name, and his own at the bottom of the list and send letter and new list to five friends. If the chain is not broken, his letter will have passed through the hands of 15,625 individuals, and if everybody sends a dime he will have received $1,562.50 by the time his name gets to the top of the list.

Or so the chain letter promises. What actually happens, of course, is that the chain is frequently broken. Even if it remained intact, there is an overwhelming probability that the individual who sent his dime or dimes on request would find himself out of pocket. A little arithmetic will show that this is true. All of the 15,625 are supposed to send you their dimes because they expect to profit likewise. But in order to do so their letters must reach some 244,000,000 persons, each of whom would send a dime.

The sad appeals, of course to the eternal gullibility of human nature. Those who try to get something for nothing will, and, as always, that they are getting nothing for something. — Cincinnati Times-Star.

What IS
a Sound Loan?

A sound loan for a commercial bank is a loan which the borrower believes, and the bank expects, will be paid within a reasonable time—a loan which if not fully repaid at the maturity of the note is substantially reduced by regular periodic installments. Loans that are regularly reduced enable a bank to accommodate patrons whose needs may be more essential. A bank must have a turn-over of money in the same way that a merchant must have a turn-over of merchandise, with this difference—bank's turn-over affects the credit facilities of the entire community.

The ability and intention to repay a loan by a planned program, and within a reasonable time, is the essence of a good loan. The giving of collateral does not repay a loan. Collateral is merely a pledge to guarantee the borrower's ability and promise to repay the loan within a reasonable time.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

THE return of the vogue of mirrors is a welcome one in decoration. The reflecting of beautiful things, the opportunity to extend vistas in a home, and the chance to make dark corners become sufficiently luminous through the fortunate positioning of looking glasses, are some of the advantages that following this fashion permits. The choice of a good reflecting surface in a mirror becomes a matter of importance if we are to make the most of this decorative opportunity.

Three points should be remembered especially in selecting a mirror. First, is its correct color reflections, second, is its flawless condition, and third, is the thickness of the glass.

Color Considerations.

Color in mirrors is of prime importance since without its being neutral it cannot give back the true reflections except in form and size. The glass must be so treated that it reproduces color correctly. A poor mirror is apt to gray color down. Old mirrors may lose none of their value by this grayish or slightly blue tint, because this is one of their characteristics. But, with improvements in the making of mirrors this feature has been overcome. Today we need not have this trait. We can get things reflected as they are. Or we can have them given a slightly rosy hue. For instance the mirrors in dressing rooms of hotels, and especially those in beauty parlors are apt to have this bluish rose tone. It is flattering to the complexion. Mirrors in some dressers and bureaus in chamber sets have this flattering tone. It certainly is preferable to see oneself appear with a suggestion of pink rather than with a bluish pallor. But best of all is it to see oneself as one is really.

For the reflected truth of a mirror the quality of the glass is responsible as well as the mercurial chemical treatment of the back. A heavy plate glass free from flaws and blemishes and pure as crystal makes for perfection. Flaws are not difficult to discern if the glass is carefully scrutinized.

Testing a Mirror.

The way to test a mirror for quality of thickness of glass and color tones is to press a finger against the glass. If the color of the finger and the color of the reflection are identical, the mirror is A-1 in that particular. If the reflection is bluish, the mirror would prove unsatisfactory. If, on the other hand the reflection has a suggestion of rose, the fault is in the right direction, although not perfect.

The distance between the finger tip and its reflection gives the thickness of the glass. If fingers seem to meet, the glass is very thin. If there is considerable space between finger tips the glass qualifies in this point of excellence.

THE FARM AND HOME

(Kentucky College of Agriculture)
Late hatched chicks need special attention if they are to be developed into profitable layers. It is almost necessary, for instance, to feed them away from the older chicks. Extra attention also is needed to see that they have clean quarters.

The small number of hogs on farms and the feed situation suggest that marketings will be unusually small during the summer and fall. A favorable feeding situation may result from the production of good crops, comparatively low feed prices and high hog prices.

Most flowering plants should be pruned soon after they bloom. Removing a few of the older stems each season tends to promote new growth from the bottom, thereby preserving the symmetry of the plant. Extreme pruning should be avoided.

More than $500 was made by Elliott county poultrymen on a 3,000 chick early broiler project.

Purchased White House District July 16, 1790

The United States government acquired the White House grounds when, by act approved July 16, 1790, congress accepted a district of territory not exceeding ten square miles, to be located on the Potomac river, and authorized the President to appoint three commissioners to survey the area under his jurisdiction. The act also empowered the commissioners to accept such land on the eastern side of the river within the said district as the President should deem proper for the use of the United States.

The site selected by the President was that area embraced in the old city located between Rock creek on the west, Florida avenue on the north, the eastern branch on the east and the Potomac river on the south. Within this site the President, before the city was laid out into squares, selected 17 parcels for use of the United States. Among these was Appropriation No. 1, extending from and including Lafayette park down to B street north (now Constitution avenue).

For these 17 parcels the United States government paid the original proprietors at the rate of $25 per acre, Maryland currency (about $66.67) in lawful money of the United States. The original proprietors of the land constituting the White House grounds were Samuel Davidson, who owned the upper part, and David Burnes, who owned the lower part, the dividing line running from the northeast corner to the southwest corner.—Washington Star.

Skilled Workmen Still Manufacture Quill Pens

Modern inventions have superseded the craftsman, but the quill pen still finds employment for a handful of skilled workers. The quill-dresser of modern London still handles the undressed quill, bakes it, and points it, as his predecessors did in the Eighteenth century before the steel pen had been heard of. The market is mainly with the legal profession and a small company of writers.

There is still a firm in being whose founder made the first keys of Newgate; it still produces locks by hand, and declares that there is no machine-made lock to compare with the hand-made article.

London has a workshop where craftsmen turn out jeweled talismans, each one in accordance with astrological maps, for customers who believe that their horoscope acts as a guide through life. These costly ornaments are sent to every part of the world, for, despite education and machinery and sophistication, there are people who still believe in the magical powers of an amulet.

Even the bow and arrow have their craftsmen today as of old, and just as you may buy from the modern bowyer a splendid hand-made bow, so you may order from the London fletcher, who has inherited from a long line of craftsmen the art of goose-feathering an arrow, this article as well turned out as in medieval days.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Inventors and Discoverers

The men who discover the underlying, unifying principles and laws of nature are those rare, penetrating geniuses who open the way for a thousand lesser men to put them to practical use. The principle of antitoxins was discovered by that mighty mind, Louis Pasteur, but many men, by using this principle, have invented vaccines. Faraday discovered the principle of electrical action out of which have grown thousands of inventions. It is hard to draw the line between "pure" science—the discovery of new methods of research and new principles in nature—and "applied" science—putting it to practical use. Some men have been both inventors and discoverers—Edison, Marconi, the Wrights, Bell and numerous others.

Giant's Memorial

Over a grave in the village cemetery of St. Ann, N. S., and overlooking the blue-green Atlantic waters of St. Ann Harbor, stands a plain gray stone. "Mark the perfect man," its inscription exhorts the reader, "and behold the upright." Above the simple phrasing is the name of Angus MacAskill, for this is the headstone of the Cape Breton giant. It is the only memorial to a man who by his sheer physical stature carried the name of Nova Scotia into the four quarters of the globe three-quarters of a century and more ago.

The Perfect Clock

What is the world's most perfect clock? The title is being claimed for a crystal clock which has been displayed before the National Academy of Sciences at Washington. It is said to keep time better than mother earth herself, for, whereas the earth occasionally loses or gains a second in its rotation, this clock being controlled by the electric oscillations of a quartz crystal and being quite independent of the earth's irregularities, cannot go wrong.

England's Chancellor of Exchequer

The duties of the chancellor of the exchequer are concerned with the collection of revenues and the management of the funds accumulated. The chancellor of the exchequer of England holds a position similar to the treasurer of the United States. There is a difference between this and a secretary of the treasury who corresponds to the director of the finance department of England.

Pistols and Revolvers, "Small Time" Fire Arms

Pistols and revolvers, never considered anything more than supplementary arms in the serious business of war, always have had ranges considerably less than their contemporary muskets and rifles, notes an authority in the Chicago Tribune. The muzzle velocity of the side arm of the American army, the .45 Colt automatic pistol, is only about one-third that of the Springfield rifle, and, because of its relatively weak charge and short barrel, it is doubtful whether it will shoot as far as some of the better types of old-time smoothbore muskets. It is intended for close action only and not for sniping.

A bullet popular long ago was the Minie ball, which, despite its name, was not a ball at all, but a heavy caliber bullet similar in shape to certain bullets still used in low-powered sporting rifles. Guns in which the Minie ball was used generally were sighted to 1,000 yards, were accurate at a distance of about 500 yards, and had a maximum range of about a mile.

The Germans and other Europeans were experimenting with rifling as early as the Sixteenth century, though it did not come into wide use until the Nineteenth century, and it was not until 1842 that the military musket made by the United States government for its infantrymen was produced with a rifled barrel.

Fluttering Moth Killed the Princess Caravella

The case of the Princess Caravella, at Naples, is probably unique. After giving a dinner party she retired to her room to snatch a little rest before the following dance. Very shortly afterwards she was found dead in bed, shot through the heart.

Her husband was arrested on suspicion, for he was noted for his jealous disposition, and it did not seem possible that anyone else could have been in the room. It might have gone hard with the prince but for the shrewdness of a Naples police officer, relates a writer in the Boston Globe.

This man carefully examined the bedchamber, and found one of the very large moths common in Italy lying on the floor with wings badly singed by the lighted candle which had stood on a bedside table.

He also noticed that the pistol was lying on this table in such a position that it pointed to the princess' heart, and that some of the powder dust from the moth's wings showed plainly on the trigger.

He deduced from these signs that the moth had burned its wings, had fallen on the table, fluttering and spinning, and that its wings had struck the lightly sprung trigger and fired the pistol. On this evidence, which satisfied the court, the prince was acquitted.

Elect Mayor in Belfry

All over the country quaint ceremonies are observed to usher in the new mayors, says Pearson's Weekly. At a number of places the new mayor is approved by placing a ring on his finger. This ceremony has been observed for several centuries and seems to have its roots in the idea of wedding the mayor to the chief office of the borough. At High Wycombe the mayor and his aldermen are conducted to the weights and measures department of the borough offices, and there solemnly weighed and measured. At Brightlingsea the mayor is elected in the belfry of the parish church. At Bournemouth and at Hamley, Staffs, the retiring mayor and the new one embrace each other. Feasts play a part in the election of mayors. At Yarmouth it is a sprat feast, and at Peterborough the chief items are champagne and sausages.

Registering Births in England

No proof or sworn statement is required when registering a birth, marriage or death in England. Thus it is easy to record the "birth" of a bogus baby when desiring an increased unemployment allowance, to secure a marriage license when already married, or to obtain a death certificate in a murder case from a credulous physician, as he is not obliged to examine the body and determine for himself the cause of the death.—Collier's Weekly.

Muskrat Musk

Muskrat musk is a secretion nature has put in these little animals bearing the name. The musk is found in two small sacs on the belly. During the spring of the year these sacs contain several drops of thick, sweet smelling fluid. It is a very powerful, sweet odor, and it is attractive to all fur-bearing animals. It is not found on the animals during the fall months.

Canada's Big French City

Montreal lays claim to being the second largest French city in the world, ranking next to Paris in population, with more than a million in the Greater Montreal district. Greater Paris itself has a population of 3,783,000, and the French city most closely approaching Montreal is Marseilles, with a population of about 800,000.

Far-Famed Florence

Florence, Italy, was once the center of world culture and world finance. There are names associated with Florence that will endure for all time. Some of them are Michelangelo, the Medici, Dante Alighieri, Boccaccio, Machiavelli, Della Robbia, Leonardo da Vinci, Benvenuto Cellini and Raphael.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Lancaster, Ohio
May 11, 1935.

Dear Mr. Editor:

Your very kind invitation, received some weeks ago, to call and see you at your office came to hand in due time. But circumstances over which I had no control prompted me to postpone the event until a more convenient day. That day has come and here, I am in the presence of the editor of the very greatly improved Boone County Recorder. How'd I brough with me this little piece of paper, which I hope you will duly appreciate. Perhaps it should be larger, but up here in Ohio we strictly live up to the 30 per cent reduction idea, and it would be just too bad if there would be an "over supply" of money in the pockets of the editor of the Boone County Recorder. As one of the pioneers of Boone County, I should never forgive myself, if, by any act of mine I should impede the works by helping to create a surplus in the Recorder's Bank account, as that would soon make you an "International Banker" and call down the wrath of Father Coughlin on your head. So please accept the check and credit my account with as many months paid as your conscience and your arithmetic will permit.

I had the misfortune not to have been born in Kentucky, but many years ago I lived in Boone County, Kentucky, (the older inhabitants will remember me) and ate enough of those good Kentucky sweet potatoes and po'k sausage to make me a Kentuckian the rest of my born days. In fact I should be made a Kentucky Colonel, on my record as a lover of Kentucky "Nancy Halls," and now a grower of Kentucky Wonder beans. I live in Ohio but I still love my "old Kentucky home. Continue to send the Recorder.

Cordially yours,

REV. F. B. HEIBERT

It will be recalled by the older residents here that Charles C. Conner was a co-founder with W. L. Riddell in the establishing of the Recorder in 1875. We were pleased to receive the following short letter from Mr. Conner who now lives in the New England states:

E. Northfield, Mass.,
May 6, 1935.

My dear Mr. Skillman:
It has been good of you to send me the Recorder for a season. The issue that contained my article did not reach me, if sent, from the office, but my niece, Mrs. Albert Conner, mailed me a copy.

You are publishing a most creditable paper for the people of Boone, and they should have, with you, pride in it, and give it generous support.

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES C. CONNER.

ABE MARTIN'S SCHOOL DAYS
Most newspaper readers will recall Abe Martin that inimitable philosopher in "Short Furrows," exasperating illustrations and bad spelling. He was born and brought up in the country where he laid the foundation for his future in a little Ohio Red Schoolhouse.

Upon one occasion and in one of his reminiscent moods, he tells about going to country school and what, eventually became of some of the boys and girls that were his classmates.

He recalls that Albert Moore was the best in the class in reading. Albert could recite many of the McGuffey lessons from beginning to end. He led in grammar, spelling and in the Friday afternoon debates and dialogues. He was popular and his future was full of promise. He graduated by and by and immediately "accepted" a "position" as delivery boy in the village laundry, which job at the end of a dozen years, he continued to hold.

Mamie Turner, Abe said, was the bright light on the girl's side. She wore ruffled dresses, a strand of shiny red beads and combed her hair straight back like a Chinaman. Her books were covered with speckled calico, and she got the most head-marks and never was tardy. She left school with colors flying, got a job in the glue factory where she is yet and with no hope of promotion.

If you went to country school and you have ever given a thought as to what become of the boys and girls with whom you associate in those far-off days, you will appreciate the suggestiveness of Abe's observations. Albert, ne, with the rest of us, should be willing to admit that not all o. the Albert Moores and Mamie Turners, turned out as did the examples of precocity and promise he refers to. Not a few of them continued to climb the ladders of accomplishment and fame.

Small fruit growers in Crittenden county completed shipping plans for a $12,000 strawberry crop.

One hundred fifty acres were signed in Grayson county to grow pickles at $2 per 100 pounds for first class pickles and $1 for second class.

A community meeting was held in connection with a night school in Edmonson county, and gardening, spray programs, etc., were discussed.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER

ESTABLISHED 1875

VOLUME 60

BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY

THURSDAY MAY 23, 1935

NUMBER 14

DEATH

OF MRS. G. C. RANSOM SADDENS COMMUNITY

One of the saddest incidents to take place in our community for some time occurred last Friday night about 11 p. m. in the passing of Mrs. Ransom, wife of Grover C. Ransom, former assessor, bank cashier of Verona, and at present state bank examiner. She had just attended the commencement exercises of Verona High School and seemed in her usual jolly mood. Upon returning home she crossed the street to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arch Noel to attend a charity party, when she was fatally stricken with a heart attack.

"Anna" as she was known by her many friends, was born in Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 27th, 1888, being 47 years old. She was the daughter of Henry and Eva Leofler (nee Knittle). She was united in marriage to Grover C. Ransom in the year 1909. To this union three sons were born—James, Henry and Francis, all of whom survive. She also leaves her father, mother, one brother, Fred Loetner, and one sister Mrs. Gertrude Cherry. She was a loving wife and mother and a neighbor not to be excelled in any way. She was a member of Ekklesia Chapter No. 405 O. E. S. of Verona. After appropriate funeral services conducted at her late home by Rev. A. K. Johnson she was taken to Chattanooga where funeral services were held in the Episcopal church of which she was a member.

The community has suffered an irreparable loss in the going of this good woman as she was of a sunny pleasant disposition and never too busy to do a kind deed or help those in distress. The esteem in which she was held was justly demonstrated by the beautiful floral tributes and the large attendance of sorrowing friends.

The Recorder joins the entire community in extending its heartfelt sympathy to the family.

BANKER TAKEN BY DEATH

Long Illness Fatal to Official of Union Institution

Owen Blankenknecht, vice president of the Union Bank, died early Tuesday at his home in that town following a long illness. Mr. Blankenknecht was 68 years of age.

He leaves his widow, Mrs. Pearl Blankenknecht, and one sister, Mrs. Myrtle Adams. Funeral arrangements are being completed by Philip Tallaferro, Erlanger.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lassing, Jr., and Jack Rouse spent Wednesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. David Gaines of North Bend bottoms.

DIRECTOR

QUITS RESEARCH POST AT UNIVERSITY OF CINCINNATI

Dr. George Spertl, Jr., director of the basic science research laboratory of the University of Cincinnati, has tendered his resignation to the University Board. He will become associated with the Institutum Divi Thomae of the Athenaeum of Ohio in a capacity which will permit him to continue his scientific research work.

In 1925 Dr. Spertl, with Dean Herman Schneider, was one of the cofounders of the University laboratory. Only 35 years old, he has become internationally famous for his research work in biology and dietetics. Last June he received an honorary degree of Doctor of Science from the University of Dayton.

Several years ago the University sold patents of Dr. Spertl's for the irradiation of foods to the General Development Laboratories, New York, subsidiary of the General Foods Corporation, for $300,000. The money was used to remove the laboratory from an attic room at the University to its present location in a remodeled wing of Hanna Hall.

Dr. Spertl, who is unmarried, lives with his parents in Ft. Mitchell, Ky., and has a beautiful home on Gunpowder Creek where he and his relatives spend the summer.

Dean Schneider of the University of Cincinnati paid Dr. Spertl high tribute for his accomplishments at that college. Dean Schneider said that Dr. Spertl has made an unusual record, established a splendid laboratory, and enhanced the scientific reputation of the University.

J. J. Kirkpatrick, W. P. Beemon and Albert William Weaver are engaged in repairing and painting Berkshire's Hall in Petersburg.

MAY APPLY FOR APPRAISAL OF UNSOLD TOBACCO

Boone county farmers who did not sell their 1934 AAA tobacco allotment and have tobacco left unsold and do not want to collect their two cents a pound deficiency payment may apply for an appraisal of that part of their allotment to sell which was produced and remains unsold can be appraised according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

Growers who reduced one-third for 1934 will receive fifteen percent of the sale value of the 1934 crop. This means that part of tobacco remaining unsold have to be appraised at, at least 15 cents per pound, before the 15 percent would equal the two cents a pound that could be collected on a deficiency payment. Growers who reduced one half would receive 35 percent of the appraised value of the 1934 crop unsold. A charge of from one dollar to five dollars per farm depending on the amount involved will be paid by the farmer for the appraisal services.

The appraisal applies only to unsold allotment and not to excess tobacco rendered unmerchantable. Those wanting appraisals should apply at the County Agent's Office in Burlington not later than June 1.

A FAIR EXCHANGE

TO BE PRESENTED BY BURLINGTON

Cast Thursday May 30 and Friday May 31

The people of Boone county will have an opportunity to see a truly great play when A FAIR EXCHANGE is presented at Burlington the evenings of May 30 and 31. Every character is unique, but Isaac Goldberg and "Mama" Goldberg, his wife played by Alexander Yelton and his sister, Virginia, supply all the hot-tempered, mercenary, excitable, and fault-finding characteristics of the typical Russian Jews who come to America to make their fortune. These people speak the Jewish accent which adds to the effectiveness of the play.

The plot centers around the Jews who have an unoccupied, expensive apartment house which is traded through the superior selling ability of the Rea-or, Sigmund Bernstein, to Hans Schneider for his farm. Russell Smith and Courtney Kelly play the parts of Realtor and farmer respectively. The experiences of Goldberg on the farm with PIGS and BEES make hilarious fun while the careful work of Schneider convert the apartments into paying large profits. Both want to trade back and plan to offer the other $500 to trade. Goldberg's son, in love with Schneider's daughter, cause the Jew to pay the $500. Immediately after the trade is completed, oil is struck on the farm. Goldberg's consternation is expressed in his lamenting remark to his wife, "Mama!" "I could cash in on this, but I give him cash. Five one hundred dollar bills I give him!"

Every one should see this delightful play which has charming love interests, an abundance of cross plots and sparkling comedy. See this issue of the Recorder for characters and prices.

$2.45 PER YEAR COST

BULL ASSOCIATION

The Boone county Jersey Bull Association operated from Nov. 1932, to May 15, 1935 at a total cost of $4.95 per member or an annual cost of $2.45 per member in the Association.

During this period one member was forced to give up membership in the association at a cost of $21.67 for two years use of a good herd sire. This membership was accepted immediately by another breeder. The association now owns three excellent bulls that will be proven next year as to production. The fourth animal with an outstanding production pedigree will be proven as to production through daughter-dam production comparison records two years hence.

A meeting of the association members was held in the County Agents office last Wednesday night. Reports that this meeting indicated that all the members are well pleased with progress made to date.

Mrs. Ben C. Stephens of Burlington had her sister Miss Jane Taylor, of Florence and Miss Mary E. Tupman, of Ludlow, the past week as guests. Miss Mary Tupman entered the style show and won first place. She will now attend Junior week to be held at Lexington, beginning June 3 to 7. The two girls had a pleasant time together, during the spare time she had from sewing.

501 LOANS

HAVE BEEN APPROVED BY KENTUCKY
RELIEF ADMINISTRATION

Louisville, Ky., May 22.—To date, in Kentucky, 501 loans for Rural Rehabilitation have been approved with a steady flow of approximately seventy-five applications daily, Earl Mayhew, director of the program for the Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration, said.

The loans, Mr. Mayhew said, range from $38 to as high as $1,050. They represent loans for farm operation, the purchase of farm equipment and animals and the repair of farm buildings. They also include limited loans for living expenses until income from the farm is sufficient to care for the client.

Rural Rehabilitation clients make their own purchases locally under the supervision of Rehabilitation supervisors. Where the purchase of animals is a necessity the supervisor has the aid of a disinterested committee of three to pass upon the value of the animals as well as their fitness for the purpose bought.

Mr. Mayhew said today the assistance rendered through his division was designed to produce for the client income ranging from $250 to $700. He expects the present crop season to permit the filing of applications for another two weeks and after that time a soil improvement program will be carried on to make ready lands of proposed clients for the ensuing year.

Mrs. Geo. Porter spent Friday in Petersburg visiting her mother Mrs. Otis Rouse.

GROUP IS ORGANIZED TO AID
TWO KENTON CO. ORPHANAGES

The Orphans' Welfare Society of Kenton County, a permanent group with the sole purpose to give financial aid to Kenton county's two orphanages, was organized Tuesday night by a group of public spirited citizens of Kenton and Boone counties.

This body of men was responsible for the recent successful party given to raise funds for St. John Orphanage and decided to continue efforts in raising funds for the Covington Protestant Orphan Home and St. John's Orphanage.

Attorney James B. McGarry, chairman of the committee in charge of the recent orphan dance, was retained as chairman of the Orphans' Welfare Society and his first action was to name a committee of three to draft the by-laws of the newly formed organization. Members of this committee are Judges Rodney G. Bryson, Joseph Goodenough and John Hunnicutt, all members of the organization. They are to report at the next meeting to be held at Zimmer's Club house, Dixie Highway, Wednesday, May 22.

BASE BALL NEWS

The game between the Constance team and Midway was postponed on account of rain Sunday, but will be played in the future. Next Sunday May 26th, the Burlington team will play at Midway park. This will be a good game and the boys are expecting a record crowd if the weather permits. Game will be called at 2:30 fast time.

ESTEEMED

CITIZEN PASSES. WAS MEMBER OF PIONEER FAMILY OF
BOONE COUNTY

Mr. Wilson T. Gaines passed away Saturday morning, May 18, at 1 a. m. following a stroke of two days duration in his home two miles north of Burlington, at the age of 75 years, 7 months and 14 days. He comes from a family of five children, one brother William Gaines and one sister Miss Anna M. Gaines survive him. His father and mother, one brother and one sister preceded him to the Great Beyond.

The family, pioneers of Boone county, were esteemed, loved and numbered among the best citizens of the county, his father was the Secretary of the Mutual Fire Insurance Co., for many years, and a leader in the Universalist church of Burlington for many years.

Funeral services were conducted at the grave in the Hebron cemetery Monday at 2 p. m., by Rev. Stanley Stahl, of Norwalk, Ohio, a minister of the Universalist faith, in the presence of a number of relatives and friends, after which his remains were laid to rest in the family lot along side of his loved ones.

Chambers & Grubbs had charge of the funeral arrangements.

WINNER

OF COUNTY 4-H CLUBS SELECTED
FRIDAY. WILL REPRESENT COUNTY AT LEXINGTON

Burlington, Hebron and Florence 4-H clubs were victors in the county 4-H improved farm and home practice demonstration team contest and 4-H sewing club girls style show, contests held at Burlington last Friday May 17th. The winners of the contest will represent the county at Junior Week held at the University of Kentucky, Lexington, June 3rd to the 8th according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

Creed Harris and Thomas Hensley, Jr., of Burlington, "Blue Ribbon 4-H Club" were victors in the farm practice contest. They demonstrated "The Standard and Quick Method of Treating Seed Potatoes For Scab."

"Canning Green Beans" was very capably demonstrated by Virginia Reimer and Catherine Casper of the Hebron "Norben Champions 4-H Club." This team was awarded first place in the home practice demonstration. The Burlington team composed of Olive Louise Poston and Betsy Edkins was awarded second place presenting a splendid demonstration entitled "Sewing Stitches in 4-H Clothing Project."

Mary Elvina Tupman was awarded first and Evelyn Highhouse second in the style show. Both are members of Florence K-L-L-ALL 4-H Club. The high quality of work indicated the splendid work being done by Boone County 4-H leaders.

30 MILLION PLANTS ARE DISTRIBUTED BY K. E. R. A.

Louisville, Ky., May 22.—Thirty million tomato, cabbage and sweet potato plants are being distributed to relief gardeners in the state by the Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration. Distribution, Dr. E. E. Pittman, director, said, will be completed within ten days.

All of the plants have been grown in the respective counties to insure quality delivery. Only relief labor was used in their growth, Dr. Pittman said.

FAREWELL PARTY

A farewell party was given for little Phil Hoffman of Farmer City, Illinois by his aunt Mrs. Chas. C. Hennessy of Dortha Ave., Thursday, May 16th from 2:30 to 5 p. m.

Games and contests were played during the afternoon and every one had a fine time and lots of fun. Phil received many lovely gifts from his little friends. Late in the afternoon dainty refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. Those present beside Phil were Betty Surface, Nancy Meyers, Virginia Lee Osborne, Marion Tanner, Bobby Martin, Dale Myers, Alma Tanner, Roy Martin and Lee Surface. Phil, who is five years old has spent the past two months with his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hennessy of Florence, and left for his home on last Saturday morning. Mrs. Dave Osborne accompanied Virginia Lee to the party also.

William Driver, Wendell Keim and "Rags" Rye, of Petersburg, were callers in Burlington last Sunday.

AGED LADY

PASSES AWAY. FUNERAL
VICES HELD THURSDAY MORNING

Mrs. Sarah E. Roberts passed away in her home at Hume, Boone county Tuesday May 14th, at 10 p. m., following an illness due to infirmities of old age, at the age of 88 years, 10 months and 12 days. She was the daughter of the late B. B. Alphin, Sr., and Katie Baker, and wife of Robert Roberts. She leaves one son T. B. Roberts, of Hume, Boone county, one brother J. J. Alphin, of South Fork, one sister Mrs. Nora Finnell, of Detroit, four grandchildren and a number of nephews and nieces to mourn her passing.

Funeral services were conducted from the South Fork Christian church of which she was a member, Thursday morning at 11 a. m., by her pastor Bro. McCord, in the presence of a concourse of relatives and friends, after which her remains were laid to rest in the Hance cemetery along side of her husband, who preceded her several years ago. The pallbearers were Sleet Alphin, Harry Alphin, Robert Finnell, James Carpenter, Jno. Allen and Russel Sparks.

Chambers & Grubbs had charge of the funeral arrangements.

JOHN URI LLOYD
VISITS BURLINGTON

The Recorder was delighted to receive a visit last Thursday from John Uri Lloyd and his son, John Thomas Lloyd. The Lloyds have always taken great interest in Boone County and visit here whenever possible. The Editor was glad to note Prof. Lloyd, senior, altho 86 years old was in good health. He said he felt extremely well and did not have an ache or pain. John Uri Lloyd has always believed in keeping mentally occupied. As an illustration of this he is now engaged in writing his autobiography which he expects to bring out later. Upon his return to Cincinnati Prof. Lloyd mailed two autographed copies of his most recent book, "Our Willy," one to the Editor and one to the Recorder, for which he has our thanks and gratitude.

Principal E. E. Kirkwood returned Tuesday from Maconsonville, Ky., and other points south where he was called on business. While there he visited Mrs. Kirkwood's father who is seriously ill at his home in Lyon county. Before returning Mr. Kirkwood attended the Southern Baptist Convention at which there were 10,000 ministers present.

OBJECTIVE

OF KENTUCKY TAX REDUCTION
ASSOCIATION IS TO ABOLISH FEE SYSTEM

Abolishing the fee system of paying county officials in Kentucky and providing for their compensation on a definite salary basis is one of the important objectives of the Kentucky Tax Reduction Association at the next regular session of the General Assembly.

No constitutional changes are necessary to do this—simply an act of the legislature.

It is not proposed to abolish fees as such, but simply to discontinue the practice of paying these fees directly into the pockets of the office holders, paying such officials a definite salary, and providing for the deposit of all fees in the public treasury.

Such a move, if successful, will save the taxpayers of the state a considerable sum of money. Just how much, it is impossible to determine, since the record of these fees has only recently been made available, even in part, and probably never will be fully revealed. The only remedy is to abolish the fee system and provide for definite salaries.

However, there are certain facts which have been uncovered as a result of the operation of the County Audit Law, sponsored by the Association and enacted by the legislature in 1934.

During the few short months that this law has been in effect, the State Inspector and Examiner, in carrying out its provisions, has found that the individual net earnings of fee-receiving officials amount to $15,000 to $20,000 annually in many instances, and for several years past. This is true even in rural counties where fees are not generally regarded as very lucrative, and where no examinations of fee records have ever been made until recently.

Thus far, official examinations have been made in about 30 counties, and upon the facts developed it is estimated that the total excess in all the fee-receiving offices will average $12,500 for each of the 120 counties of the state, or a total of $1,500,000 for the entire State.

COUNTY HOME DEMONSTRATION MAY BE EMPLOYED

A delegation of about twenty-five Boone county women appeared before the Fiscal Court at its last meeting in the interest of having the Court employ a food and household demonstrator for the county. This work will do for the county what the county agent does for the farm and farmer. A representative from the University of Kentucky was present and explained the work to those present. The Fiscal Court took the matter under advisement and seemed to be favorable to such a project after July, providing funds could be secured to finance the department. The Recorder believes such a department would be of great value to the county and hopes funds can be raised to provide for it.

Sheriff W. D. Cotton and deputies Lucille and Ruby, were in Frankfort one day last week. Cotton making his settlement with the State.

B. F. Berkshire and Law Chambers, of Petersburg, attended a wheat meeting in Burlington Tuesday night.

FORMER

BOONE CO. PHYSICIAN ENDS OWN LIFE

Believed despondent because of ill health, Dr. B. K. Menefee, 70 years old, 2120 Glenway Avenue, Covington, ended his life by using a bullet through his head. Dr. Jas. P. Riffe, Kenton County Coroner, who investigated, reported the death a suicide.

Mrs. Emma Menefee, wife of the doctor, was in the basement of their home when she heard a muffled report, but thought it outside the house. Later she found her husband dead on the bathroom floor.

Dr. Menefee was one of the most widely known physicians in Northern Kentucky. He was a member of the Kenton and Campbell County Medical Societies. He had been ill frequently in late months it was said.

Mrs. Menefee said she did not know where her husband obtained the revolver he used to end his life. She said that to her knowledge Dr. Menefee had never owned a gun.

Dr. Riffe said Dr. Menefee had stood in front of a mirror, then shot himself in the center of the forehead.

Dr. Menefee was graduated from the Louisville College of Medicine in 1883. He began practice in Verona, Ky. He later practiced in Crittenden and Walton, Ky. He came to Covington in 1916.

He was a member of Walton Lodge of Masons, Kishmoo Grotto, Covington, and Covington Commandry No. 7, Knights Templar.

Burial was at Gardnersville, Grant county.

Besides his widow, two daughters, Mrs. John R. Allison, Gardner, Ill., and Mrs. Rodney Perry Hughes, of Walton, Ky., a brother, Dr. A. V. Menefee and a cousin, Dr. C. A. Menefee, both of Covington, survive him.

WILLIAM GAINES PASSED AWAY
EARLY WEDNESDAY MORNING

As we go to press we regret to learn of the death of Wm. Gaines. His brother, Wilson, preceded him only a day or two ago. William Gaines was 77 years of age. He died at 1:35 A. M., Wednesday morning at his home near Burlington. The funeral will be held Friday, May 24, at 2 P. M., slow time. The services will be held at the Hebron Lutheran church. Further details will be included in next week's issue.

The work of crushing gravel is rapidly progressing at the gravel pit above Bellevue.

SOUVENIR HUNTING

Souvenir Hunting has a history, to which this generation has no intention of writing fins.

Three centuries ago the Indians stole scalps as souvenirs of happy moments spent among the paleface settlers. A century later the more enterprising of the settlers were seizing ships. By some they were called pirates, by others patriots. A hundred years ago the souvenir-hunting fever ran to effigies of congressmen. Today it runs to everything.

Nothing is safe from this pest. Wrecked automobiles are quickly dismantled. Epoch-making airplanes must be protected against them. Home-run baseballs and balls hit into the bleachers never return to the playing field. Hotels and pullman cars keep the nation supplied with towels, linen and useful little knick-knacks.

Plymouth Rock was being chipped away to nothingness until a steel barrier was built around it. The federal government must be constantly on guard against souvenir hunting vandals who knock chips from monuments and public buildings. Not even the monuments on the Gettysburg battlefield are safe.

When the souvenir craze hits a citizen he usually loses all reason, morality, honesty, honor, sentiment and discretion. He seeks to justify his pilferings and spoils by the strange logic that the taking of that possessed of only commemorative or sentimental value cannot be stealing.

FAMILY CASH

Forty-one per cent of the wealth of the United States is in the hands of women, financial statisticians estimate. This includes real estate, stocks, bonds and cash in bank. That places womanhood as an important "prospect" for banks and investment brokers.

Theoretically, then, 59 per cent of the wealth is owned by men. Theoretically is used advisedly, for if pay checks issued to husbands and bank accounts in their names were credited to the wives who really control them, the percentages would be reversed.

Poor man! He is in a sorrier condition than the figures indicate, disconcerting though they are. How far off is the time when husbands will be arguing indignantly with their wives for a generous allowance, instead of doling money out to their wives in grudging spirit.

Wifely reaction to this possibility is that it would serve the "old tightwad" good. The housewife's chronic complaint is that man will never learn that it takes more than cigar money to operate the house.

No doubt modern conditions have created new causes for domestic strife and divorces, but the good old reliable home-wrecker is the adequate domestic budget and the "provider" who demands choice cuts on pin money.

CROOKED PATHS

A beaten path across a hillside or thru a wood rarely runs straight. It turns aside for obstacles, makes concessions to uneven ground and the rise and fall of the slope or turns for the vantage of view, or a better vision of the destination. Yet it was first made by the fact of men who were chiefly concerned to get through directly and quickly.

Most of the highways of life run likewise crooked, curving and twisting constantly from the straight path of intention. Little things block the trail, and it is easier to avoid them than to remove or surmount them. Tempting paths of easy going are offered on either side. Sometimes the straight trail is lost beyond recovery; often it is won again only after much time wasted in wandering.

Most of us start out in confidence and determination toward a chosen goal. We hold fast to our course so long as good intention is fresh; we lose it when the distractions of the way steal our eyes from the goal ahead. This is the most tragic wastage of the world, whereby high hopes go for nothing and human strength and talent are lost to the service of mankind. Such waste is avoided by looking for guidance both backward and forward—back to the zeal of the beginning and forward to the hope of the end.

THE WINNER IS THE LOSER

With the opening of the active campaign of Lieutenant Governor A. B. "Happy" Chandler, the race for Governor is heading into deep waters of a heated battle.

When the last vote in the final election is counted there will be one winner. There will be a winner in the poll tabulation who will go to Frankfort for his inaugural address; who will stand on the capital steps and tell the people of the Commonwealth that here is one Governor that will not be handled or bullied. So many words.

The winner shall be the loser and the losers shall be the winners if past gubernatorial records speak truly. From the mansion every four years there emerges a man with bowed shoulders and a vow never again to enter the field of politics; he is broken in power and body. The Governor's post has taken its toll. Into the portals that he has vacated there comes the new leader with head thrown back, receiving congratulations and with will that service, and honesty shall be his bywords. Four years later he too walks from the capital a relic, buffeted by aversion and criticism.

It is worth it?

Is it to be wondered that most of the State's leaders steer clear of the Governor's chair?

The status of Fields, Morrow and Sampson are perfect examples of what Kentucky does to its first citizens.

POWER OF SUGGESTION

This has been characterized as implies an open mind, the absence of bigotry, possession of the power to reason, and a willingness to hear both sides to every question before forming one's own conclusions. It follows, therefore, that modern society, being more tolerant of the opinions and manners of others, should be more open to suggestion. It is probably a fact that the great mass of Americans was never before more subject to suggestion.

Everybody has heard of the power of suggestion and everybody has seen it demonstrated through the medium of political reform, advertising and slang catchphrases. A specious slogan can win acclaim for a creed or cause previously universally rejected and obviously fallacious. Than the catchphrase there is no more effective camouflage for the spurious.

Suggestion plays a most important part in business. Advertising, show windows and show cases owe their origin and usefulness to the power of suggestion. Contrary to a popular impression, the merchant advertises and displays his wares to create a desire for possession among those who see them and it is through suggestion that the desire is created.

ONE RESULT OF RELIEF

The inevitable result of Government feeding and clothing of a certain type of individual—the type which never turns a hand to help itself if another will assume the burden—is making itself felt in the South. Strawberries were rotting on the vines in the strawberry belt of Eastern North Carolina says the Greensboro Daily News, and a thousand pickers could have been placed, but pickers were few. Persons on relief, the News reveals, preferred to stay that way.

The situation was so serious that Gov. Ehringhaus appealed to the State Relief administration with the result that she—that official is a woman—wired local relief agents that persons on relief must accept work opportunities. Possibly the berries will be picked.

That such an intolerable situation should arise is only natural, but doubtless it could be handled without the necessity of appealing to the Governor or higher-ups if local officials pointed to the work and laid down the law of "No work, no relief." The type of individual who can live on a few dollars a week content not to rise above the lowest scale of living, makes the problem of bringing an end to Government bounty a difficult one.

The strawberry season is now coming on in Kentucky. Another month, may see it in full swing. This is an important industry in Kentucky. The McCracken County Growers' Association, the largest single fruit growing co-operative unit in the world, last year was composed of 3,900 growers who raised 7,000 acres of berries and shipped 735 carloads. The Warren, Simpson and Logan County Associations, the group in Lincoln and Pulaski counties and the fine new Jefferson county cooperative grow thousands of acres more. It is up to relief agencies to see that these growers do not lack for labor on account of Government bounty.

QUIT YOUR SINS
(Christian Advocate)

If you are eating yourself to death, quit it. A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things he hath in his stomach.

If you are profaning your soul away with cursing and swearing, quit it. It is perfectly wonderful how useless profanity is in any and every body.

If you are smoking yourself to death quit it. Suicide is a sin, whether slow or swift.

If you are slandering your character threadbare, quit it. No slanderer can be fine and big.

If you are worrying yourself to death, quit it. "Take ye no anxious thought for the morrow."

If you are dancing yourself to death, quit it. It is a sin against personality to dance yourself to death.

If you are drinking yourself to death, quit it. "No drunkard shall inherit the Kingdom of Heaven."

Washington.—Now it can be told—who started the depression and why! It was Australia, many months before our stock market crash, and the why is that a change in fashions played hob with Australia's exports of wool, for the simple reason that women stopped wearing so many woollen garments and men began wearing lighter clothes.

Whereupon, nearly every one in Australia being "poor," and the balance of trade against Australia reaching frightening proportions, Australia clamped on drastic restrictions against imports, especially leveled against automobiles and trucks.

Which, added to the fact that up to then Australia had been the largest single purchaser of American-made automobiles and trucks, knocked over the first card of a distressingly long pile, and each successive falling card knocked over the next one.

All of which, of course, is not really intended to convince anyone that Australia really started the depression, or that the present impasse on world trade would not have resulted if there had been no Australia, but is a highly illuminating telescopic view of the world situation reduced to an easily understandable formula.

It is particularly appropriate at the moment in view of the hubbub over the alleged statement of President Roosevelt that foreign trade is a thing of the past, to which Senator A. H. Vandenberg paid so much attention in the senate.

It is also appropriate with Italy and Poland just having restricted imports of American automobiles, machinery and many other products to one-fourth of the 1934 figures.

Look at the Record

Without attempting to place Australia in the prisoner's dock, therefore, let's look at the record. The big commonwealth "down under" made these restrictions well in advance of the beginning of the depression here. The date of this beginning in America is hotly disputed, but most economists agree that the stock market crash of October, 1929, was merely the result of a collapse in business, which was already well under way before most business men—even those engaged in the industries hardest hit—appreciated it. Nearly every one thought it was just a temporary dip in the production curve. They had heard cries of "Wolf! Wolf!" a dozen times before during the Coolidge administration, but had seen business march on to higher levels later, with stock market prices continually climbing as a result.

But when Australia stopped buying American motors and trucks the avalanche started, though no one thought for the time that it was more than a pebble rolling downhill. For the drying up of motor manufacturing, with its cutting down of buying from steel plants, the factories, battery makers, upholstery weavers, etc., was well under way by July, 1929, three months before the stock market dive.

What brings all this up for consideration in Washington at the moment is that several very important persons, some from Europe and some from other parts of the world, including Australia, have been in our midst for the last few days, and have been trying to figure out how to end the present international trade stalemate.

Nearly every one agrees that if some nation would just start the upward push, as some think Australia started the downward-drive, the world could work out one of the present dramas. But how to get started? Naturally the visitors with one accord say that the United States is the nation to start it. The British say that we should reduce our tariff on textiles, whereupon they would buy more of our cotton, etc. That gets a loud laugh, though with no mirth, in New England, not to mention North Carolina. But it illustrates the difficulty of applying a self starter!

Old Problem Up Again

The old long and short haul railroad rate controversy is due for another airing. This time the subject will be brought up in an effort to help the struggling railroads. Chairman Rayburn, of the house interstate and foreign commerce committee, proposes to try to remove one of the restrictions in the present law which has tripped the railroads considerably.

This is the provision that if a through rate is made, which happens to be less than the rate for part of the same distance, the cheaper through rate must be compensatory. Or in short that the railroad must make a profit at the lower rate.

At first blush it would seem that the railroads would have no objection to such a provision. But they have plenty. Their chief objection is that the Interstate Commerce commission, worrying about this injunction, has been very slow about approving any cheap through rates. It was said, time and again, to some railroad seeking to put one in, that obviously there could be no profit in such a rate, so there was no use considering it.

Whereas, the railroad company involved might be perfectly sure that there would be more dollars in its treasury at the end of any given period if it were allowed to make that rate, whether it could prove that the particular rate would yield a profit on the particular shipments made under it or not.

FORTY YEARS AGO

From the Files of The Boone County Recorder
ISSUE OF MAY 22, 1895

Died.—On the 21st inst., about 7 o'clock a. m., Lafayette Barlow, aged 61 years. Mr. Barlow was born and raised in this county, and was one of its best citizens. He resided in the Gunpowder neighborhood. At the time of going to press we had not learned any of the particulars regarding the funeral.

Miss Emma Moody evotes her entire time to fashion, and artistic dressmaking at her home near Bellevue. For beauty, taste, perfect fitting and elegance of style her garments are unequalled. She cordially solicits your patronage and guarantees satisfaction. Give her a call.

The following postal from Rev. J. A. Kirtley, explains itself: Please notice in your next issue that the North Bend Ministers and Deacons meeting will be held at Independence on Friday the 31 and the day following. There has been some misunderstanding of the time.

Jack Frost the assassin, laid in wait for the gardens last week, and came very near exterminating them. A second edition of planting was the result of his late visit in this part of the country.

Last week we said W. T. German was appointed supervisor of roads instead of T. B. Rouse, resigned. We should have said W. T. Gaines not German.

J. M. Barlow received considerable wool at this place yesterday. Wagons loaded with wool commenced arriving before sun up.

Those who had not planted their corn previous to the cold weather, saved both labor and seed in many instances.

Born.—To John W. Kirkpatrick and wife, on the 15th inst., a daughter.

Tomorrow week is Labor Day.

The game of ball between Burlington and Florence, played here last Saturday afternoon, as a one-sided affair, the score standing 47 to 3. There were but two brilliant players in the field. A one-handed catch by Dulaney at second and a long running catch of a fly by Maxwell in left field, Sandford's base running was sensational in the extreme, and he now holds the best record ever made on the local grounds—seven runs and no outs in one game.

The battery Brady and Hawes is in fine form this season. The Florence boys are a pleasant set of fellows and keep the fun going although playing in hard luck.

The social and dance given at the residence of J. B. Berkshire, last Friday evening was one of the most brilliant events of the social year. About 20 couples were present. Never was there a more magnificent gathering of charming femininity or a scene of more splendor than in the parlor last Friday evening with its graceful matrons its throngs of courtly gallants and its clusters of beautiful and graceful young ladies. The whole was like a shifting panorama, a fleeting beauty show, to gladden the eye and memory for a time until it shall be overshadowed by some later social event. At 12 o'clock the guest repaired to the dining room where a most excellent supper was served, and Mrs. Berkshire's taste in the preparation of the supper is much to be commended, for it was a positive triumph of culinary art.

After supper the admirers of Tersichore continued their merry enjoyment until it was wee sma' hours, when the guests bade the host and hostess a final adieu. Among those present were Misses Ella Duncan, Olga Kirkpatrick, Kitty Gaines, Anna and Lottie Garrison, Aatie Huey, Mary and Katherine Furlong, Sheba Roberts, Fannie Finch, Annie Cowen, Mrs. W. C. Brown, J. M. Lassing, J. E. Hall, Maud Furnish, W. L. Riddell, J. H. Ryle and J. S. Clutterbuck, Messrs. J. M. Lassing, Dr. Furnish, Jack Sadford, Ed. McKim, Kirk Tanner, W. D. Cropper, W. C. Brown, J. S. Clutterbuck, John Hogan, Hubert Gaines, J. H. Ryle, Bob Clutterbuck, Leslie Clutterbuck, W. L. Riddell, W. F. Berkshire and Hubert Walton, of Petersburg.

Personal Mention

Homer Clutterbuck narrowly escaped a serious accident Saturday morning. He was riding a colt which threw him and one of his feet hung in the stirrup. The colt made a lunge or two with him when fortunately the leather straps to which the girth was fastened broke and the saddle came off.

Dr. Chas. L. Grant, of Louisville, and his mother Mrs. J. Frank Grant of Petersburg, were guests of Mrs. Virginia Huey one day last week. The Doctor is one of the bright lights in the medical profession in the Falls City, besides being an all round clever gentleman.

We notice Messrs. S. P. Brady, C. C. Roberts, Hubert Gaines and

STRAWBERRY PRESERVES
Mix a pint of sugar with barely enough water to dissolve, about a half of a cup. Let this come to boil. Put in a heaping pint of strawberries, bring to a boil, add another level pint of sugar, again bring to a boil and add another pint of berries. Let boil 10 minutes. Spread in shallow dishes for 24 hours. Place with fork in jars. The juice left over may be put in bottles.

Canning Strawberries
Strawberries contain so much water that they do not make an attractive canned product. Some kinds keep their color, flavor and texture better than others. The Redheart and Premier are particularly good berries to can.

Gather the berries in shallow trays or baskets and can as soon as possible after gathering. Remove caps, discard all soft berries and wash by dipping in and out of water or pouring water over them. Make a little juice by crushing the small and soft berries. Add one cup of sugar and two tablespoons of juice to one quart of berries, bring to boiling point, cover and let stand over night. In the morning pack in hot jars and process 20 minutes in a water bath.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Cotton and daughters spent a few hours in Louisville Wednesday. Mr. Cotton going there on business.

THE GARDEN

THE "SECOND" GARDEN
By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

There is a sharp division between the early garden and the late garden, for they merge. This is the time, however, for beginning to arrange for that part of the garden that is to furnish vegetables for the late fall for canning and storing for the winter, for now space will begin to appear, in which "succession" vegetables may be put.

For example, the early greens and radishes are done. Rather than let their ragged leaves stay to furnish opportunity for the cabbage worms to multiply, they should be removed, the rows respaced and a row of beans planted, or, for that matter, since now is the time to assure beets and cardots to store for the winter, either of these. There may be rows of peas now at their prime, or just past. In these, without disturbing them, tomato plants may be set 4 feet apart. When the peas are finally picked, the vines may be removed from around the tomatoes and they will go on to occupy the space.

If it is desired to have pole beans, hills of corn, one stalk each, may be put in rows of peas or of spinach, now cutting, and three beans planted about them, later thinned to two stalks. Although this is not quite orthodox gardening, it does solve the bean-pole problem. Kentucky Wonders may be used, or if variety is an item, Tall Horticultural. This is a "green-snell" bean, a change from the greenpod sorts. As for the corn, also the "roasting ear" sorts, Johnson County, Louisville Market and Hickory King are all very well in their way, sweet corn is better. It is suggested that, for a real treat, Golden Cross Bantam be used.

Bean planting should go on every two weeks, but during June and the first half of July the rows should be twice as long, so that a dependable canning surplus is had. For these plantings, Refugee or Thousand-to-one may be used.

Although there are a few strings, the superior flavor and yield of this variety commend it.

The variety of tomatoes to use is Marglobe, for it is resistant to the wilt disease, found in many home gardens. Even though the wilt is not present, Marglobe gives good account of itself, its main fault being that it cracks about the stem, when the season is uneven in moisture, but that is fault common to most varieties, in unsuitable weather.

The best beet to raise for winter storing is Detroit Dark Red. It is capable of producing large shapely roots that stay tender no matter what their size. Their color, deep red and black, add to their desirability.

The best storing carrot is Chantenay, a short, broad shapely root of fine quality and texture, no matter how large it gets. Its color, too, commends it.

The fight against the pests must, of course, go on. The Mexican bean beetle may be particularly troublesome on late beans. Properly handled, this insect can be controlled. On the summer-started beet seedlings, the black flea beetle may be bothersome, but a spraying or two of Bordeaux mixture ought to bring them through their critical time.

Late tomatoes are almost free of insect pests, except possibly the flea beetles, the control for which is Bordeaux. The tomato fruitworm, troublesome on the first tomatoes, generally leaves the later ones alone, seeming to prefer corn. To control it on corn, dusting the newly-formed silks with arsenical is advised.

CONDENSED FINANCIAL STATEMENT OF COUNTY TREASURER DOES NOT COMPLY WITH LAW

In certain counties condensed statements of the County Treasurer have been published. This is contrary to the law according to Attorney General Wootton in a letter on the subject addressed to R. L. Westover, Editor of the Grant County News Williamstown, Ky. The letter follows and is self-explanatory:

Frankfort, Ky. tucky,
April 1, 1935.

"Mr. R. L. Westover,
Editor. The Grant County News,

"Dear Sir:

"I have your letter of the 20th closing copy of a county treasurer's report of settlement, as published in the Grant County News. You want to know if this meets the requirements of the Statutes.

"Section 3747 a-1 of the Statutes requires that every public official of any county, graded school district, city or town or subdivision charged with the collection, custody, control or disbursement of public funds

"... shall, at the expiration of each fiscal year, prepare an itemized, sworn statement of such funds so collected, received, held or disbursed by him during the fiscal year just closed, which statement shall show the amount disbursed, the date of each disbursement for what purpose expended and to whom paid.

"The next section makes it a penalty of not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for any public official who fails, refuses or neglects to comply with Section 3747 a-1.

"Strictly speaking, your publication does not comply with the Statutes, as you have omitted the dates, and, in some instances, the party to whom disbursements have made

Very truly yours,
BAILEY F. WOOTTON,
Attorney General

CHAPTER I.—Matt Kearney, young American living in London, says goodbye to his sister Eileen, on board the steamer Wallaroo bound for Colombo. The Wallaroo is conveying £2,000,000 in gold to Australia. Eileen has a presentiment of coming evil, which affects her brother. On his way home Kearney meets an old friend, Inspector Dawson Haig, of Scotland Yard, who is very much in love with Eileen. Haig is on the trail of opium, which he is convinced is concealed in Jo Lung's warehouse. Called to other duty, Haig delegates Kearney, with Detective Norwich, to visit the place and find out what he can.

CHAPTER II.—They find the place a veritable treasure house, and Kearney recognizes jewels stolen from his aunt. While in the warehouse he picks up a notebook. Soon after leaving Kearney Norwich is murdered. Haig is puzzled over cryptic notes in the book, referring to steps to be made by the Wallaroo.

Inspector Eddy of Leman Street had placed his men with care. It would have been difficult for a rat to enter the premises of Jo Lung without attracting the attention of one of them. His dispositions effected:

"That ought to do," he said to the detective sergeant who accompanied him. "Scotland Yard seems to think that the murderer will make for here tonight; if he does, he'll fall into the net."

In a mean house near the corner of a mean street, outside the curtain drawn by the police around the suspected premises, a light shone behind a blue shade of an upper window. On the opposite side of a second, wider thoroughfare a furtive figure crept along close to the dingy shops. It paused, turned, and seemed to sink into the shadows again.

It next appeared, this sinking shape, at a spot east of the treasure house of Jo Lung. At the end of a little courtyard upon which several mean residences opened, a blue-shaded fanlight was dimly illuminated.

The lurking figure became merged in shadows once more. . . . then immediately opposite a narrow alley it stood watching.

At the far end a dim yellow light was visible. The indeterminate shape darted across, then swiftly slipped aside, and exercising a strange affinity with darkness, became magically lost again. . . . except that reddish eyes—like the eyes of a watching leopard—gleamed in the dusk.

Some one was coming out—some one who had stopped dead at the moment that that elusive thing darted across his path.

There was a moment of silence. . . . a soft whistle—two minor notes. It was answered from the lee of a high wall. Thereupon a reed-like voice spoke rapidly in Chinese: "All is here. Follow swiftly. Do not show yourself."

Yu'an came out into the street. Beside him was a small figure so muffled that, beyond the fact that she was a woman, no one could have identified her. They set out in the direction of the river.

Ten paces they had gone when a figure appeared from the alleyway and glided in the same direction. Close behind him, stooping, ape-like, came another. And this singular procession headed toward the Thames.

A wicket gate was opened, and a deserted yard crossed. Out onto a wharf Yu'an led, and down slippery wooden steps to where, riding the sluggish tide, a boat was moored. Jo Lung assisted his passengers on board. The following shades, one swift behind the other, leaped on board also.

As Jo Lung cast the painter loose and took to his oars:

"Quick!" Yu'an spoke the word in Chinese upon a note high with excitement. "Claw of you has it?"

A large, claw-like hand was stretched back to him. . . . and in it was the green-bound memo book!

"How many?" he asked.

"One."

Whereupon he began to laugh, that high, uncanny laughter which seemed to harmonize with the creaking of Jo Lung's oars. . . . Jo Lung rested on his oars, and:

"Police patrol," he said. "Shall I pull for the bank, my lord?"

"Foot! They would hear the oars. The tide is carrying down to those barges. Stand by, my friend, with the book, and when we reach the first of them, cling tightly."

"Out outside those barges, Mason," said the officer in charge of the river police launch. "I want to get a closer look at that smart motor cruiser lying in the Reach."

"It belongs to Mr. Van Steyn, the American sportsman. It has been under repair in Bulker's yard. I suppose the repairs have been completed, and they meant to go down this evening but were held up by the fog."

"Where the devil are they going? This is no season for motor cruising."

"I don't think there's anybody on board except a scratch crew. They intend to take her round to Cowes, I expect."

"Is that so? Well, edge in close, dead slow, and let's have a good look." The river police drifted alongside the spruce-looking craft—a forty-foot motor cruiser. Her paint work was very new, but of a queer battleship gray, unusual in pleasure boats. There was nothing to show that there was anybody aboard.

But when, half an hour later, Jo Lung's party drew alongside, two very active Asiatics appeared above the bows of the motor cruiser. Having assisted Yu'an and the woman aboard, they rapidly hauled up and disposed of a great number of small packing cases stowed in the stern of the boat. These contained the opium destined for Australia—which Dawson Haig had been covering.

It had been removed that night under the very noses of the police and was now safe from their curiosity!

In the luxuriously appointed little cabin of the cruiser, Yu'an drew from the pocket of his furled coat a string of blazing fire opals, roughly threaded on waxed silk. He threw them around the long slender throat of his companion.

"Tonight, I can afford to be generous," he said. "They suit you, Orange Blossom, who are all fire and ice. . . ."

Dawson Haig pressed irritably again and again upon the bell beside the wicket gate of Jo Lung's warehouse door. His light blue eyes sparkled dangerously. Believing that the elusive Big Chief, having caused murder to be committed upon the person of a Scotland Yard officer, was about to elude him again, he was prepared to stick at nothing.

Then the wicket gate opened, and a neatly groomed and imperturbable Levantine stood before them, stirring with apparent surprise past Dawson Haig and the detective sergeant to where a group of plain-clothes officers and two uniformed men might be seen in the narrow street.

"Good evening," he said, smiling in apparent confusion. "I'm afraid you have alarmed me."

"Indeed," said Haig. "I'm sorry. I am a police officer, and I hold a warrant to search these premises."

"Really!" the Greek exclaimed. "But on what grounds have you obtained this warrant?"

"Harboring a man wanted for murder!" was the grim reply. "Come on, Warrender."

Haig turned to a group of men who had followed him in, and:

"Along the yard," he ordered. "Bear to the left and you'll find a door. Through it and into the warehouse. There are five small cases there, consigned from Birmingham per R. M. S. Wallaroo to Sydney. When you find them—let me know."

"One moment!" Polidos was the speaker.

"Well?" Haig turned to him as two men set off. "What is it?"

"Only this," the Greek continued smoothly: "Your suspect cannot very well be hidden in one of the small cases you speak of! And the door in question is permanently locked. The warehouse beyond is leased by Messrs. King. Are you sure, Inspector, that your warrant extends to their premises?"

Dawson Haig stared at the speaker. That official red tape which trammels the movements of an officer of the Criminal Investigation department danced before his eyes visibly, and he stifled language unsuitable to the occasion, as:

"H—, Inspector!" came a hail from the far end of the yard. "There's a door here, but it's locked. Are we to smash it?"

"No!" Haig shouted. "Come back. It doesn't matter, anyway. They'll have had the stuff out by now."

In due course the search party reached that business-like office up stairs, and:

"You see," said Polidos, smiling and pointing to a number of books open on the desk, "I was hard at work. The staff, of course, has been gone for hours."

Dawson Haig stared into liquid dark eyes, as unreadable as the riddle of the Sphinx. A sudden wild urge rose to his brain—to take this slimy hypocrite by the throat and to choke him until he coughed up the truth. But:

"I'll just glance over your accounts, Mr. Polidos," Haig said.

Outside in the Chinese quarter, at four points unobserved by the police, blue lights were burning, for no orders had been given to extinguish them. When, half an hour later, the search party left the treasure house of Jo Lung, Dawson Haig drew Warrender aside.

"Take charge, Warrender," he said, "and stand by. Wait for me here. I've bungled this job badly."

He set off through deserted streets. And presently he found himself in a mean little yard with three doors opening upon it. . . . that yard from which the one who laughed, the Chinese woman, and two shadows had come out an hour before. All three doors were closed. No light was visible.

There was a constable on duty. "You're absolutely sure," Haig challenged, "that nobody has gone in or come out?"

"Positive, sir."

"Carry on," Haig snapped. He suspected this to be the Big Chief's private entrance. But if he dared to force it he would be in bad trouble. He muttered savagely, and walked away.

The light of a gray dawn was stealing through the Temple. "Well, Matt," said Dawson Haig, "you asked me to let you know, so you have only yourself to blame!"

Kearney nodded, smiling: "I'm glad you came. And we're both used to late hours. Fill your glass and go ahead."

"Comes to this," Haig continued. "I should have started by covering the rat-run out of Three Colt street. I only suspect—but all the same I'm moderately sure—that the leakage was there. But if King Rat is inside he won't get out! Every hole is stopped. Unfortunately, I think King Rat has slipped away again."

"The horror with the tusks undoubtedly followed you—God knows how—for the memo book. . . . Yes! stroke your throat! You are lucky to have one intact. Incidentally, so am I! Those cunning devils must have spotted poor Norwich for a police officer. They tackled him first, you see—failed to find the notebook, and then came after you."

Matt Kearney shuddered. "They were warned in some way, or Eddy would have nerved them to the way back. These people are artists—one must admit it. That display of day books and ledgers was surely intended to lead up to the one entry—the one to which the Greek drew my attention."

"You mean the sale, some time after poor Norwich and I were there, of a set of opals to a mythical customer?" Dawson Haig nodded.

"For the considerable sum of two thousand pounds in cash," he added savagely. "Which cash, when I challenged him, the Greek produced from the safe. Infernally clever. Damnably, poisonously clever. I'm skirting the edge of this case, Kearney. I'm a thousand miles from the heart of it."

"Personally," Kearney confessed, "I'm very uneasy about those entries in the memo book."

"Not half so uneasy as I am," said Dawson Haig. "Something you have told me tonight has given me a clew. . . . perhaps too late! That squealing laughter. It was the Big Chief you heard—King Rat! Any doubt I ever had about his real identity, you have settled! I know now whom I have to deal with."

"I'm afraid I don't follow."

"You remember I went to Singapore a year back? I was following a clew which I hoped would lead to the break-up of a big drug ring—and I knew (note this point), that Jo Lung was one of the group. They dealt in stolen property (and other merchandise as well). Guess where that clew led?"

Kearney shook his head. "To the villa, or rather, palace at Johore Bahru, of the Marquis Yu'an Hee—ex-admiral of China!"

"But you don't mean that he—"

"I mean," Haig went on quickly, "that he declined to see me. A highly furnished secretary informed me that his excellency had left Singapore two days before. He was full of regrets. Of course, I had no alternative but to pretend to believe the liar. And as I left the place I heard some one laughing! Yes! I couldn't credit it at first any more than you could! Then I remembered something. . . ."

"The marquis had been shot in the throat just prior to the break-up of that old regime under which he held his commission as admiral of the fleet! His vocal chords were affected. The incredible laughter I heard was the laughter of Yu'an Hee!"

"You mean that—"

"I mean that Yu'an Hee See is Big Chief—King Rat! And he was at Jo Lung's tonight. It was his memo book that you picked up. You have heard how it was recovered!"

"But, what happened—in Singa-

Dawson Haig finished his drink and shrugged his shoulders. "On my way back to Johore Bahru," Haig replied. "I was ingeniously lured into a Chinese 'bath of feathers'—that's all!"

"Bath of feathers?"

"Exactly, Kearney! It's too late to go into details. Incidentally, though, I got out again. . . . and there was no possible connection between this dastardly attempt and my call on the marquis! I failed, old man—failed miserably. My name with the chief was mud. Yet, you see, I was on the right track. Yu'an Hee See was in Limehouse tonight. Yu'an Hee See directed the murder of poor Norwich! I know, now—because you heard him laughing. . . ."

"Good G—d! Haig! an idea. . . . he may be sailing in the Wallaroo!" Dawson Haig nodded—and grinned. "I hadn't overlooked that possibility. Detective Sergeant Durham sails in the Wallaroo as far as Marseilles."

"I'm glad of that," said Kearney. Haig stared at him hard, and:

"Most blandly," he said, "the Greek gentleman at Jo Lung's referred to their establishment in Stamboul, tonight. He was safe. There's about as much chance of getting justice in Stamboul as of finding a gold mine in Shoreditch. But the Stamboul branch, as well as that in Limehouse, doesn't deal exclusively in stolen goods, or even drugs. The marquis is interested in a third industry—possibly based upon Stamboul but probably not. Yu'an Hee See is the biggest slave trader in the East!"

Eileen, a light sleeper, was awakened by the revolutions of the screw of the Wallaroo. She jumped out of bed and peeped out across a deserted deck. That dreary panorama of the Lower Thames was slipping by, a drab and desolate picture.

She watched for a while, then closed the shutter and turned up the light. The panic of waking alone in that gray morning had left her. As she sat there smirking and reflecting upon the problem of whether she should write to Dawson Haig, as she had said she would do, or whether she should wait to see if there was a letter from him at Marseilles, she became aware of something. . . .

Some one—some one who had a regular, heavy tread—was pacing the deck on which her stateroom opened. As he passed and repassed, she experienced a rising curiosity respecting his identity.

No doubt a fellow passenger, unreasonably awakened, as she had been, and who, despairing of further sleep, had gone out for a walk.

Presently she heard his returning footsteps approaching from the after end. She turned off the light, pushed the shutter aside and peeped out.

She saw the promenade—a big man in a double-breasted blue overcoat; a man who wore a bowler hat, and who glanced aside with what seemed like definite curiosity as he passed her door. He was fresh complexioned and had blue eyes—very friendly looking blue eyes.

There was nothing in the least degree alarming about him, except that he seemed to be interested in her cabin. Eileen reclosed the shutter and turned in. And Detective Sergeant Durham, noting that her light had gone out again, passed along B deck to another cabin which interested him. Opening a heavy door he stepped into a cross alleyway, then turned left into another running forward and aft.

CHAPTER IV

Some passengers on the night cross-channel steamer from Boulogne noticed a gray motor cruiser which passed them in a dead calm sea about halfway across. Her extraordinary turn of speed excited their curiosity.

They must have been even more intrigued could they have witnessed the arrival of this mysterious craft off the French coast.

Stealing through the haze of a gray and cheerless dawn, the mystery boat edged in, point by point, in the direction of Boulogne.

Stern on to the flat beach it lay, showing no lights, its propellers turning lazily. Presently a boat came out from a shadowy inlet. Two rowers labored at the oars, and very shortly drew alongside.

Those five small square cases which had come from Limehouse were transferred from the motor cruiser to the boat. Orange Blossom then stepped gingerly into the little craft, supported by Yu'an Hee See, who followed her. Finally came Jo Lung. As the boat swung away:

"You will receive your orders tomorrow," said Yu'an Hee See rapidly in Chinese.

A yellow face surmounted by a woolen cap peered down from the deck of the cruiser, and:

"I hear, my lord," the man replied, and disappeared.

There came a whirl of powerful engines, a deep forceful churning, and the gray streak shot away southwest, swiftly to be swallowed up in morning mist. The two rowers bent to their oars.

Some distance up the little creek a landing stage projected, and beyond might be seen the roof of a wooden hut. At this landing stage the party disembarked.

Yu'an Hee See stood staring out through the open doorway of the hut until the men had carried in all five boxes. A board was quickly piled up. Its removal enabled a larger section of the floor, a concealed trap, to be lifted. Rough wooden steps led down into darkness. The Chinaman watched the boxes being stowed in their hidden cellar. When the work was completed and all traces of this hiding place concealed again:

"Come," he said to the woman, "we have no time to delay."

Perhaps half a mile away, guarded by a clump of funeral trees, a small farm might be seen. The woman was all-shod for the journey, and clung to her companion's arm, silent and fretful. Jo Lung walked behind.

They crossed a weed-grown courtyard. Jo Lung unlocked the door of a broken-down barn.

There, a vision of blue enamel and gleaming silver plate, appeared a large French touring car. Jo Lung disappeared into the gloomy shadows of the barn, while the others made themselves comfortable in the car. When Jo Lung returned, he wore a blue and white uniform with a smart, peaked cap.

"Paris," said Yu'an Hee See—"straight to headquarters."

"The fact remains," said Dawson Haig, "there isn't a scrap of evidence to connect the establishment of our friend Jo Lung with the murder! If we could have produced the notebook—it might have proved to be a hanging matter for somebody. But, legally, it's valueless as evidence."

Kearney nodded. They had just finished lunch in a Strand grillroom. He sipped his coffee thoughtfully. Two days had elapsed, and little or nothing had been done.

Dawson Haig lighted a cigarette. "That it contained valuable clues is proved by the steps taken to recover it. But these clues, or what you and I can remember of them, frankly convey very little. In the next place, I certainly had a glimpse—a horrifying glimpse—in your rooms, of the murderer of Norwich. But, as you have pointed out, my description might be that of anything from a ghost to a wild animal!"

Kearney laughed. "That's true enough," he admitted.

"You have seen the medical report on Norwich? The doctors agreed that he was bitten by long, curved teeth. So far, no one has been able to identify an animal possessing 'quite such teeth.'"

"In short, the establishment of Jo Lung with valuable property stolen from all over the world, with its so-called burglar alarms, and other novel features, must carry on as usual entirely undisturbed by Scotland Yard!"

He looked up, his keen blue eyes gleaming savagely across the little table.

"In spite of the fact that one of the most dangerous criminals in the world used the place as his London base, and that some hired-killer of his murdered one of the best men in my department only two nights ago! Not to add that a consignment of drugs, which may have been worth several thousand pounds, was lying about there under our very noses—but, you may take my word for it, is there no longer!"

"That horrible laughter I heard would certainly point to the fact that Yu'an Hee See in person was at Jo Lung's on Friday night."

"I'm almost certain," Haig snapped, "he was on the dock when the crates were removed from the Wallaroo! He was the fur-coated man who slipped through the gates just before I spoke to you! He drove straight to Jo Lung's!"

He sighed, knocking ash from his cigarette.

"The remote possibility that he may himself be joining the ship at Marseilles, I have dealt with, as you know. Durham is on board. But his first message was admittedly not encouraging. It merely consisted of the words 'Nothing to report.' I take this to mean that there is nothing suspicious about the occupants of the cabins mentioned in those mysterious notes."

"One of which is Eileen's!"

"I know," Haig groaned, "and I can't get that fact out of my mind. I have checked the curious entry relating to 'Suleman Bey's.' Paris notified us this morning that there is a certain restaurant of that name near the Moulin Galette. I'm going across this afternoon. I should like to locate Jo Lung. The inquiry is at a standstill here. . . ."

TRENDS FAVORABLE
IN STATE BANKINGRecent Figures Indicate Large Increases in Deposits and Invested Funds

Improvement in the condition of state banks in almost every respect during 1934 is shown by statistics recently assembled, Robert M. Hanes, President Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, Winston-Salem, North Carolina, points out in an article in "Banking" published by the American Bankers Association. The figures on which this statement is based were gathered by the Committee on State Bank Research of the association from reports furnished by state bank supervisors throughout the country.

"Ever since 1921 the number of state banks has been declining," Mr. Hanes says. "Between 1931 and 1934 the decline was rapid. Figures for December 31, 1934, showed that the downward trend has not yet ended, but the decline last year was the smallest in twelve years."

There are now, he says, about ten thousand state banks, which term includes all state chartered institutions with the exception of mutual savings banks. The article continues:

"Even more significant was the ending of the decline of deposits in state banks which had been going on since the collapse of the stock market boom in 1929. In recent years for which figures are available the drop has been particularly abrupt. Total deposits in state banks declined from $20,395,762,000 on December 31, 1931, to $15,424,823,000 on December 31, 1933. The record for 1934 shows a recovery to $17,508,766,000 at the year-end."

Significance of Increased Deposits
"It is particularly gratifying to note the expansion of deposits, since it was their decline which made necessary the liquidation of investments, the calling of loans, and all the other phenomena which go under the name of 'deflation' and have brought banks so much criticism in recent years. It is now plain that this was due to efforts of the banks to place themselves in the possession of enough liquid assets to meet the growing demands of depositors for the return of a part of the money which had been placed on deposit."

"That this is true is borne out by the movement of invested funds of state banks, which has paralleled that of deposits. These invested funds (loans and discounts plus investments) for state banks, dropped from $20,291,330,000, at the end of 1931, to $14,915,773,000 at the end of 1933. By December 31, 1934, however, they had recovered to $15,769,510,000. All of this gain is accounted for by the increase in investments during 1934, the expansion amounting to approximately $1,300,000,000."

"As for loans and discounts, they registered a slight drop again in 1934, but the rate of decline was much smaller than in previous years, which in itself is progress. Whereas the drop in loans and discounts amounted to approximately $3,300,000,000 in 1932, and to approximately $1,300,000,000 in 1933, it was less than $500,000,000 in 1934."

"In another respect the balance sheet figures for December 31, 1934, were especially impressive. Bills payable and discounts of the state banks, which at the end of 1932 had reached a depression high of $669,709,000, had dropped by the close of last year to the low figure of $82,101,000. One must search the records as far back as 1917 to find bills payable and discounts of state banks at a lower figure. Moreover, it is reasonable to expect a further reduction of such borrowings during the current year."

TO FOIL BANK CROOKS

NEW YORK.—The American Bankers Association Protective Committee has developed a plan of bank inspection to bring out exposure hazards or weak spots in respect to attacks by criminals based on its long-established, nationwide experience in investigating bank burglaries, holdups and sneak thefts.

The inspection covers eighty leading questions and seventeen recommendations which are instructive in the prevention of such crimes. These relate to such subjects as the use of alarms and other protective equipment, also the condition of windows, doors, skylights and other entrances which have facilitated the early morning entry of bandits who kidnap bank employees from their homes during the night, or break into the bank premises and bind and gag the employees.

BANKERS HELP

"Save the Land and You Save the Man" is the essence of a suggested agricultural program recommended by the Arkansas Bankers Agricultural Committee. "Beware of impoverished soil. It leads to impoverished homes," says a statement sent to the banks to be distributed to their farmer customers. "To help nature save the land, build up the soil, by:

- Stopping soil erosion.
  - Planting legumes.
  - Raising livestock.
  - Developing pastures.
- "Look ahead with confidence—know what you are doing, therefore:
- Draw up a farm inventory.
  - Keep a record, daily or weekly.
  - Budget expense, and keep within it."

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Eleven milk routes were started in Hopkins county by May 1, to supply milk to the West. Cheese Company plant at Madisonville. Farmers agreed at a series of community meetings to devote more land to pasture to take care of the new market.

More than $15,000 is expected to be added to the incomes of Breckinridge county farmers from the sale of 200 acres of tomatoes already contracted for by a commercial firm. Application has been made by 36 farmers to grow 75 acres more.

Early Henson, a Woodford county farmer, bought 1,000 baby chicks a cross between White Leghorns and White Minorcas. He plans to develop a laying flock of 700 pullets this year and double the number next year.

Merchants in Barbourville sold 45,000 pounds of lespedeza seed and 10 carloads of seed potatoes, of which 80 percent was certified stock. Last year only 15,000 pounds of lespedeza seed was used in the entire county.

Peaches, pears, cherries, grapes, early apples and early strawberries in Kenton and Campbell counties were severely injured by freezing weather last month, county agents report. Heavy rains indicate a better season for other crops than for the past three years.

A representative of the Producer's Dairy Marketing Association of Ireland, Ind., pointed out to 114 Meade County Farm Bureau members that refunds received from his company totaled more than the yearly dues of all Farm Bureau members in the county.

The lawn of Halls Memorial high school in Harlan county was landscaped following suggestions of the Kentucky College of Agriculture at Lexington. Lime and vegetable fertilizer was used, and oats seeded as a nurse crop.

Successful poultry raisers know the value of good feed. They start chicks on a good mash, add small amounts of grain when they are 4 to 5 weeks old, and increase the grain until they are getting equal parts of grain and mash when 10 to 12 weeks old.

Early cut hay has a higher feeding value than late cut hay, and the stock eat it better. Green color and 1 eafliness are desirable qualities. These are obtained by quick curing and proper handling in curing and storing.

Foods can be seasoned or prepared more quickly with cream than in most other ways. Vegetables served have a delicious flavor that cannot be obtained from any other seasoning. Sweet or sour cream may be used in making biscuits, muffins, cookies and cakes.

Dry blankets in the shade in a breezy place. Reverse them to give both sides a chance to dry rapidly. While they are on the line go over them with a soft brush to buff up the nap and remove the lint.

The self-feeder plan of raising pigs saves labor and grain and promotes more rapid gains than hand-feeding. Tests made by ton-litter raisers indicate that self-fed pigs will gain nearly 10 percent faster than hand-fed ones.

Lightening rods now are a recommended method of protecting buildings in the open country. They should be carefully installed, and frequently inspected to see that they are properly connected and grounded.

The berry crop in McCracken county may be short due to the drought, but the quality and price outlook are good, says the county agent.

What IS
a Sound Loan?

A sound loan for a commercial bank is a loan which the borrower believes, and the bank expects, will be paid within a reasonable time—a loan which if not fully repaid at the maturity of the note is substantially reduced by regular periodic installments.

Loans that are regularly reduced enable a bank to accommodate patrons whose needs may be more essential. A bank must have a turn-over of money in the same way that a merchant must have a turn-over of merchandise, with this difference—bank's turn-over affects the credit facilities of the entire community.

The ability and intention to repay a loan by a planned program, and within a reasonable time, is the essence of a good loan. The giving of collateral does not repay a loan. Collateral is merely a pledge to guarantee the borrower's ability and promise to repay the loan within a reasonable time.

The time to sell peanuts is when people are on the way to the circus---

AND RIGHT NOW THEY'RE ON THEIR WAY TO THE BIG BUSINESS TOPS

There is a whale of a lot of difference between the buying mood of people today as compared with a year ago.

They are out to spend some money, and they are having more money to spend.

It may have been good business sense for a merchant to have retrenched in his advertising activities when people were not spending any more money than was absolutely necessary.

But such a retrenchment policy at this time is false economy.

Truly, there is now no more profitable investment or expenditure a merchant or business man can make than to get back into an advertising program—not necessarily an expensive one, but some sort of advertising, at least.

Merchants and business have lost customers over the last few years—old customers who have been "badly hit" in a financial way; former customers who have moved away; past patrons who have switched to other stores and sources of supply.

And if Mr. Merchant permits this condition to continue, he will soon awaken to the disastrous fact that his business has been undermined by more alert and energetic competition. It is a hundred times more difficult and expensive to revive an UNDERMINED BUSINESS than to keep a going business going.

Here before you is the opportune time and the business opportunity to get that sales volume back to normal and to increase it.

And advertising in The Recorder is the most productive and economical method of advertising to Boone county people. Any local merchant who practices any other form of local advertising is spending two and three times to bring in the same SALES DOLLAR which The Boone County Recorder space could bring in for one-half or one-third less.

OVERCROWDED

STATE PRISONS WILL BE RELIEVED BY RELEASE OF 300 INMATES ON CON- DITIONAL PARDONS

Approximately 366 inmates of the two state prisons will be released on conditional pardons shortly when Governor Ruby Laffoon acts on the recommendation of the prison advisory commission which made a survey of the prison inmates and recommended for those deemed worthy of clemency.

Most of those who are to be released are youthful first offenders, committed for minor offenses. Humanitarian considerations necessitated the action in order to relieve the cruelly crowded condition of the two prisons.

In the state reformatory at Frankfort, constructed many years ago, built to confine 1,700 inmates, 2,970 are now quartered. At the state penitentiary at Eddyville the same condition exists with 1,276 confined in an institution whose capacity is 540.

There are daily arrivals of new prisoners sent by the circuit courts of the state for commitment. Steadily the prison population has mounted until congestion within the institutions created a grave problem. All available quarters are taxed to provide accommodations for inmates, and seriousness of the situation has been steadily increased from month to month.

Necessity for immediate action to relieve a situation which imperiled health of inmates and over-taxed facilities of the prisons, impelled Governor Laffoon to ask a prison advisory commission composed of outstanding Kentuckians, men familiar with prison problems, to examine the records of inmates and ascertain those that might be re-established themselves as law-abiding citizens.

These who are to be conditionally pardoned understand that they are released on probation, that in event they commit further lawless acts they will be returned to prison to complete their sentences. Action of the Governor under the circumstances seems justified by every dictate of humane consideration.

figures compiled by James E. Cantrell, secretary of the state tax commission.

License fees collected during the period amounted to $415,443.32, with wholesalers paying the bulk, $229,183.27. Distillers paid $31,708.75. During the next two months, Cantrell estimated, an additional $322,000 will be paid in taxes.

The license fees were paid under provisions of the alcoholic control act, of 1934, which has been declared invalid by Mercer Circuit Court and which now is pending in the court of appeals. None of the license fees, Cantrell said, was paid under protest and none will be refunded in the event the court of appeals holds the control act unconstitutional. The other taxes were collected under an old law.

AAA TOBACCO

CONTRACT MODIFIED. ALL 1935 GROWERS WILL TAKE NOTICE

Boone county farmers who have signed and will sign AAA tobacco contracts for 1935 will be interested in the following modification of the AAA tobacco contract for this year according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

The following modifications deal with the growing of basic commodities in excess of allotments and use of rented acres.

"With respect to 1935, provisions of tobacco contracts shall be modified as follows:

"I: (a) Provisions limiting the total acreage which may be planted to crops to be harvested shall be inoperative.

(b) Provisions limiting (1) the number of any kind of livestock designated in the Act as a basic commodity (or a product of which is so designated) which may be kept for sale (or for sale of a product thereof), and (2) the acreage of each crop designated in the Act as a basic commodity which may be planted for sale shall be inoperative.

EXCEPT THAT such limitations shall continue in force with respect to the following basic commodities: wheat, cotton, tobacco and peanuts.

"II: Provisions limiting the proportion of the 'rented acres' (or 'contracted acreage') which may be planted to food crops for home consumption or to feed crops for livestock (or livestock (or livestock products) for home consumption or all of the 'rented acres' (or 'contracted acreage') to be used for said purposes.

This Ruling, as you note, removes the limitation on the total acreages, the production of corn, hogs, dairy cattle, beef cattle and grain sorghums. The limitation on wheat is interpreted to apply only to wheat for sale, therefore, wheat sowed last fall may be harvested this summer for home consumption on the farm or for livestock feed on the farm. The sale of wheat will be limited to the 1932 or 1933 commercial production—which ever is the greater.

The rented acres under this ruling may be planted to crops for home consumption. The planting of commercial crops on rented acres, however, is prohibited.

The above modification does not include the growing of wheat to sell in excess acreage of 1932 or 1933, which ever is the greater. Tobacco signers, however, may use all the wheat they wish for feed, for livestock on their own farm or for home consumption from the 1935 crop.

Pike county poultrymen approximately 100,000 pound-tested chickens guaranteed against white diarrhea. More than 3,000 acres seeded to lespedeza in Pendleton county will be used for pasture.

Eighteen demonstrations in potato growing were started in Magoffin county under the direction of the county agent.

A saving of 30 per cent on tractor fuel may be made for Warren-co. farmers through work of the Farm Bureau.

County Agent Stuart Brabant, of Todd county estimates that farmers will use 8,000 tons of limestone if they can arrange to have it crushed.

Work in better feeding practices, culling and testing cows for production is being continued in Washington county.

Fifty-eight Garrard county farmers plan to have 6,300 tons of limestone ground for use in soil improvement, at 75 cents a ton.

Bath county dairymen are making plans for opening up a Carnation milk company sub-station at Owingsville.

Changing Constantinople to the Name of Istanbul

In 1930 the new republic of Turkey began to insist that the official Turkish name be used for the city founded in 328 A. D. by Constantine the Great, and to require that mail sent to residents of the city be addressed Istanbul instead of Constantinople.

Two years after Constantine founded the city he made it the seat of the Roman empire in the East and officially named it New Rome to indicate its political position. But it was popularly called Constantinople to perpetuate the fame of its founder. After the capture of the city in 1453 by the Turks it became the capital of the Ottoman empire.

Constantinople is really a collection of towns and villages lying on both sides of the Golden Horn and along the Bosphorus. There are four general sections, however, consisting of Eyup, Istanbul (the Greek section south of the Horn on the site of old Byzantium), Galata (the chief business center and seaport on the Horn) and Scutari.

Foreigners have always called the entire city Constantinople, while the Turks called it Istanbul, a name which outsiders applied to the typically Turkish section, which is bounded on the west by the Sea of Marmora, on the east by the Golden Horn, and on the south by the ancient city walls. The name Istanbul is the Turkish form of Istanbul. It is derived from the Greek and literally means "Into the city."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Oratorio and Opera Both

Were Started in Italy

An oratorio is a sacred story set to music which, like opera, requires soloists, chorus and full orchestra for its performance, but dispenses with the theatrical adjuncts of scenery, costumes and acting. The modern oratorio and opera both were originated in Italy, about 1600, says a writer in the Philadelphia Inquirer, and were originally indistinguishable from each other, except that one was sacred and the other secular in subject. However, before 1700, particularly in Germany, the oratorio began to be clearly differentiated from the opera, in the relinquishment of dramatic action and accessories, and came to belong essentially to the class of concert music, with more or less of the qualities of church music. The true oratorio style has been developed more remarkably in Germany and England rather than France or Italy.

The first and almost universal subject for oratorios was the Passion and the greatest music is that of Bach's "Passion According to St. Matthew," written for service on Good Friday, 1729. In England the works of Handel treated epics as subjects for oratorios.

Inhabitants of Pitcairn Island

Pitcairn Island is a solitary island in the Pacific ocean, between Australia and South America, in 25 degrees 3 minutes south latitude and 130 degrees 8 minutes west longitude. It is about 2 miles long and 1 mile broad. It was discovered by Carteret in 1767. In 1790 it was taken possession of by nine of the mutineers of H. M. S. Bounty with six Tahitian men and a dozen women, the Englishers being called Christians. Of nine British sailors, only one, Adams, was left in 1800, and from him the present inhabitants are descended. The island was annexed to Britain in 1839. Near 120 of the islanders were transferred to Norfolk Island in 1856, but a number of them afterward returned.

Shoes From Shark Skins

There are 500 kinds of sharks in the world, but the skin from only three species are used principally, to provide leather for making shoes. These are the Arctic, the tropical and the silk shark, the latter being caught off the Portuguese coast. Shoes made from the Arctic shark have a woolly appearance, and are useful on the golf course. Women's shoes are made from the silk shark and one of its most popular uses is for handbags. Sharks are caught in large fish-nets about 200 yards long, and six yards deep.

Bones May Verify Legend

Unearthing of 12 skeletons of unusually tall men at the spot of Roncesvalles, France, where legend says Roland and his fearless knights made their last stand against the Moors in 778, may substantiate the story. Historians declare the find proves that the traditional French hero really made his gallant fight. The discoveries were made during preparations for the erection of a monument to Roland on the summit of Ibañeta in the Pyrenees.

"Pillory" in a Church

Failure to attend church was punishable in England by imprisonment at one time, and at the church of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, Leicestershire, there is evidence that people who attended had to behave themselves. In the gallery is a finger "pillory." Here naughty boys and girls, as well as those who attempted to leave before the sermon, were detained until the end of the service.

Damage by Landslides

Landslides often cause considerable damage. A record-breaking one occurred in the Vale of Gouda, Switzerland, in 1806 when Mount Ruff suddenly came tumbling down and, within a few minutes, not only killed several hundred persons but buried five towns and spread huge masses of rock over 20 square miles.—Freling Foster, in Collier's Weekly.

Many of the aches and pains in the joints and limbs are thought to be due to the lack of vitamin supplied by tomatoes, cabbage, lettuce and spinach. Therefore, a every garden should produce an abundance of these vegetables.

Ray Carnahan, Bunt (x and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Sullivan and daughter were visiting A. J. Nichols and family Tuesday evening.

The Boone County Jersey Bull Association owns four outstanding production bulls, which were exchanged last year for the first time.

Orchard owners in Graves county who are expecting a larger yield than last year are applying sprays for curculid.

Plans are under way to have limestone in Caldwell county for about $1 a ton.

SELECTING FOOD NO SIMPLE TASK

Choose Intelligently to Get Vitamin Supply.

By EDITH M. BARPER

NATURE offers man a very essential for growth, development and maintenance throughout life. As man cannot live without air he is automatically supplied with the oxygen he needs. For the other essentials, however, he may exercise his prerogative of choice. His instinct of hunger makes him demand food enough to fill his stomach and thus obtain almost automatically some of the food essentials.

To make the most out of his life, however, he must choose his food with intelligence; otherwise, he may lack essential minerals and vitamins which, although minute in quantity, are most important. He must even go outside the natural food realm for an adequate amount of vitamin D, which is to be found only in butter, full cream cheese, whole milk and eggs. Even in these foods it may vary enormously, because its presence depends upon the amount of sunshine which the animals producing these materials have encountered.

In a natural state primitive man was supplied with vitamin D, because he spent most of his life in the open. Today man must add vitamin D in the form of cod liver oil or halibut liver oil, which although technically foods are usually taken for medicinal reasons.

Instead of using cod liver oil or halibut liver oil, he may now get the vitamin D he needs from a number of irradiated foods. The list of foods which have been irradiated each year has been increasing. There is now one bread, several cereals, some milk, some dehydrated vegetables and purified vegetables, an infant food, a chocolate malt drink and two yeasts, besides several cod liver, halibut oil and malt products. Cod liver oil and halibut oil although containing a large amount of both vitamins A and D, are irradiated in order to give a concentrate of vitamin D, which sometimes is needed, for the children.

Carrots With Butter.
3 cups diced cooked carrots
1/2 tablespoon butter
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Salt and pepper

Melt butter, add lemon juice and stir the carrots into this mixture. Season to taste and heat.

Coconut Cup Custard.

2 eggs
4 tablespoons sugar
2 cups milk
1 cup coconut
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Beat eggs very lightly. Beat in sugar. Add milk slowly. Add coconut and flavoring. Pour into cups which have been greased lightly with butter. Stand cups in a pan of water and bake in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) one hour.

Old Fashioned Rabbit.

1 pound American cheese
1 tablespoon butter
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons dry mustard
1 teaspoon paprika
1/2 bottle beer
Toast

Shred cheese with a fork. Melt butter, stir in seasoning; add cheese and stir over a low fire until melted. Stir in the beer gradually and cook, stirring over fire until the mixture is smooth. Pour at once over hot toast. A dash of cayenne pepper may be added, if desired.

Cheese Cake.

Pastry
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
1 pound cream cheese
4 eggs
1 cup thin cream
1 teaspoon vanilla

Line a deep pan with pastry. Stir the flour and sugar together, then mix well with cream cheese. Beat eggs slightly, add cream and vanilla and combine with other mixture. Pour in to the pastry shell, which has been baking in a hot oven, 450 degrees, until it begins to brown. Remove only long enough to pour in filling. Reduce oven temperature to 325 degrees and bake forty minutes.

MEETING

IS HELD TO RESCUE BIG BONE LICK FOR FUTURE PARK AT SITE FAVORED

Suggestions that the celebrated Big Bone Lick in Boone County, Kentucky, be preserved for posterity as a state or national park were made last Wednesday night at the Hotel Sinton by a group of residents of Cincinnati and Boone and Kenton counties.

he nucleus of an organization, to be called the Big Bone Foundation, was formed. John T. Lloyd, son of Professor John Uri Lloyd, archaeologist and author on scientific subjects, was named Chairman of a committee to promote the plan.

Other members of the committee are Edward S. Walker, Covington, Vice Chairman; Horace G. Williams, Cincinnati, Secretary and Harry B. Mackay, W. B. Southgate, A. C. Collins, Shelby Rouse, all of Covington; Arthur B. Rouse, former Congressman, Erlanger, and Dr. Willard Rouse Jilison, Frankfort, former State Geologist of Kentucky.

Dr. Jilison read a paper telling of the importance of immediate action to preserve the fossilized remains of prehistoric animals. He said there undoubtedly were tusks of mastodons buried in the muck at Big Bone Lick.

J. D. Moore, Boone county, told of the recovery of a 12-foot tusk 15 years ago by Jim Rice, blacksmith. Seven men were required to lift it. He said that there was no means of preserving it, so it crumbled to dust in a few days.

Dr. Jilison explained that Big Bone Lick was known to scientists throughout the world. Specimens at the British Museum were sent from the lick years ago. He urged that residents of Southern Ohio, Indiana, and Northern Kentucky preserve this great natural resource.

Professor Walter H. Bucher, geologist of the University of Cincinnati, seconded this suggestion. He agreed to serve on the organization committee.

CRUSHER TO BE EMPLOYED FOR LIME PROGRAM

The Boone County K. R. R. C. lime committee is expecting to employ a crusher for the K. R. R. C. lime program the first part of next week.

Boone county owners of crushers who are interested in being employed for this work should notify County Agent, H. R. Forkner at Burlington not later than Saturday of this week. The crusher must have a weigher and capable of putting out from four to seven tons of crushed stone per hour.

JIM WELCH'S SHOW NOW TOURING BOONE COUNTY

Jim Welch who is well and favorable known in this county now showing with a good company in the various points of Boone County. He will be in Petersburg this week and will open in Burlington next Monday, June 3. He says he has good business in spite of the unfavorable weather of the past two or three weeks.

TWO UNION

MEN INJURED BY PASSING AUTOMOBILE

Riding together on a horse, two Union, Ky., men suffered broken right legs when an automobile driven by Bluford Jackson, forty years old, 2803 Harris Ave., Norwood, Ohio, struck their legs. The accident occurred near Union on Route 42.

The two, Raymond Doan, 24, and Everett Judge, 37, were taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital, Covington, by Jackson. Doan suffered a compound fracture and shock. Judge also suffered shock.

Jackson told police he was following another automobile and that he did not see the two on the horse until the automobile ahead swerved. The horse, apparently unhurt, ran away, he said.

William Dobson, 40, 2361 Highland Avenue, Norwood, who was riding with Jackson, was cut on the face by flying glass.

The G. A. of the Burlington Baptist church met May 24 and elected new officers. President—Carolyn Cropper; Vice-President—Ruby Cotton; Secretary—Olive Louise Poston; Treasurer—Geraldine Yelton. The next meeting will be held on the second Friday of June.

Olive Louise Poston, Secty.

CCC CAMP BOONE COUNTY

A CCC camp will be established in Boone county according to an official notice received by Judge J. M. Lassing the past week. The camp will care for approximately 216 men.

The work of the camp will deal principally with soil erosion control.

The soil erosion control program of the camp will be of a demonstration nature and will be available to the farmers of Northern Kentucky.

DELEGATE SELECTED

Mr. Wilford Slekmán of Burlington, R. D. 1, was selected by the members to represent Boone county at the Utopia Club No. 2 at the Utopia club conference held during Junior Week at the University of Kentucky. James Edward Stephens was selected as alternate.

The members enjoyed a good meeting at Burlington last Thursday. The "Insect Control" discussion led by Wilton Stephens of Burlington group proved both interesting and instructive.

APRIL LOANS

OF NORTHERN KENTUCKY PRODUCTION CREDIT ASSOCIATION LARGE

Williamstown, Ky., May 28.—Loans closed in April by the Northern Ky. Production Credit Association equalled over 66% of the entire number closed during January, February and March, according to announcement of L. D. Richards, Secretary-Treasurer. His monthly report shows that 30 loans for $6,222 were closed in April, while during the three preceding months 45 loans were closed for a total of $12,135. "At the close of business on April 30," stated Secretary Richards, we had 75 loans for $18,957 outstanding which have originated since the beginning of the year. In addition, of course, a liberal percentage of our 1934 loans are still outstanding and are not yet due.

"The April credit requirements of our farmers reflects the seasonal needs for crop production credit as well as a considerable number of general purpose farm operation loans. Applications are passing through our office in liberal volume at this time, and are being handled promptly through the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Louisville, which is our source of discount. There is very little delay in closing of loans, and in urgent cases we are able to advance the money immediately upon approval of the application by drawing upon our funds, which is maintained for this purpose."

The farmers of this territory are turning more and more to their own cooperative credit organization for funds to finance crop production, livestock feeding and general farm expenses. The Northern Kentucky Production Credit Association serves the farmers of 8 counties of Northern Kentucky, including Boone county. Its function is to furnish to farmers for production purposes and to meet general farm operating expenses.

BASE BALL NEWS

Everyone enjoyed the game at Midway park Sunday which was won by the Burlington team with a score of 7 to 3. ## WILL GO TO SEATTLE

TO ATTEND CONVENTION

Among the 124 delegates who will attend the Golden Anniversary Convention of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, at Seattle, Washington, June 3 to 7, will be Hubert Conner, of Hebron, Ky., who has been selected as a delegate for this state.

The travelling expenses of the delegates are paid by the National Association. Probably 2000 additional Holstein breeders will take advantage of the reduced summer rates offered by the railroads. A special train will leave Chicago the evening of May 31 to transport the delegates from the West and Central West to Seattle. Plans and policies of the association, the largest purebred cattle organization in the world with more than 33,000 members will be suggested and passed upon for the coming year at the Convention.

PARDONS

GRANTED TO 276 BY GOVERNOR LAFFOON

Pardons, conditioned on the future behavior of the recipients, were granted by Governor Laffoon to 276 convicts at the State Reformatory on recommendation of the Special Prison Advisory Commission appointed by the Governor March 28, 1935.

The 259 and 17 women who received the pardons are serving sentences aggregating 1,713 years, 9 months and 3 days, in addition to one life sentence previously committed to 22 years. They are from 76 counties and were sentenced for crimes ranging from chicken stealing to murder.

Before signing the pardons, Governor Laffoon spoke to the men who are to be freed, and urged them to return to their communities and "do your full duty as citizens." "Live exemplary lives and make good citizens for the Commonwealth of Kentucky."

The Governor said he was glad of this opportunity to do something for the prisoners, but "hoped my confidence has not been misplaced."

Ben D. Rengo, Owensboro, Chairman of the Prison Commission, said: "We are not yet through reviewing the records of the men in this institution * * * and hope to find many other boys to send back home."

SURPRISE PARTY FOR J. P. BROTHERS OF LIMABURG

About 30 friends of J. P. Brothers, Limaburg merchant, from Erlanger, Covington, and Boone county gave him a surprise party at his home, Sunday afternoon about 2 o'clock. These were his friends from the American Legion and otherwise.

At this meeting he was awarded a commission as a colonel on the Governor's staff. This commission was presented by Judge Goodenough of the Covington Police Court. This part of the program was a complete surprise to Mr. Brothers.

After the commission was presented Mrs. Brothers served an excellent lunch to those present.

Those who witnessed the ceremony were: Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Riley, Representative and Mrs. C. L. Cropper, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Eastman, Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Russ, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Cotton, Mr. and Mrs. C. Roy Steinfert, Mr. and Mrs. A. Darby, Mr. and Mrs. William N. Steinfert, Mr. Harve Fullilove, Judge Goodenough, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hebbler, Mr. Ed Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hawkins, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bradford, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Morrow, Mrs. A. Waha, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Tanner, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Ogden, Mr. A. B. Renaker, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Mattox, Mr. Courtney Kelly, Mr. O. T. Edwards, Mr. Francis Souther, Miss Lucille Ryle, Mr. Jack Long, Mr. Andy Scheben, Mr. and Mrs. Ford Ware, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Doyle, Mr. Joe Tanner, Mrs. Harriett Utz and the host and hostess, Col. and Mrs. Brothers, and daughter Janet.

PROGRAM FOR CINCINNATI'S 1935 SPRING HOLIDAY OUTLINED

Horse races, auto races, night baseball and wrestling programs are featured in the program arranged for Cincinnati's 1935 Spring Holiday, May 30 to June 2, under the auspices of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce. Mayor Russell Wilson, of Cincinnati, has joined with the Chamber in extending a special invitation to the people of this community to visit some time during the four day period to take in at least one of the events on the program.

The high-lights of the four-day program are as follows: Thursday, May 30 (Decoration Day): Morning, spectacular Memorial Day parade; night, opening of Midget Auto Races at Coney Island.

Friday, May 31: Night Baseball at Crosley Field—Cincinnati Reds vs. Pittsburgh Pirates.

Saturday, June 1: Latonia Derby, with Omaha, winner of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness Stakes, as a probable contender; Masonic outing and reunion at Coney Island; diamond jubilee celebration at the Zoo; night, Championship Wrestling Program at Crosley Field, with world-famous wrestlers as contenders.

Sunday, June 2: Baseball at Crosley Field, Cincinnati Reds vs. Pittsburgh Pirates; National Wgt. Lifting Championship meeting; patriotic program—Massing of the Colors at Eden Park.

Miss Helen Ruth Gaines is the guest of Mrs. Garnett Tolin.

WAGES FIXED

FOR WORK PROGRAM. $21 TO $75 MONTHLY IS SET FOR KENTUCKY

By executive order President Roosevelt ranged labor's monthly wages under the four billion dollar work program from a low of $19 to a high of $94 and ordered a general work week of 40 hours on an 8-hour-day basis.

The country was divided into four regions for wage purposes with monthly earnings—which the President said should be "in the nature of a salary"—varying in each according to population density. Labor itself was divided into four types—unskilled, intermediate, skilled and professional and technical work.

Fixing of wages and work hours by the President was regarded as removing a major obstacle blocking first actual expenditures of the $1,091,000,000 in projects already stacked on Mr. Roosevelt's desk.

His executive order said that preference in the employment of workers shall be given persons on relief rolls and state:

"Except with the specific authorization of the work progress administration at least 90 per cent of all persons working on a project shall have been taken from the public relief rolls."

It further said no persons under 16 years should be employed nor more than one from a family group unless specially excepted.

Region three comprises Arkansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma and Virginia. The monthly earnings: unskilled, $21 to $35; intermediate, $30 to $52; skilled, $38 to $68; professional, $42 and $75.

GRANT 4-H CLUB MEETS

The Grant "True Blue" club held their fourth Community meeting at the school house, May 21. Eight members, one leader, Mrs. Franklin Clure, and Mr. H. R. Forkner, were present. Plans were made for the tour to be June 26, on which date we hope to visit each project member.

AN EXPLANATION

Due to the fact that the orchestra was unable to get over the river from Aurora Saturday, May 25th, dance at Petersburg had to be postponed.

Wm. Driver, the sponsor of these dances, has asked that we notify the patrons through this paper that there will not be any more dances postponed, as he has made arrangements for Mr. Ed. Witham of the Lawrenceburg Ferry to make two trips across the river each Saturday evening.

The Ferry will leave Lawrenceburg at 7:45 p. m., and 8:45 p. m., C. S. T. and will leave the Kentucky side on the return trips at 11:45 p. m. and 12:45 a. m., C. S. T.

Mr. Driver regrets that the many people who were at Petersburg for the dance were disappointed, and assures them that this will not happen again. See adv. on other pages of this issue.

NOTICE TO ALL RELIEF CLIENTS IN BOONE COUNTY

Distribution of Cabbage and Tomato Plants will be made on Monday June 3. All who are to receive these are requested to be at their usual Community Store at the usual time.

L. A. THOMPSON, County Community Distributor

FLORENCE BUSINESS MEN ATTEND NIGHT BASEBALL GAME

Friday night, May 24, Florence and vicinity was well represented at the first Major League Baseball game played at night when the following citizens were on hand to see the Cincinnati Reds defeat the Philadelphia Phillies 2 to 1 at Crosley Field: George B. Miller, Hubert Lundscheidt, C. T. Blankenbaker, Arch Rouse and C. O. Hennessy.

All these men Boosters for Boone county were much pleased with the novelty of the occasion as well as the final result of the game. Needless to say they were on hand in time to see the elaborate fireworks and the entertainment furnished by the various Drum and Bugle Corps, this being an historic occasion the President of the United States pressed the button which turned on the flood lights amid a big ovation from the crowd. All agreed that night baseball was a complete success from the spectators viewpoint, and the gentlemen from Boone county will probably be on hand many times in the future.

P. L. SIDEBOTTOM, A CANDIDATE For Representative

In this issue will be found the announcement of Paul L. Sidebottom for Representative of the Boone-Grant district at the coming Democratic primary, August 3. Mr. Sidebottom stands well in his home town and county as is evidenced by the following write-up in this week's issue of the Grant County News:

"Mr. Sidebottom is a native of Owen county but has resided in Grant so long that he almost considers himself a native son. He is a son of one of Owen county's best known citizens."

He has been engaged in the automobile sales business for many years, first at Corinth, then at Williamstown. He is the present Chevrolet dealer in Williamstown and operates one of the largest garages in Northern Kentucky.

He has made many friends in Grant and surrounding counties and is widely acquainted not only in Grant but in Boone.

He is a clever, agreeable citizen, a veteran of the world war.

5000 WOMEN

ARE AT WORK ON RELIEF PROJECTS OF IMPORTANT NATURE

Miss Elizabeth Fullerton, Director of Women's work for the Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration, announced that 5,000 women now are at work in the State on projects of a highly productive and constructive nature.

Comforter projects using cotton materials, Miss Fullerton said, had been completed after the manufacture and distribution of 7,373 such articles. She said, however, work would begin immediately upon the manufacture of 24,000 wool comforters for which materials have been received. Five mattress projects still are in operation while a total of 23,433 have been made and given to families on relief.

Women relief clients in Kentucky Miss Fullerton pointed out, have made 20,652 dresses, 6,000 shirts, 30,000 undergarments, 6,000 layettes, 79,000 sheets, 289,143 towels and 9,345 sleeping garments. Figures on the number of overalls made were not readily available today.

The above named articles are made in training work centers under expert supervision. Aside from teaching female relief clients proper use of the needle and sewing machine, a lasting benefit, all of the garments are judiciously distributed to the most needy relief clients of the state.

Miss Fullerton said today that many a child in the State had been kept in school during the winter months with available clothing from training work centers. Newborn babies, she said, have been furnished with layettes whereas they otherwise would have had little or no clothing. Miss Fullerton maintains the work of her women workers has shown a marked tendency to raise the standard of living in the homes of relief clients.

FLORENCE BAPTIST CHURCH ORGANIZATIONS HOLD MEETING

The W. M. U. and Ladies Aid spent a most delightful day with Mrs. Stella Lutes on May 16. She was indeed a most genial hostess and a large number enjoyed themselves with her interesting family at their lovely country home. The afternoon was fully taken by the program put on by the Rose Marlowe Circle. However, they gave part of the time to the young organizations of the church. A pantomime and a play by the G. A.'s and the Y. W. A.'s were most attractive and well rendered. Especially we make mention of the vocal solo by Gordon Simpson. The Rose Marlowe Circle meets with Gertrude Fossett on June 5 and the Ann Judson on the same date with Mrs. Emma Rouse. The next W. M. U. will be with Mrs. Sadie Tanner and mother on June 13. Florence and Verona Missionary Societies meet at Walton on June 6 in an all day meeting.

SOILS AGENT IS APPOINTED Mr. Wilmont Carter has been appointed Assistant County Agent of Boone and Gallatin counties. He will serve under County Agent H. R. Forkner and H. A. Berge in charge of the K. R. R. C. soil improvement program.

Approximately 7000 tons have been listed for crushing under the K. R. R. C. lime program in Boone county and a similar amount in Gallatin county. Actual crushing work is expected to get started in the next two or three weeks.

SERIOUS

SHOOTING AFFRAY NEAR TAYLORSPOUR FRIDAY MORNING

Jack Sprague, wife and two small children escaped serious injury if not death last Friday morning at their home one half mile below Taylorsport when their house was fired upon by Lewis Reitman. It appears that Reitman is a paroled patient from the State Asylum where he has been confined on three separate occasions. It is reported that Reitman has an obsession in regard to the property in which the Spragues live, although the Sprague family has nothing whatever to do with the controversy. At one time Reitman owned the house and has the idea that anyone living there is his enemy. This seems to be the problem that has unbalanced his mind.

At about 1 A. M. Friday morning Reitman began firing at the house with a shot gun. The house sets high upon a hill and the shots were fired from below which probably accounts for the fact that the Sprague family was uninjured. The shots ranged upward and most of them lodged in the ceiling of the house.

At about 4 A. M. Sprague called Sheriff Cotton. When the sheriff arrived Reitman had left. Sheriff Cotton stated that he found on the premises 31 empty shells and 12 loaded shells which had failed to fire. About 25 shots had been fired into the house which shattered most of the windows.

Reitman had been sent to the asylum on three different occasions and had been paroled the last time in the custody of his sister. The firing began about midnight and lasted until one o'clock. The firing was heard distinctly across the river.

Sheriff Cotton and Deputy Walton continued the search for Reitman although for a while there were no clues as to his whereabouts. However, they were successful in capturing him Tuesday morning about seven o'clock. He was taken at or near the place of the shooting and brought to Burlington where he was lodged in jail.

SMALL TOWN ENTITLED TO SAME FIRE INSURANCE RATE AS CITY

Frankfort, Ky., May 25.—Communities having agreements with neighboring towns for fire protection are entitled to fire insurance rates compatible with the protection they receive, McKay Reed, State Insurance Commissioner held today.

Acting on a protest filed by Uille J. Howard and other residents living outside the city limits of Fort Mitchell, Reed held the 90-cent rate charged them was discriminatory, as the community, through an agreement with the South Fort Mitchell Fire Department, had the same protection afforded residents of Fort Mitchell, who only pay a rate of 38 cents a $100.

Reed ordered the Kentucky Actuarial Bureau which contended that the boundary line of incorporated towns presented sufficient cause to classify property as "protected" and "unprotected," to make a survey of the Fort Mitchell situation with a view to reducing the rates substantially.

"Nowhere in our law do we find any provision that limits credits for protection to the boundary line of city," Reed said.

SEVEN TO ONE

FAVOR CONTINUATION OF A A WHEAT PROGRAM

Northern Kentucky farmers who signed AAA wheat contracts favor seven to one the continuation of the program according to John E. Crigler, Secretary of the Association.

The official count of ballots in the referendum submitted to growers throughout the nation the past week was counted on Monday morning of this week. The report of the Boone-Campbell-Kenton County Association shows 32 of the 36 members who signed contracts voted in the referendum. Twenty-eight growers voted for the continuation of the program and four against. Seven non-signers voted for the continuation and 2 against.

A summary of the Boone county growers showed that twelve favored the program and three opposed. The early unofficial national reports indicated the nation would vote six to one in favor of continuation. This is considered a strong vote in favor of the program. It reflects strong support by farmers for the AAA.

Of Carrollton, as a candidate for re-election to the office of Railroad Commissioner from the Second Kentucky District, subject to the Democratic primary, August 3, 1935.

We are authorized to announce

of Grant County, as a candidate for Representative of Boone and Grant Counties, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary, August 3, 1935.

DOLE vs. WORK

We have written the word WORK in capital letters because in that single word lies the main reason for the vast (work relief) appropriation—the largest ever made in the history of the world. We want to give men WORK. We want to end the inquisitorial dole business. Nothing is so demoralizing to the country, to its people, to its unemployed citizens as a dole. It destroys character, it makes men shiftless and lazy; it is rotten to the core.

PROBLEMS OF YOUTH

Another year draws to a close, with children emerging from the schools and wondering what they are going to take up as their life's work. A few know; the many do not. The choice of a vocation is always a big problem for parents and advisers. A minister with a good deal of experience and knowledge of human nature gives these suggestions:

First, try to shape the child's career in line with his major interest in life.

Second, estimate his natural abilities as impartially as possible, and do not encourage him in anything for which he is poorly qualified.

Third, do not be fooled by the glamor of the "learned professions." Many a young man who would have made an excellent and happy mechanic is doomed to mediocrity and defeat as a doctor, lawyer or minister.

There are opportunities in all occupations for those who are adapted to them, or who can use them as stepping stones. Some are crowded, other things being equal, choose one not so crowded. Remember that earning a living is only a part of life. Youth should be trained too, for the development of personal and family interests and duties, and as an intelligent member of society.

THRILL OF ADVENTURE

History lost much of the pristine charm when in the mind of the reader, which had once shared in imagination the thrill of great discovery and conquerors by the constant repetition of epochal events in these amazing days was dulled to all but the most momentous.

Great achievements in exploration, navigation, invention and science were once so rare that they were "news" for generations, even centuries. Today they are crowded off the front page and out of public consciousness by a rapid succession of equally eventful news.

Within the last 12 months men have traveled through the air at a speed of 400 miles an hour; have invaded those terrestrial heights known as the stratosphere; have circled the globe on wings of their own making, and through the radio party, have brought the ends of the world together as into one vast assembly of entertainers and listeners.

The importance of the discovery of America was not appreciated at the time, nor was the significance of the first application of steam and electric power understood. So also does this generation hold commonplace as events which may prove revolutionary in their effect.

THE BAN ON WAR PROFITS

Congress is talking about a ban on war profits, but such a bill will never find its way through the intricate mesh of Congressional tape and traps. It is a beautiful dream, but one the nation will not realize at this moment when Europe is volcanic and our own country is so trembling on the edge of a war hold its greatest sham conflict in history. There are too many opportunities for pickups during the next few years and it must not be forgotten that munitions manufactures have not forgotten how to conduct a lobby. That bill will die a natural death before the present session of Congress ends and the excitement that can be stirred up will cause the people to forget it.

Of course, the results of munitions investigation has caused a great deal of comment, but we hear very little about it at the present moment, and the dwindling talk of war profits will continue until it is no longer a whisper. That is the way most of these investigations art and end. There is a blast at the beginning, someone makes a great deal of noise, the country is wrought to a boiling point, and then the fire under the kettle is turned off. It must also, be remembered that the fire is turned off at the right moment to permit the public to forget and get excited over something else.

AN IDEAL GOVERNMENT
(Exponent, Chagrin Falls, O.)

If we were asked to depict an ideal social organization, we would say, offhand, that it would be one under which any able-bodied intelligent man or woman could always find work at wages sufficient to provide for the necessities of life and lay aside something for old age, and after forty years of work be able to retire on his or her savings.

We think that a Government which concentrated on those objectives and on nothing else would come pretty near to being an ideal Government. Its corollary functions might well include provision for the security of the thrifty individual's savings, and such regulation of terms and condition of employment as would at least not impair the worker's chance of living to enjoy the fruits of a life's work and would protect him on the one hand against unfair competition by the workers of any foreign nation in which a lower standard of living prevails and on the other hand against exploitation by unprincipled employers.

Such an ideal Government would protect every man in his right to keep what he has earned and as an essential part of that protection, would be administered as economically as possible, in order that the burden of taxation might rest lightly and as equitably as possible upon all its citizens.

This ideal Government would make it its first concern that every child had an opportunity to obtain the best education of which it was capable. If, in spite of that education, it persisted in making a fool of itself as it grew up, we do not believe that is any part of any Government's concern.

That is not to say Government should permit the swindler to roam unchecked; it should not tolerate impositions of any kind upon the ignorant and the unwary. But we do not conceive it part of Government's business to recompense the victims of their own foolishness and extravagance.

The ideal Government would neither pamper its criminals nor allow social conditions to exist as tend to make crimes against the body politic alluring to the young.

We do not expect ever to see such a Government, either in the United States nor anywhere else. We believe that what we have set down represents in large measure what our Government is striving for. We think that there are too many people who want Government to do a great deal more than the simple essentials which we have outlined, and that progress toward economic recovery is being hampered by too many lawyers and uplifters having a finger in the pie.

National Capital

By CARTER FIELD

Washington.—In Paris a new Ford sedan costs, delivered, just about $1,700. Or about $1,000 more than it does in most American cities. Or about two and one half times the American price.

Which is of the essence when it comes to the problem of removing international trade barriers, that problem is now being attacked, from two widely different angles and with much animosity between the advocates of the two plans, by Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Foreign Trade Adviser to the President, George N. Peek.

The amazing point about this price for Fords in Paris is that the French duty on automobiles has nothing to do with it! The Ford cars sold in Paris are not made in the United States, but in Strasbourg. Nor is the main element of this astonishing difference in cost due to high duties on the parts. It is almost exclusively due to the difference in cost of manufacture.

This difference in manufacturing costs results from the fact that the factory at Strasbourg, while as modern as Ford engineers can make it, does not have the quantity production element which makes most of the popular small cars so cheap in America. That one element, the writer is informed, accounts for about $900 of the $1,000 difference in price here and in Paris.

Wages are an inconsequential phase, or would be, if mass production could be utilized in Strasbourg. It is perfectly true that the labor cost of constructing a car in France is much higher than in America, but the workers are paid less than those in Dearborn. The difference is comparable to that of a man plowing with a tractor and one plowing with one horse. The man with the horse may be just as good a farmer, but he takes many times as long to plow an acre.

The same point applies to the difference between turning out twenty cars and turning out a thousand or two thousand a day.

Dealer's Profits

Even if there were no tariff—or far more important—no quota—in France against importation of American automobiles, of course, they could not be sold as cheaply in France as they are in the United States. The chief additional cost would be in dealers' profits. French dealers could not expect to sell as many, and therefore would have to make more on each car than dealers in American cities.

The element of freight would be very small. As evidenced by the fact that $100 is just about the top price for hauling a car from any American Atlantic port to any European port. It is the price charged by the deluxe Italian liners from New York to Naples. It is much less on slower boats to the North sea ports.

Actually, adding about $20 for freight would be liberal.

The point of the whole case is that if international trade barriers could be removed, the people of the various countries of the world could enjoy a much higher standard of living than is at present the case. Yet fear on every hand is that instead of tending to lower these barriers the whole trend in the world is for raising them.

As for example, the sharp limitation on imports of American automobiles, machinery, and other items, by Italy and Poland. Just last month!

German visitors to Washington in the last few weeks have talked gloomily about the prospects of each nation becoming self-contained.

"It means black bread for our people," one of them said, "but we can do it. What makes us despondent is that it seems so unnecessary."

Teeth Extracted

A back-stairs compromise has been reached on the public utility holding company bill, which has so modified its original drastic provisions that in all probability the White House will apply pressure in order to "put the teeth back in." Present prospects are that this effort, which is expected from President Roosevelt and the New Dealers, will fail. There is no discounting the flood of protests from utility stockholders which has poured in on individual senators and members of the house. It has turned the tide, not to the point where the national legislators would openly defy the White House, but to a status where they are not willing to jump through hoops at the executive command.

One of the important phases of the new compromise is that it will exempt from its provision all holding companies whose interests are confined to operating companies inside one state. This does not sound important, but it lets a lot of rather big fish through the net.

Another modification is even more important. It exempts from the provisions of the proposed law holding companies whose operations are chiefly in one state, but extend for short distances beyond its borders. This would affect such important holding companies as Consolidated Gas of New York, Public Service of New Jersey, and People's Gas of Chicago.

Still another compromise provision would exempt holding companies that are interested exclusively in operating companies outside the United States. Such as American and Foreign Power. So that first and last a considerable number of big holding companies, with a far more important politically—a considerable army of stockholders will be let out. Which of course pacifies their stockholders, thus reducing the amount of opposition that the final form of the bill might bring down on the devoted heads of senators and members of the house who vote its final passage.

"May" and "Shall"

In the under-cover negotiations which led to this compromise some of the gentlemen interested in saving as many utility holding companies as possible nearly lost their battle after they thought they had it won. The first draft of text that emerged stated these exemptions in language which used the word "may." That is, it gave the securities commission the right to exempt these companies if in its discretion it saw fit to do so. One of those most concerned hit the ceiling when he read that "may." He got very busy indeed, and the draft now reads "shall." Meaning that such companies "shall" be exempted instead of "may" be exempted.

Still another modification does leave discretion with the securities commission. This is to extend from five years to seven years the length of time in which companies still retained under the death sentence may be allowed in which to wind up their affairs and liquidate.

Which in a way is the most interesting of all the changes. For the argument used to give this additional discretion would not be appreciated at the White House at all. It was that enough leeway should be provided in the holding company act to permit a reversal of policy by the administration following the Roosevelt second term! Just in the event that things did not work out as expected.

And the fact that the argument got somewhere—that it has been accepted by some very important senators and members of the house—would seem to indicate that some perfectly good Democrats are no longer taking all the proposed brain trust legislation as having been divinely inspired.

More Taxes Certain

More taxes are certain, despite all the propaganda by the administration one way, and by the bonus advocates the other. The taxes would be needed even if there were no bonus legislation at all. But there is going to be bonus legislation. Arguments by bonus lobbyists that to override the veto means the soldiers will get nothing are just so much drivel. If the bonus veto is sustained in the senate, as is now generally expected, some bonus measure will be passed later, which President Roosevelt can and will sign.

This will probably be something not very far from the Harrison compromise, though the President has always hoped that the eventual cost to the treasury could be held to $1,200,000,000 which the Harrison plan exceeds by at least $100,000,000.

Every one agrees that the present so-called nuisance taxes, which expire in June, must be continued. The only one allowed to drop was that of 2 cents on each check, which expired last January.

Probability is that the most certain of all proposed new taxes to be adopted before adjournment of the present session of congress is an increase in the inheritance taxes.

These fit in with the New Deal philosophy. It must be remembered that the Roosevelt ideal contemplates a nation of little fellows—no outstanding giants. Every man with enough to buy an automobile. But none with enough to buy a yacht—unless it's a sailboat.

This is revealed in the intense desire to hold down profits—to hold down big business—to prevent the little fellow against the big. Which is true despite the frequent allegation that NRA was in the interest of the big fellows, and against the little man.

Fly in Ointment

Another phase of New Deal policy right down this same alley was the securities act—and the stock exchange regulation bill. The idea was not only to hold profits on ordinary business down to a low percentage, but to prevent speculative profits of any kind.

Analyzed critically, it is easy to see that this would tend to prevent anyone not now rich from becoming so. But there was one fly in the ointment. Strict supervision of new security issues and curtailment of speculation, all tended in the direction of preserving existing fortunes.

They could snipe at them with heavy taxation, particularly on incomes, and on the corporation from which the income was derived. But a fortune invested in government bonds, for example, would be impervious to both.

Hence the popularity with New Dealers of inheritance taxes. Cynics comment that most of the New Dealers are young, and not worried about death duties. But the undeniable fact is that the New Dealers do want to do something about some of the very large fortunes now in existence. They regard them as a menace—a constant threat not only to the success of the New Deal politically, but to the actual working of New Deal ideals.

The New Dealers are helped in this aspiration to chisel away at the big fortunes by death duties by the fact that politically there is less danger to the average senator and member of the house in voting heavier inheritance taxes than almost any other variety of levy.

And when some of the other taxes under consideration are examined, it will be found that most of them have very important possible political repercussions. Such as the tax on life insurance premiums, for instance, despite the fact that it would be paid by the life insurance companies. And the tax on cheap movie admissions!

FORTY YEARS AGO

From the File of The Boone County Recorder

(ISSUE OF MAY 29 1895)

Toney Bentler has been quite ill for several days.

Bellevue fishermen have been having some excellent sport with pole and line.

A good rain is badly needed in the Richmond neighborhood. It did not rain there last Sunday.

Wm. Stephens, of Francesville, and R. O. Beemon of Limaburg, called on the Recorder Monday.

If the weather clerk would turn on a little more heat, the growth of vegetation would be materially hastened.

The Cincinnati Law School issued diplomas to 115 barristers last night. Edson Riddell, of Burlington, was one of the graduation class.

Lost—A listed boar that will weigh about 200 pounds. Any information of its whereabouts will gladly be received by C. C. Hughes of Burlington.

The Ladies of the Bellevue Christian church will give a strawberry festival next Friday evening, May 31. The proceeds of the festival to be used for the benefit of the church.

W. M. Rogers, of Walton, was doing insurance work in the north part of the county last week. His daughter, Miss Lizzie, who has been visiting her sister for several days, returned home with him Saturday.

The large barn belonging to R. E. Moore, of Beaver, was destroyed by fire on the afternoon of the 19th inst. A large lot of harness, hay and corn was also consumed. Mr. Moore and his wife were attending church at South Fork. The building was insured for $400 in the Boone County Insurance Co. The origin of the fire is not known.

Verona

The recent cold weather did considerable damage to the corn crop, potatoes and all garden truck. Many persons are replanting their gardens.

North Bend

If you want to get over the river any time to catch the train call on W. M. Balsly.

There will be very few pears and no peaches in this neighborhood. There has been great excitement over what is supposed to be a wolf. It has killed a great many lambs and has been after chickens. A good many have seen the animal and have shot at it, but have not succeeded in killing it.

McVille

A three year old child of R. S. Holmes cut off one of her great toes while playing with a sharp ax. C. W. Rice lost about 15,000 sweet potatoes plants by frost.

Irish potatoes and wheat are looking well. Fruit will be scarce. We have a few apples, pears, plums and cherries, but they are badly stung and falling off.

Rabbit Hash

Chas. Duncan, of Cincinnati, formerly of this place, is visiting old friends and relatives here. Born, to Elijah Hodge and wife, a 12 pound boy, and to Ed. Lee and wife, a bouncing babe on the 22nd.

Union

They tell me that Uncle Nick

Talbott, of Covington, has snaved off his beard, and his most intimate friends failed to recognize him, and even Courtney did not know him from Adams off Ox.

Mrs. John Corbin, who was reported so much better, I regret to say is again very sick. Mrs. Ad. Huey continues very feeble.

Constance

At the last census taken by the school trustees there were 113 scholars in this district.

I. S. Gains buried his youngest child last Wednesday.

Alonzo Souther is keeping the toll gate at Bromley.

J. C. Clore was in town on his bicycle last week.

John Hunkle, who had blood poison from a wound received at the desiccating factory is out again.

B. F. Zimmer is one the sick list. Our gardeners have been getting early peas to market, and are getting good prices.

Limaburg

Died at her home near Limaburg May 22, Martha, wife of E. W. Rouse. She was an earnest and faithful christian, a loving wife, daughter, sister, a kind and helpful neighbor, and will be sadly missed, and sweet will be the memory of her lovely character and gentle voice in the hearts of many.

Bellevue

A glorious rain fell here Sunday. It was very much needed.

Hubert Brady will move into his new house next week.

All are standing on the corner waiting for J. M. Moody's beef wagon. He will come boys and don't you forget it.

O. M. Rogers returned home last week from law school in Cincinnati.

Mr. and Mrs. Selms and Mr. and Mrs. Cutcherson arrived at Miss Julia Dismores last Thursday at noon. Mr. Selms has improved somewhat since he left Baltimore.

R. S. Cowen passed through here last Sunday enroute to Rabbit Hash to visit his neighbor.

Gunpowder

The cut worms are still playing havoc in this neighborhood. H. L. Tanner caught 57 around one hill of potatoes.

THE GARDEN

Timely Topics
(BY JOHN S. GARDNER)
Kentucky College of Agriculture

TOMATOES—The tomato plants designed to give early fruit should be staked and pruned. Pruning consists merely in keeping removed the bases of the leaves and the main stem. The best time to do this is when they have just started. If they are let grow into branches of any length before they are removed, just that much energy of the plant will have been wasted. If the tomato variety used happens to be Pritchard or Scarlet, or neither, staking nor pruning should be done, for this is a "self-topping" sort that grows just the amount of vine to make it a symmetrical plant.

SALSIFY AND PARSNIPS—Both these should be thinned; parsnips to a stand of 2 inches; salsify to one inch. Salsify is prone to suffer from a blight that blackens the foliage and sometimes entirely destroys it; close, deep cultivation contributes to this condition. A spraying or two with Bordeaux Mixture is always well to give, and care should be taken not to work too close to the row or too deeply.

SUMMER GREENS—If it has not been done, it is still not too late to start both Swiss Chard and New England spinach. By this time, several rows that have been used for an earlier crop will have become available.

SUMMER RADISHES—As the season grows warm, the early varieties of radishes, particularly those of red color, begin to get hot; the white sorts, Icicle and Lady Finger should be used from now on.

Summer Lettuce—Those who wish to continue having lettuce far into the hot weather, should make a sowing of Cos lettuce now, the seedlings moved into some row that will become vacant in the next three weeks. The variety to use is Trianon.

BORDEAUX MIXTURE—Need for the use of Bordeaux continues; in fact, it becomes more imperative as the season goes on. Cantaloupes, watermelons and the other "vine crops" are subject to a leaf spot that ultimately destroys the foliage and kills the plants unless something is done. To forestall this trouble, all vine crops should be sprayed with 4-4-50 Bordeaux Mixture just as they begin to run, and again in two weeks and, again, two weeks later. Three such sprayings will usually add from two to three weeks to the season of any of the vine crops, but more particularly in the instance of the watermelons and the later varieties of cantaloupes, for these often die before any fruit at all has ripened.

Bordeaux is useful, too, in controlling, or in reducing, the damage fleabeetles inflict on potatoes and tomatoes; with the coming of hot weather, fleabeetles may become numerous enough well to consider. Bordeaux is also a control for leaf spot and rust on beans. Combined with the proper arsenical, the Mexican bean beetle can be controlled at the same time.

CANNING TOMATOES—In order to assure tomatoes for the late summer and for canning, seed may be sown now, and the plants set in any space that offers, in about a month. Marglobe and Greater Baltimore are both good varieties, the former recommended if there is any likelihood at all, of tomato wilt. For really showy tomatoes to can, Matchless should be chosen. Although the yield of this variety is lower than that of some of the others, its color is exceptionally good, and the fruits are just large enough to can whole.

PROFITS BETTER WHEN MEN USE GOOD METHODS

Early marketing of lambs, culling of old and inferior ewes, and a regular drenching of ewes for three years or longer, are profitable practices to follow, according to a study which the farm economics department of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture made of the 1934 records of 101 Kentucky sheep raisers.

Approximately 14 per cent of the lambs were sold in May at an average of $10.15 per hundred, 30 per cent in June for $8.65, 25 per cent in July for $7.48, 24 per cent in August for $7.14, and 6 per cent in September for $6.32.

Young vigorous ewes were maintained by breeding none until they were over a year old and by selling all ewes above 5 years that did not appear thrifty.

Regular drenching helped to keep the ewes healthy by controlling internal parasites.

Twenty of these farmers received $6.86 per ewe from pasture and labor, while the average of the 101 farmers received $4.43.

The study stresses the importance of selecting good ewes and their early breeding to high quality purebred rams.

The 101 flocks contained 6,933 ewes which raised 1,291 lambs.

The rainy spring may cause an unusual amount of crabgrass in lawns. Setting the mower to leave the stems 2 inches long will encourage a good growth of bluegrass, which will tend to crowd out crabgrass.

Mexican bean beetle spray is made of 1½ pounds of magnesium arsenate to 50 gallons of water or two tablespoonsful to a gallon. Spray as soon as beetles appear, with up-turned nozzle. A dust may be used made of 4 pounds of hydrated lime and a pound each of calcium arsenate and fine sulphur.

Farmers planning to build tobacco barns or remodel old ones should write to the College of Agriculture for a new circular called, "Tobacco Barn Ventilation." It gives complete plans for ridge ventilation systems.

Alfalfa cut before full bloom may be seriously injured, affecting the stand and so weakening its vigor as to permit weed growth. Largest yields are obtained when cut in full bloom. Late cutting is not injurious, even if new shoots are clipped.

Sour cherries, gooseberries, rhubarb and other fruits usually are canned in a thick syrup made of equal parts of sugar and water. Slowly heat and water and sugar, stirring until all the sugar is dissolved, bring to boiling point and fill the jars.

PROTECT YOUR LIFE AND THE LIVES OF OTHERS!

There are three questions you should ask yourself about the tires you buy:

- 1—"Will the non-skid tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"
- 2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"
- 3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

Answer No. 1—Harvey S. Firestone early realized the value of tire traction and safety and was the first to design an All Rubber Non-Skid Tire. Through the years Firestone has led the way in the design and development of tires with most effective non-skid treads.

Firestone does not depend solely on traction and non-skid tests made by its own engineers—it employs a leading University to make impartial tests for non-skid efficiency of its tires, and their most recent report shows that Firestone High Speed Tires stop the car 15% quicker than the best of all popular makes of tires.

Answer No. 2—Blowout protection must be built into a tire. Friction and heat within the tire is the greatest cause of blowouts. Firestone protects its tires from friction and heat by a patented process which soaks every cord and insulates every strand with pure liquid rubber. This is an additional process known as Gum-Dipping, by which every 100 pounds of cotton cords absorb eight pounds of rubber. This extra process costs more and is not used in any other make of tire.

Leading race drivers investigate the inbuilt qualities of the tires they use, because their very lives depend upon their tires, and they always select Firestone Tires for their daring speed runs. In fact, Firestone Tires have been on the winning cars in the gruelling Indianapolis 500-mile race for fifteen consecutive years, and they were on the 5,000-pound car that Ab Jenkins drove 3,000 miles in 23½ hours on the hot salt beds at Lake Bonneville, Utah, at an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, without tire trouble of any kind. These amazing performance records are proof of the greatest blowout protection ever known.

Answer No. 3—Thousands of car owners reporting mileage records of 40,000 to 75,000 miles, is proof of the long mileage and greater economy by equipping with Firestone High Speed Tires. Let these unequalled performance records be your buying guide.

Go to the Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store or Firestone Tire Dealer and let him equip your car with Firestone Tires, the safest and most economical tires built.

SALES TAX JUDGMENT

Holds That Money Can Be Used Only for Roads

The court of appeals recently upheld a decision of Scott circuit court which held that the fiscal court of Scott county could not use the county's share of the sales tax collections to retire floating indebtedness so long as roads and bridge bond indebtedness existed. The circuit court's decision, handed down last December, was in the case of John Davidson against the fiscal court of Scott county.

Davidson, treasurer of Scott-co., sued the fiscal court to determine whether the court could validly use part of its floating indebtedness for general expenditures.

Judge H. Church Ford, who presided over Scott circuit court at the time, held that the sales tax law specified that the counties' part of the taxes must be used solely to pay off road and bridge indebtedness or to build new roads and bridges.

Miss Mary E. Tupman spent from Wednesday until Sunday with Mrs. Ben C. Stephens of Burlington. Miss Tupman is to represent Boone county in the style Revue to be held at Lexington from June 3 to 8. Miss Tupman is very good in sewing and has won several premiums in her 4-H Sewing from year to year. She represented Boone-co. at Lexington last year in a canning demonstration. Although she and her friends Miss Mae Campbell and Miss L. B. Respass lost, she hopes to do better this year. So let's all wish this young lady luck, and also our Home Practice and Farm Practice Demonstration teams.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Carpenter of Burlington entertained as house guests over the week-end Mrs. Otto Gelsier formerly Glennie Snyder of Petersburg, who now resides in Lorain, Ohio, accompanying her are her two daughters Miss Margaret Dodd, of Lorain, Ohio, and Mrs. Seldon T. Scott of Columbus, Ohio. Mrs. Carl E. Osborne, of Columbus, Ohio, a friend also made the trip with them.

They are now returning home from an extended tour thru the states of Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, and Kentucky.

LAMBS LAMBS LAMBS

In addition to our Cincinnati packers we have BUYERS, "not order buyers" but direct representatives or employees of Swift & Co., Armour & Co., New England Dressed Meat Co., and others on our Lamb market. You no doubt realize that the better the demand and the more buyers you have, the better the market. We have always advocated that the Commission man stay on the selling side, selling for the "HIGH DOLLAR" and filling no orders. This has finally come to pass and we earnestly solicit your business, assuring you that we are in a position to take the best of care of you in every way.

DEATHS

DR. B. K. MENEFEE

Funeral service for Dr. B. K. Menefee was conducted from his late home at 1:30 fast time. Then to Walton-Christian church at 2 p. m., slow time, conducted by Bro. Runyan, who did justice to the occasion in the presence of about 400 of his relatives and friends, the Order of O. E. S. paid a tribute of respect by assembling in a body and presenting their Emblem made of flowers.

The Masonic Order was there in a body and marched to their reserved seats in the church. After a service his body was conveyed to Gardnersville for burial, and the Masonic order buried him with the Masonic rights and honors. The address was delivered by the Honorable John L. Vest acting as Master, who delivered the ceremony in an impressive and brotherly like manner. Mr. Vest was certainly at his best, and he received many nice compliments for his wonderful delivery.

Pallbearers were John L. Vest, B. C. Bedinger, Dr. Hafer, Dr. Senor, Chas. Christopher, Chas. Holmbeck.

Chambers & Grubbs were in charge.

MRS. LILLIE GARRISON

Mrs. Lillie Garrison, aged seventy four years was found dead in bed Thursday morning at her home near Union, Ky. Magistrate Hubert White of Boone county pronounced death due to heart disease. The remains were removed to the Taliaferro Funeral Home in Erlanger for preparation.

Mrs. Garrison is survived by her husband, T. E. Garrison, four sons, George, Russell, Clifford and Alvin Garrison one daughter, Mrs. H. C. Young, of Covington, Ky., and one grandson, David Young, besides a host of other relatives and friends.

Services were held at the Big Bone Baptist church, of which she was a member, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, by the Rev. Roy Johnson, pastor, after which she was laid to rest in the nearby cemetery.

The pallbearers were Harry Rouse, Kenneth and John Aylor, Cecil Presser, Sanford Bristow and Meredith Sheets.
Funeral Director Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

WILLIAM GAINES

Wm. Gaines passed away Wednesday morning at 1:35 a. m., May 22, following an illness of 7 months. He had been in failing health for some time. He leaves one sister, Miss Anna Gaines, who kept house and cared for him for many years, and she deserves much praise for same. He also leaves one niece, Mrs. Souther, to mourn his going. Funeral service was conducted from the Hebron Lutheran church on Friday at 2 p. m., by Rev. Stanley Stahl, of Norwalk, Ohio, of the Universalist faith, in the presence of a number of his friends and neighbors, after which his remains were laid to rest in the family lot along side of his loved ones.

Chambers & Grubbs conducted the funeral.

MRS. SARAH LETCHER

Mrs. Sarah Letcher passed away in her home at Nicholson, Kenton county, Friday evening. The cause of her death was Chronic Thrombosis. She leaves her husband, Jas. Letcher, 4 sons, 5 daughters, three brothers, and one sister to mourn her going. Funeral service was conducted from Hickory Grove Baptist church, of which she was a member, by her pastor Rev. Joel Litchford, in the presence of a concourse of neighbors and friends, after which her remains were conveyed to Independence cemetery for burial.

Chambers & Grubbs were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

OWEN BLANKENBEKEE

Owen Blankenbeker, age 68 years, passed away Monday night at his home in Union, Ky., after two months illness. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Pearl Blankenbeker, one sister, Mrs. Myrtle Adams and a host of other relatives and friends. He was Vice-President of the Union Deposit Bank.

Funeral services were conducted at the late residence Thursday morning at 10 o'clock by the Rev. J. H. Hammock, pastor of the Union Baptist church, after which the remains were taken to Bellevue for interment.

The pallbearers were James Pettit, Harry Rouse, Harvey Hicks, Wm. Doan, Harry Dicason and Pat Norman.

Funeral Director Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

What IS
a Sound Loan?

A sound loan for a commercial bank is a loan which the borrower believes, and the bank expects, will be paid within a reasonable time—a loan which if not fully repaid at the maturity of the note is substantially reduced by regular periodic installments.

Loans that are regularly reduced enable a bank to accommodate patrons whose needs may be more essential. A bank must have a turn-over of money in the same way that a merchant must have a turn-over of merchandise, with this difference—bank's turn-over affects the credit facilities of the entire community.

The ability and intention to repay a loan by a planned program, and within a reasonable time, is the essence of a good loan. The giving of collateral does not repay a loan. Collateral is merely a pledge to guarantee the borrower's ability and promise to repay the loan within a reasonable time.

HOPEFUL

LUTHERAN CHURCH BEGAN 130 YEARS AGO

The Cincinnati Post in its issue of May 30 had the following to say concerning the history of the Boone County Lutheran churches:

Cincinnati was a village of "two brick and two frame houses with a number of log cabins," Tennessee was the "state of a rankin" and her currency was animal "ins; Covington was a farm and an orchard; Kentucky had only been a state 13 years.

That, briefly, is an indication of what faced a hardy band of German pioneers when they left their Virginia homes to settle in Boone county not many years after the first settlement of the state at Harrodsburg and Boonesborough.

But what those sturdy settlers did was well done. Today there are two Lutheran churches in Boone county which are monuments of their determination.

"Boone County Charge"

Hopeful Ebenezer Lutheran church, located not far from Florence, Ky., is nearly 130 years old. Hebron Lutheran church at Hebron, Ky., is much younger, having been organized by a group of Hopeful members in 1854. The two churches are known to Lutherans as the "Boone County Charge." Almost throughout their existence pastors serving them have supplied both congregations.

Rev. Howard M. Hauter is the present pastor.

A third Boone County Lutheran church, Ebenezer, was organized in 1855 and continued services as a separate church in the "charge" until 1933, when its congregation voted to merge with Hopeful.

Ebenezer church was located on Gunpowder Creek about one mile off Route No. 42. The road to the church had become almost impassable for an auto, so it was decided to abandon the old frame building. Part of the distance to the church had to be traversed along the creek bed, though within the last two years a road has been built.

Oldest in Synod

Hopeful church bears the distinction of being the oldest, active Lutheran church within the bounds of the United Lutheran Church of Kentucky-Tennessee Synod.

Those who signed as charter members include: George Rouse, John Rouse, Fred Zimmerman, John Beemon, Daniel Beemon, Ephraim Tanner, John Rouse, Jacob Rouse, Michael Rouse and Simeon Tanner. Many members of the churches today are descendants of the charter members.

In 1807 a cabin church was built. In October, 1813, Rev. William Carpenter moved his family from Virginia and became the congregation's first regular pastor.

The year 1854 saw the organization of Hebron church by 16 members of Hopeful. The difficulty of travel made the organization of the second church expedient. Hebron church was dedicated Dec. 3, 1854. The church was built of brick and still is in use today.

During the past decade a new church has been erected on Hopeful's property. It is the 4th church building for the congregation.

An outstanding achievement of Rev. Hauter, the present pastor, has been the organization of a capella choir composed of forty members from both churches. The choir has gained a name for itself throughout Boone and surrounding counties.

Rev. Hauter has been minister of the churches since Aug. 20, 1933. The churches as a charge are governed now as they have been governed during much of their common existence.

NEW HIGHWAY

PROBABLE FROM CONSTANCE TO IDELWILD

Deeds for the right of way of the new highway from Constance through Taylorsport to Idelwild were received from the State Highway Commission this week for execution. As soon as these deeds are executed contracts for grade and drain on the first five miles of this road will be let.

This highway is one of the most badly needed roads in Boone County. When and if it is completed it will open up a large and fertile territory. Such a road will be of unlimited service to a large section of this county and its value to the people of this part cannot scarcely be estimated. Undoubtedly those living on this proposed highway can be depended on to give their fullest cooperation to the project.

DEARBORN COUNTY FAIR TO BE HELD JULY 24 TO 27 INCLUSIVE

Dearborn County Fair, which is operated by The David McAllister Post American Legion, Lawrenceburg, Indiana, will be held this year July 24 to 27 inclusive. Each year has seen great improvements in attendance, attractions and displays, and early indications point to one of the biggest and best fairs ever sponsored by the Legion Boys. Profit alone has not been their sole purpose. Best evidence of this fact is their assuming the full cost of the 4-H Department. Running races will be featured Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons. The outstanding features of the racing program will be the "Seagram Derby" to be run on Thursday afternoon, and the "Old Quaker Derby" to be run on Saturday afternoon. These are just a few of the entertainment features.

Watch this paper for future announcements of the many good things that are in store for Dearborn County Fair patrons this year. Mark those dates on your calendar. Plan to make it part of your summer entertainment.

SIX MONTHS FLOCK

PROFIT IS $1,039
A profit of $1,039 in six months over cost of feed and other expenses, not including labor and interest on investment, is reported by Grant Mattox, a Boone county poultry farmer.

His 571 hens laid 11,982 eggs in April and averaged 94 eggs per hen for the six months period November to May.

At the beginning of the laying season the flock numbered 953 hens. Rigorous culling reduced it to 571 by April.

Eggs from the flock include market eggs, hatching eggs, baby chicks, broilers, fryers and fat fowls.

Mr. Mattox was graduated from the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture in 1929, and is one of the outstanding young poultry farmers in the state.

AGED MAN

BADLY INJURED WHEN HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

Arch Acra, 73 years of age, Sanders Drive, Kenton County, was seriously injured last Friday morning when struck by an automobile on the Dixie Highway near the Boone-Kenton County line. It is reported that Mr. Acra was standing at the rear end of a wagon by the side of the road when a passing automobile ran into and pinned him between the machine and the wagon.

He was removed immediately to St. Elizabeth Hospital by Undertaker Philip Tallaferro. Hospital authorities found Mr. Acra to be suffering from two broken legs, a broken collar bone, and cuts on the head. His legs were both broken below the knee and in each case both bones in each leg were broken. At first it was thought that he would not live on account of his advanced age although he has never been unconscious since being hit. At the last report he is doing as well as could be expected and his many friends wish him a safe recovery.

M. L. HUTCHERSON, WILLIAMSTOWN, KY., ANNOUNCES FOR REPRESENTATIVE

M. L. Hutcherson, Williamstown, Ky., announces his candidacy for Representative to the state Legislature from the joint Boone-Grant District. Mr. Hutcherson's announcement appears in another column of this issue.

In its last issue the Grant County News, Williamstown, Ky., submitted brief sketches of all candidates for this office to date and had the following to say about Mr. Hutcherson:

"Mr. Hutcherson is a minister in the Christian church and is also a contractor and builder of houses. He came here from the Keefer precinct a number of years ago and has built numerous houses in Williamstown and in the county. He has also pastored many churches.

He is a member of the School Board. He is a clever, agreeable citizen, is not a fanatic in any sense of the word. He made the race for County Judge two years ago but was defeated. He is probably as well known as any man in the county. He has an excellent family, his wife being a daughter of that staunch citizen, of Keefer precinct. He has always supported the Democratic ticket.

He says he has no axe to grind in making the race and if elected will work for the best interests of the county and district."

FLOOD CONTROL

BILL ALLOWS KENTUCKY $5,878,000, IF ADOPTED

Kentucky is allotted $5,378,000 for flood control projects in the Flood Control Bill now pending in Congress. If adopted, the bill will not only provide safeguards against flood damage and loss of life, but will be spent in Kentucky's trade to a large number of people in the state.

There are four flood projects provided for Kentucky in the bill, which provides that the work shall be done under the supervision of the United States Army Engineers. Allotments for the entire Ohio River Basin total $54,474,075 and a substantial portion of this amount will be spent in Kentucky's trade territory.

The flood control projects for Kentucky, which are included in the bill, and their estimated costs, are:

Falmouth Reservoir on Licking River; for flood control and other incidental benefits; cost $1,709,000.

Cave Run Reservoir on Licking River; for flood control and other incidental benefits; cost $1,337,000. Pineville, on Cumberland river; levees to protect people and city property; cost $290,000.

Middlesboro on Cumberland River; levees to protect people and city property; cost $530,000.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM INJURY

Herbert Snyder and nephew, Edgar Snyder escaped serious injury Saturday morning when a truck in which they were riding broke through a bridge on the Woolper pike. The truck contained about 100 bushels of corn. When the bridge broke the truck tipped. As a result Mr. Snyder fell about ten feet but luckily was not hurt seriously. Edgar jumped and probably saved himself from injury by doing so. It was not learned whether the truck was damaged or not.

ACCUSED OF STORE BREAKING

Marshal Paul J. Renaker of Florence brought Red Shears of that place to Burlington early Sunday morning and lodged him in the county jail. It is alleged that Shears was caught, riding the Osborne Restaurant which is located in the town of Florence. It is said when caught Shears had a number of stolen articles on his person. He is at present in the Burlington jail where he is awaiting an examining trial.

GEORGE BURTON YATES GRADUATES WITH HIGHEST HONORS

Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Yates and daughter Mary, left Wednesday morning for Georgetown, Ky., to attend the graduation of their son, George Burton Yates Jr. He graduated from Georgetown College with the highest scholastic standing in a class of forty graduates. To accomplish this distinction is quite an honor for any young man. In addition, George won during the past year a $10.00 prize for high honors in Chemistry. The commencement exercises were held at nine o'clock, Wednesday morning, June 5.

K. E. R. A. ALLOTS $1,354,022 FOR JUNE PROGRAM

The Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration Wednesday completed its budget allocations for June, allotting a total of $1,354,022 to the general programme. Work relief received an allotment of more than four times the total of direct relief, the closest administration believed it could approach at the present the Federal relief principle of as much work relief and as little direct relief as possible.

The work relief budget was set at $990,467; direct relief $238,555, and non-relief, including such items as tools, equipment and the like, and garden programme funds, $125,000.

The allocations were based on a schedule of 77,266 work relief families at a State average of $12.82 per month; 23,031 direct relief families at a State average of $9.21 and 6,042 direct relief non-members of families at a State average of $6.12. The schedule means a case load of 106,339 cases of approximately five persons to a case, or some 531,695 persons.

MODERN WOODMEN GIVE FREE MOTION PICTURE SHOW

Modern Woodmen of America will give a free motion picture show at the School Auditorium in Walton, Ky., Friday night, June 7, at 8 p. m. The public is invited. No charge will be made. This show consists of all sound and talking pictures.

SALES TAX

$1,000,000 SHY OF KENTUCKY'S ANTICIPATION

Frankfort Ky., June 3.—Revenue produced by the sales tax during the first year will be approximately $1,000,000 short of the anticipated amount, Nat B. Sewell, State Inspector and Examiner, estimated today in a report to Gov. Laffoon on the gross receipts tax.

A total of $785,357.72 was collected from July, 1934, thru April, 1935 Sewell said. Of this amount $2,437,545.51 has been distributed among the counties, with Jefferson county receiving the largest amount, $125,021.38, and Robertson county the smallest, $10,013.92.

Sewell said when the sales tax was passed by the General Assembly at a special session in 1934 it was estimated the tax would yield a total of $4,500,000, of which $3,500,000 would be distributed among the counties and $7,000,000 would go into the general fund.

However, he said, revenue collected during the ten months of its existence "would indicate that the total income from the gross receipts tax for the year would be around $9,500,000, or $1,000,000 short of the anticipated total."

More revenue from the tax was collected in December than in any of the other ten months, with October contributing the second largest amount. The smallest receipts were in July, 1934 the first month of the tax. April, 1935, showed only a few thousand dollars more receipts than July.

NEW COVINGTON STORE

Fox's Cotton Shop was recently opened at 526 Madison Avenue, opposite the Electric Shop, Covington. As its name implies, the store will carry a full line of cotton dresses. To introduce this new enterprise to the people of Boone county, the shop is advertising special low prices in this week's issue of The Recorder.

CHILD HURT IN CRASH

Winnie Labby, 13 years old, Union, Ky., received a fractured right arm when an automobile driven by her sister, Anna Labby, 15, Union, hit a parked car at Erlanger Saturday night. Winnie was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Covington, for treatment. Her sister was uninjured.

CCC CAMPER IS KILLED AT WALTON. FELL FROM FREIGHT

The body of Tom Needon, 22 years old, Cincinnati member of the Civilian Conservation Corps Camp at Corbin, Ky., was found on the L. & N. Railroad tracks below the overpass of the Southern Railroad, near Walton, Ky., Tuesday. He is believed to have been killed when he fell from a freight train. The body was decapitated.

One letter found on the body, addressed to Needon by his father, Harry Needon 1111 York Street, Cincinnati, said that a brother had been hit by a truck and asked the youth to come home immediately. Another letter was addressed to Barian Stevens, 2109 Turner Street, Cincinnati.

It was said that the youth left the Civilian Conservation Corps camp early yesterday. He was reported seen riding on a tank car of a freight train going through Walton.

A silk cushion cover, embroidered with a poem to his mother and father, also was found on the body.

TRUCK CROPS MARKETING

If a grower selling on the 12th Street or Pearl Street markets sells any produce direct to a consumer even though it may be in wholesale lots, he will be required to charge sales tax on the transaction. A license to handle sales tax stamps costs $1.00 and can be secured at the Court House in Cincinnati. The minimum amount of stamps that can be purchased at one time is ten one cent stamps or ten cents worth.

JUNIOR WEEK

Creed Harris and Thomas Hensley, Jr., members of the Burlington "Blue Ribbon" 4-H Club, Virginia Reimer, Catherine Jane Casper, members and Mrs. Reimer, leader of the Hebron "Norben Champions" 4-H Club, Mary Elvina Tupman and Evelyn Hagnhouse, members of the Florence "X-L-ALL" 4-H Club and H. R. Forkner, County Agent, left Monday for Lexington to attend Junior Week held at the University of Kentucky from June 3 to the 8.

Mr. Wilfred Siekman of Hebron, Utopia Club Delegate, is also attending.

Henry Raines, of the Bellevue neighborhood, spent a few hours in Burlington last Saturday on business.

JAMES C. ROGERS NAMED U. S. COMMISSIONER

James C. Rogers, member of the law firm of Rogers & Rogers, Covington, was named to succeed Edward Pflueger as United States commissioner for the Covington area. Pflueger has served in the office since 1928. The appointment was announced by Judge J. Church Ford of the United States Court for the Eastern District of Kentucky, in letters received both by Rogers and Pflueger on Monday morning. The change is to take place on July 1, which is the end of the fiscal year of the United States.

Rogers is active in Democratic circles and is the president of the Kenton County Bar Association. He was admitted to the bar in 1928 and has served as police judge of Erlanger for the past six years. He will resign this position before accepting his office as commissioner.

Rogers is a past exalted ruler of the Covington Aerie of Elks. He is the son of O. M. Rogers, former State Senator, and lives with his father in Erlanger.

Attorney Rogers is well and favorably known in Boone County where he has a large number of friends and relatives. The Recorder is glad to hear of his selection for this important office and offers him its congratulations.

SHERIFF W. B. COTTON ENTERTAINS BONDSMEN LAST FRIDAY

The bondsmen of Sheriff W. B. Cotton in connection with county funds were in town Friday to renew the bond for the present year. While here they were entertained at dinner by the Sheriff at the Weaver Hotel. Those present at the dinner were E. E. Fry, W. B. Johnson, R. E. Ryle, B. W. Franks, G. W. Baker, V. P. Kerns, L. D. Rennecker, Judge J. M. Lassin and the host.

LOCAL TALENT

PLAY WAS A FINE SUCCESS AND WELL ATTENDED

It shows a fine spirit when adults in a community will take the time from their work to practice night after night in order to present a play for the benefit of some worthy civic movement. Such a spirit was shown when a large number of local actors presented the play, "A Fair Exchange" at the local high school auditorium, last Thursday and Friday nights. The purpose of the play was to raise funds to pay for work recently done on the school grounds. A net sum of about $50 was realized, which will be devoted to the above mentioned purpose.

The play was well chosen and the cast even more so. Each player took his or her part in a most creditable manner. Space forbids individual mention of the actors, but it was the opinion of those present that the play was a huge success, and very greatly enjoyed by all who attended. In fact, it was one of the best plays that has been given locally. Of course, the director, Mrs. Garnett Tolin and the fine cast are both responsible for its success, and the public is quite appreciative of their efforts. Local boys furnished the music which was also much enjoyed. The P. T. A. wishes to thank the public and all who took part for their fine cooperation.

BASE BALL NEWS

The Verona ball team will play at Midway park Sunday June 9. This will be a good game as the Verona boys always play hard to win. The game between Constance and Midway was postponed on account of rain, but will be played later in the season. Don't forget the game Sunday at Midway park 2:30 (fast time).

Midway Ball Club

LUTHERAN PIONEERS

Greetings of the Kentucky-Tennessee Synod of the United Lutheran Church in America will be extended to Mr. and Mrs. John W. Hogan, of near Florence, Ky., through a motion taken on the floor of the synod during a convention held in Louisville this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Hogan, both 90, are among the four oldest Lutherans in the two-state synod.

Greetings of the convention also were sent to the Hopeful Lutheran Church, near Florence, Ky., which is the oldest active Lutheran church in Kentucky and Tennessee. Rev. Howard M. Hauter is pastor.

Farmers from all sections of the county claim that meadows never were better than they are this year—both alfalfa, timothy and clover—and wheat exceedingly good. This is encouraging.

GOOD WOMAN

PASSES IN THE DEATH OF MRS. NETTIE HUGHES. MANY FRIENDS MOURN HER LOSS

This community was saddened beyond measure when it learned of the death of Mrs. C. C. Hughes or "Miss Nettie" as she was affectionately called. She passed away May 31, 1935, at Christ Hospital, Cincinnati.

Nettie Gardner Hughes, daughter of Charles and Eliza Riddell was born in Delhi, Ohio, December 15, 1862, where she lived until the death of her mother, which occurred when she was 14 years of age. After this her home was with her uncle, the late F. Riddell, at Burlington, until her marriage to C. C. Hughes in 1890. For 10 years previous to her marriage, she was a teacher in Boone county. Many years ago she joined the Methodist church, where she was a faithful worker as long as her health permitted.

Mr. Hughes died at their home in Burlington, December 11, 1933, and Mrs. Hughes lived, only about a year and a half longer. She is survived by her half sister, Mrs. Mabel Pemberton, of Tacoma, Wash., Mrs. Pemberton's two daughters, Rheta and Mary Lee, her first cousins, Mrs. A. B. Renaker, Mrs. Josie Riley, and Judge N. E. Riddell; other cousins and many, many friends.

It was a custom of Mrs. Hughes to pay a visit to the home of her cousin, Mrs. A. B. Renaker every evening and then call on other neighbors and friends about town before retiring for the night. Several years ago she took quite an interest in the Burlington Literary and Improvement Club and coached several home talent plays in which a number of local citizens were players. It was through the efforts of this Club that the citizens of Burlington were induced to build the good sidewalks which the town now has. She was a kind neighbor, always thoughtful of others, and in favor of anything that was calculated to improve the town.

The funeral was held June 2, at the home of Mrs. A. B. Renaker. The services were conducted by Rev. Paul Gillespie and Rev. G. E. Graden while the funeral arrangements were in charge of Chambers & Grubbs. The interment was in the Old Cemetery with the following acting as pall-bearers: J. B. Arvin, George Porter, W. P. Beemon, G. S. Kelly, Newton Sullivan and L. W. Gully.

DEGREES ARE RECEIVED BY 336 AT UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY

Lexington, Ky., May 31.—An audience of 2,200 persons, including members of the Board of Trustees, graduating students, faculty members and friends of the University of Kentucky saw degrees conferred upon 336 graduates of the institution by Dr. Frank L. McVey, President, at the sixty-eighth annual commencement exercises held here today.

The 307 graduates receiving bachelor's degrees, the 29 receiving master's and the rest of the audience heard George Fort Milton, editor of the Chattanooga, Tenn., Times, speak on "The World You Enter." There were no honorary degrees awarded.

Among the graduates from this immediate section were: Ruby Roberts Randall, Burlington, Ky.; Bachelor of Arts in Education, Geo. Judson Shearer, Erlanger, Ky.; Bachelor of Science in Commerce, and Paul J. Carter, Jr., Master of Arts, Erlanger, Ky.

Claude Greenup of Commissary spent Wednesday in Burlington.

584 TOBACCO

MARKETING CARDS HAVE BEEN APPROVED FOR IMMEDIATE PAYMENT

Notice was received from Washington this week that 548 of Boone County's 723 AAA tobacco Marketing cards have been approved for payment according to John Crigler, Secretary of Boone County Tobacco Production Control Association.

The checks are expected to arrive some time within the next few days and each contract signer will be notified at that time. This payment is the second adjustment and the last payment on the 1934 tobacco contract. The 548 contract signers will receive $28,915.19 which is an average of $52.76 per contract. The remaining 175 AAA marketing cards which were sent to Washington at a later date are expected to be approved within the next few weeks.

BIG BONE

Big Bone Foundation has been formed for the purpose of having Big Bone Lick, thirty miles away in Boone County, Kentucky, made into a Federal or State park. There is merit in this. How comes it that the present generation has forgotten the lick so thoroughly? For hundreds of thousands of years it has been a great summer resort—recently for folks of fashion (the old hotel is still standing, or was a few years ago); before that, for salt-makers, for Indians, for deer, for bison, for the more ancient type of buffalo, and for the now extinct mastodon. At the dawn of the nineteenth century, the village was better known in Europe than Cincinnati, or any town west of the Alleghenies. De Quincey wrote of the lick, and Thomas Jefferson was actively interested, and every English traveler who came hither paid it a visit, and collections of the colossal bones found in its marshes were sent to great museums at home and abroad.

How did all these mastodon remains get there? The Indian chiefs who talked to Jefferson gave them a supernatural origin. There are Fundamentalists who call them relics of the Deluge. Others say washed in from various places. Our own notion is that sick creatures of the elephant family came to Big Bone to drink the healing waters, just as ailing humans have done ever since, and that they mired down and never got out.

WHERE OUR THOUGHTS TURN

In the spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love in a cottage—or words to that effect—and others who have passed that stage also think of a cottage as typifying a home.

It's the great goal of every man, regardless of his past condition of servitude, to be listed on the tax duplicate as a home owner. It brings peace of mind that can be acquired in no other way—the satisfaction of being looked upon as a owner, a substantial citizen of the community.

The robins are building their nests. Hundreds of others birds have migrated north to prepare for the rearing of a family. They take pride in their tree-top dwellings, just as human family displays the nesting instinct in a desire for a place that can be called home.

Men who own homes make it a purpose in life to have one in which they can take pride. They obtain it by thrift and industry. The more home owners we have, just that many more good citizens can we claim. It's not too late to begin planning for a home this spring. Everything is in your favor—don't delay.

HOW'S BUSINESS

The commonest question when two men meet is: "How's business?" The answer may be anything from "Rotten!" to "Swell!" It is our observation that about half of those of whom the question is asked answer to the effect that "things are moving along."

Much depends upon what sort of business the man is talking about. A great deal more depends upon what part of the country he does business in, apparently.

We have just seen a survey of business conditions in the whole U. S. based upon one of the numerous reliable indicators of business activity. These April figures show, on the whole, an improvement in business compared with a year ago. In twenty-three states—New York, South Carolina, Florida, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Arkansas, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, North and South Dakota, New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Washington, California and Arizona—business is definitely better than at the same time last year, by this index. In nine states—New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Delaware, Virginia, Kentucky, North Carolina, Georgia, Missouri and Nebraska, it is just about the same as a year ago. In the other sixteen states—Maine, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Illinois, Louisiana, Utah, Nevada and Oregon business is not as active as at this time in 1934.

Summed up, here's the answer. In twenty-three states, business is better. In nine states about the same. In sixteen states not as active.

Editorial of the Week

THE RIGHT TO EAT
(Hazard Plaindealer)

The human race has come a long way since primitive times when it was the custom to kill off the old and disabled of both sexes, to drown superfluous babies like so many kittens, and in general to compel everybody to shift for himself regardless of his needs. It was nobody's business whether a man starved to death or not, in the bad old days.

The modern world has been coming thru the past thousand years, to a more humane view of the responsibilities of society to its unfortunate. The parable of the Good Samaritan, and the other teachings of Jesus Christ, have been a tremendous influence, even upon a world which falls short of the Christian ideal in other matters. There is far broader recognition of the duty of everybody to give a helping hand to the sufferers from disease or accident, to those who for any reason other than their own shiftlessness find themselves lacking in the necessities of life, food and shelter.

We sometimes wonder, however, whether there is (not a growing tendency to extend this Christianity too far. We think it is time to give consideration to the words of Saint Paul, in his Second Epistle to the Thessalonians: "This we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat."

We hear from all sides reports of men and women "on relief" who refuse to take jobs that are offered to them, preferring to live at the expense of the public rather than to make an effort to help themselves. We hear of others who quit good jobs to "go on relief." We do not know how widespread this situation is, but from all accounts it is pretty extensive.

Nobody should be allowed to starve in free America, but nobody who is offered work and refuses to take it should be treated as if he had a right to hold up his head among honest, industrious workers. Such individuals have thrown away whatever rights they had, and ought to be regarded as what they are, objects of public charity, and allowed only the barest necessities of existence.

Saint Paul saw clearly the problem, which to many well-meaning persons today, is blurred by a fog of sentimentalism.

SEEN and HEARD

around the
National Capital

By CARTER FIELD

Washington.—The question of new taxes, often hinted, though never given much official notice, is right on top of the heap again as a result of the bonus situation.

Every one on the inside in Washington, providing his vision was not distorted by what he wanted, instead of what cold reason would demonstrate, has known for some time that some form of bonus legislation would pass and that its passage, unless the whole Roosevelt formula was to be set aside, would necessitate additional taxes.

In the President's mind, the bonus is on all fours with the cotton processing tax.

"Where would the money come from?" his question to New England and southern demands for repeal of the cotton tax, applies equally to the drain on the treasury that a bonus compromise would make.

The only change in the situation is that the probability now is the compromise will result in taking several hundred million dollars more out of the treasury than had been figured up to a few weeks ago. For example, it has been known for some time that, despite the President's views about the bonus, he would be glad to compromise for something like $1,200,000,000.

But the prospect today is that it will take at least $1,500,000,000 to turn the trick.

Incidentally, the President put a powerful lever in the hands of the bonus advocates in insisting on a larger amount when he discussed that idea of $750 invested now in a government bond amounting to $1,000 by 1945. If he had used the legal bank rate of interest, 6 per cent, in calculating the "present value" of the bonus certificates, he could have said $500. Actually a little less.

Low Interest Rates

It is the first time that the low interest rates the government has been moving heaven and earth to bring about have worked against the treasury instead of for it. Over a stretch of ten years a difference of 1 per cent in interest makes a great deal of difference. Especially if the interest is compounded, as it is in the illustration the President used. The sixth grade arithmetics used to tell us that money at 5 per cent doubles itself in 12 years, compounded.

It is not definitely known just what the administration will recommend in the way of new taxes. Congress leans heavily to heavy inheritance taxes. This fits in with the Roosevelt policy of whitening away at inherited fortunes. It is in tune with heavy income taxes, reduced interest on investments, smaller profits for business, etc.

In fact, it is almost a necessary part of New Deal philosophy. For granted that the Roosevelt program for small profits, etc., would work, the whole tendency would be to freeze existing conditions, preventing any new fortunes from being created, but, by the safety thrown around existing enterprises, tending also to preserve existing fortunes. Assuming they were big enough to stand losses in certain directions—ill-fated earnings, for example.

So it appears likely that heavier inheritance taxes will be one of the surest factors in the new tax program.

Under consideration also, though with no formal blessing as yet from the White House, is the proposed tax on life insurance premiums. This would be 1 per cent, but would be paid by the companies direct. Policy holders of course would really pay it, for their dividends and policy reductions would naturally be less. There is plenty of political dynamite in this one.

Even more protests would be caused by another tax under consideration by the treasury experts. This would reduce the present exemption of 40 cent on movie admissions to 10 cents!

Real "Drive" Possible

If three thousand farmers just happen to decide to pay a visit to Washington, enjoy the sights, tell congress to pass the Agricultural Adjustment administration amendments, and listen to a speech by the President, with no organization to stir them up, no one to pay their expenses—the whole thing just out of a blue sky, so to speak—what may happen when there is really a "drive"?

Washington may see the answer.

For sooner or later there is going to be a serious move to reduce, or maybe eliminate, these benefit payments. Already there is a strong conviction—and those who hold it are getting reinforcements all the time—that the whole system of benefits is wrong. Wrong in that in the long run it is not a good thing for the farmers themselves.

Then there is another large group who want to curtail or eliminate the benefits for an entirely different reason. This group does not think the treasury can stand the strain indefinitely. Or, to put it another way, that the taxpayers (for the benefits are paid out of processing taxes) cannot stand the strain.

Put the two groups together and you have a pretty fair nucleus. It would not take much augmenting, say next year, to have a majority in congress for curtailment if not elimination.

Then there would be a real march on Washington by the embattled farmers.

Those who have considered the whole problem say that it is very unlikely prior to election. They say the President would never dare to attempt to cut off the farmers' payments until the re-election is safely achieved.

That, naturally, is just opinion. It is the ordinary mental process of a politician—one who knows that Franklin D. Roosevelt is also a politician, and who cannot conceive his doing anything so unpollitic as kicking a lot of perfectly good voters in the face just on the eve of their going to the polls.

Doubtful Logic

They may be right and they may be wrong. But it was the same sort of logic that led many allegedly astute political minds to assume that the President would not veto the bonus bill. Including Huey Long. Including Father Coughlin. Including many others. So that maybe this logic cannot be taken at its full face value.

It might be said that the two things are very different. That vetoing a bonus bill never yet has hurt a President. It certainly did not hurt Coolidge. There is grave doubt that it hurt Hoover, although difficult to prove. Most veterans who happen also to be politicians will tell you privately that Hoover was hurt a great deal more by his handling of the bonus marchers than by his veto of the bonus bill.

But the present situation presents the sort of thing that has seldom been tested. It is not a case of refusing to try a scheme about which there is violent difference of opinion, such as the equalization fee idea of the McNary-Haugen bill. It is a case of cutting off money payments, which were already being received by a large class. And that might be different!

Different Story

Lots of water has flowed downstream since the good old days when both house and senate rushed through the administration's security and stock exchange regulation bill. That measure, drafted by two of Felix Frankfurter's boys, Cohen and Landis, was put through in the early days—when President Roosevelt's wishes did not have to be expressed by the king himself to become law. The word of any of his ministers, or his lieutenants, was enough. And everybody knew that Frankfurter's boys were close to the throne.

But what a different story now! Which does not mean the bonus—that always was outside the ordinary orbit of administration program material.

Nor the World Court. Nor the St. Lawrence seaway if and when it comes up.

No, the difference shows up on just the ordinary run of the mine, so to speak, legislation. And the answer is two fold.

First, the legislators on Capitol Hill, have discovered that the king's ministers may be very powerful for a time, but their time is apt to be short. Douglas is gone—lives in outer darkness. Not forgotten—far from it—but just out of the picture. Hugh Johnson is out, still praising the "Chief," but kicking the shins of the king's ministers vigorously. Though of course loyalty always had lain to the king, not the king's ministers. The most loyal subject could always deplore the folly of the king's advisers. That has been true since the dawn of history. It is not a development of the Roosevelt administration.

Now the most powerful minister in Washington is not very frightening to the bad boys on Capitol Hill if they think he is apt to be out of the picture say six months hence. That's the way politics is. There is no use trying to please anybody who won't be around to return the favor later on. Especially if pleasing this person in temporary authority means irritating folks back home who just may remember it on election day. The most interesting figure loses impressiveness if the pedestal is noticed to be wobbly. And the national legislators have come to the conclusion that there is not a single firm foundation under a single one of Roosevelt's present advisers.

May Still Be Around

This is probably a very jaundiced view—on their part. It may be that lots of them will be around, and powerful, a year hence. But the fact that so many have slipped prevents any one of them from speaking with the old note of authority, so far as Capitol Hill is concerned.

Congress abolished its lame ducks. After a senator or member of the house is defeated he no longer can either vote or debate. But there is a certain lame duck suspicion attached to all the brain trusters.

Then there is another reason. In the early days of the Roosevelt administration the jobs gone in drafting legislation were very workmanlike indeed. As, for example, the aforementioned Cohen and Landis securities and stock exchange regulation bill. Whether one approved the ideas behind the measure or not, there was no discounting the skill with which the precise intent of the framers was spread on the statute books.

But that day has passed. For example, take the social security measure—old age pensions and unemployment insurance—sent to Capitol Hill by Secretary Perkins. If there was anything right about it in its first form, it was a surprise. It was supposed to come up with the full White House blessing. But it was soon discovered that the figures did not add up. The calculations were weird. The astronomical figures were juggled until no two persons could agree within three or four billion dollars as of a day certain in the future.

Now this was never formally admitted. But the word got round. And there has been a shocking loss of confidence in the divine origin of administration measures ever since.

THE GARDEN

LATE POTATOES

(By John S. Gardner, College of Agriculture)

The late potato crop is not regarded as of much importance in Kentucky, at least not in a commercial way, but all over the state are farmers and gardeners who grow the potatoes their families consume during the winter. There are two distinct kinds of winter potatoes grown, one from good seed whose nature is such that it can be kept in proper condition until planting time in mid-June; the other from seed that has been kept on cold storage.

"Potato land" is a term used to describe soil that is deep and is deeply prepared, full of humus so that it can retain moisture well, and high in natural fertility. Growers of spring crops of potatoes are usually not much concerned with the moisture factor, for in the early season rains are usually frequent enough for even mediocre soil to bridge over. Growers of late potatoes, on the other hand, must prepare themselves for a dry season, hence they must so choose their soil and so manage it that an adequate supply of moisture is held. The best way to begin preparing for late potatoes is to break the land early, before the spring rains are over, turning under a coat of stable manure or a sod of other green manure. The furrow slices should then be cut fine with a disk and the land dragged down. When weeds start, disking and dragging should be done again, and perhaps again, two or three times, depending on the season and on how rapidly the weeds grow. By the time the planting season is at hand, two or three crops of weeds will have been killed, and their competition with the potatoes eliminated, to say nothing of the saving in cultivating labor.

Supposing that plans were not made as far back as the preceding paragraph indicates would have been desirable, the gardener may remedy his oversight by plowing the land, then disking in as deeply as he can, a generous amount of well-rotted manure. The depth of plowing should be greater for summer-planted potatoes than for the early crop, because that is part of assuring a generous moisture reservoir. Ten inches is not too deep to break potato land; in fact, it is a matter of demonstration data that with every inch of breaking depth more potatoes result.

Potato land should be fertile of itself, but its natural fertility and that that comes from whatever manure has been used, must be supplemented with commercial fertilizer so as to insure fertility balanced to the potatoes' needs. The state over, the best fertilizer analysis for summer planted potatoes is 4-10-4, or, better still, if it can be gotten, 4-10-8. Some of the soil nitrogen and some of the nitrogen contained in the manure will have been made available by the warming-up of the soil. The extra potash, the third figure in the formula, is particularly needed in overflow bottoms, this element is likely lacking.

The best way to use fertilizer is in bands on both sides of the seed pieces and at their level. The newer potato planters are fitted with fertilizer sprouts adjusted to do this. Potato growers who must do their planting by hand cannot place fertilizer in this manner, however, but must be content with doing the next best thing, which is to apply it in the bottom of the furrow, under the seed. It may be sown by hand or through a fertilizer drill, at the rate of one pound to 25 feet of row. In all cases, the fertilizer must be mixed through the soil so that no "raw" fertilizer touches the seed.

(Next week this discussion will be completed.)

Horses and mules require extra attention during the hard work of spring. Be sure that collars fit, and that sores do not develop on shoulders or other places. Shoulders may be hardened with cold salty water. Good feed and other care now pays throughout the season.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Lawrence Hall, of Knott county, who wants a permanent pasture for the grazing of calves and light cattle, seeded 1,000 pounds of lespedeza, 300 pounds of red top on mountain land. He will not pasture the field this year. Boyd county dairymen bought 500 bags of feed cooperatively thru the Farm Bureau this month, at a saving of $100 from the retail prices they paid previously to April 1, reports the county agent.

Commercial orchards have good prospects for large peach and apple crops in Warren county, and pruning and spraying is being conducted extensively. One orchard that had 4,500 bushels of peaches last year will apparently produce 3,800 bushels.

The report of the county agent of Allen county says: "Farms that were a drag on the market can be bought only at much higher prices now. Farmers are busy spraying fruit trees, starting poultry projects and buying livestock. This county was formerly a beef raising center, and opening markets are encouraging livestock raisers."

At a meeting in LaGrange to launch a lime and marl soil, improvement project in cooperation with the Kentucky Rehabilitation Corporation, 40 Oldham county farmers urged that operations begin as soon as weather permits.

Community dipping vats were built in Boyle county on the Parksville road near Perryville.

Terracing 20 acres of a farm belonging to W. H. Moberley of Montgomery county cost about $15.

Lesson for June 9

THE HOLY SPIRIT
(Pentecost Lesson)

LESSON TEXT—John 16:7-11; Romans 8:10-17, 26, 27.

GOLDEN TEXT—For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.—Romans 8:14.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Keeps His Promise.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Coming of the Holy Spirit.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How the Holy Spirit Helps Us.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Work of the Holy Spirit.

1. The Holy Spirit Promised (Joel 2:28, 29).

The prophet foretold that the messianic times there would be a mighty effusion of the Holy Spirit.

1. He was to be poured out.

2. He was to be bestowed upon all flesh, irrespective of age, sex, or class.

3. This outpouring was to issue in extraordinary activity and service.

4. This activity was to be accompanied by marvelous signs.

II. This Prophetic Promise Was Partially Fulfilled at Pentecost (Acts 2:1-21, 32, 33).

The unusual behavior of the disciples at Pentecost, with Peter's preaching which resulted in the conversion of thousands, evidenced the supernatural, but the cosmic signs which the prophet predicted to take place in heaven and earth were not in evidence.

The real fulfillment of the prophet's prediction is in the future and will find fulfillment in connection with the regathering of Israel and the establishment of the Messianic Kingdom.

III. Some Names of the Holy Spirit.

1. Comforter (John 14:16, 17).

"Comforter" means "literally" one called to one's side as a part taker, an advocate, a helper and defender." He is called "another Comforter" as he was to take the place of Jesus.

2. The Witness (John 15:26). The Spirit peculiarly witnesses of Christ. He does not speak of himself, but takes the things of Christ and shows them unto us (John 16:13).

3. The Spirit of Truth (John 16:13). The Holy Spirit guides into all truth. Those who are taught by him know the truth.

IV. Some Works of the Spirit.

1. He regenerates (John 3:3-8). The new birth is peculiarly the Spirit's work.

2. He teaches (John 14:26). The Holy Spirit was to take up the work of teaching the disciples.

3. Convicts the world of sin (John 16:8, 9). The Holy Spirit alone can show men the demerit of their lives and their shortcomings before God.

4. Convicts the world of righteousness (John 16:10). The resurrection and ascension of Christ prove that he is the Righteous One and that righteousness is only possible as he is accepted as Savior.

5. Convicts the world of judgment (John 16:11). Sin unatoned for shall be punished. The sinner who refuses the righteousness which God provided in Jesus Christ shall be judged.

6. Gives victory over the flesh (Rom. 8:2, 12, 13). By the energy of the Holy Spirit the carnal nature can be kept in subjection.

7. He leads the believer (Rom. 8:14). The Spirit-filled believer lives the life of the Son of God.

8. He gives assurance to the believer (Rom. 8:15-17). The Holy Spirit witnesses together with the human spirit to the reality of the new birth.

9. Enables the believer to pray according to the will of God (Rom. 8:26, 27). The Holy Spirit helps the believer's infirmities in prayer.

V. The Diversity of the Gifts of the Spirit (1 Cor. 12:4-11).

In the Church there are to be found those possessing the gifts of wisdom, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discernment of spirits, divers kinds of tongues and their interpretation.

VI. The Sealing of the Spirit (Eph. 1:13, 14).

Into the regenerated life comes the Holy Spirit at once. The indwelling of the Divine Spirit is God's seal of ownership. It is not only a seal of ownership, but of security. It is also the guarantee of the completion of the work of redemption.

VII. The Unity of the Spirit (Eph. 4:1-6).

Christian unity is only possible when effected by the one Holy Spirit.

VIII. The Sin of Grieving the Spirit (Eph. 4:30).

The Spirit may be grieved by failure to respond to his initiative, by yielding to the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye and the vainglory of life, by failure to render full and free obedience, as well as failure to surrender every faculty of the being to his control and direction.

Joy

Joy is the mainspring in the whole round of everlasting nature; joy moves the wheels of the great timepiece of the world; she it is that loosens flowers from their buds, suns from their firmaments, rolling spheres in distant space seen by the glass of the astronomer.—Schiller.

Nobleness

Be noble, and the nobleness that lies in other men, sleeping but never dead, will rise in majesty to meet thine own.—James Russell Lowell.

A large crowd attended and enjoyed a good meeting. Judge N. E. Riddell has returned to town after a six week's visit with relatives in San Antonio, Texas. The Judge is brown as a berry due to exposure to the southern sun. He returned here Saturday noon after returning via New Orleans. Judge Riddell said he had a great time, enjoyed fine fishing, and feels fine as a result of his vacation. He returned in time to attend Mrs. Nettie Hughes' funeral and to resume his duties as County Judge at the June term of county court which was held Monday.

RELIEF PROJECT APPROVED FOR BOONE COUNTY
This week E. A. Marry, Director of Works for the Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration approved a relief project in Boone county to CLEAR DRAIN, GRADE AND PAINT AIRWAY BEACON SITE.

Ten (10) workers will be given employment daily until this work is completed and a total amount of $250.20 will be expended on this project.

COMMISSIONER'S SALES
Two Commissioner's Sales were held on June 3. Two pieces of property were sold in the case of the Florence Deposit Bank vs. J. O. Carpenter, which was purchased by G. B. Rouse for $2500 and the second in the case of John Delahunty, et al vs. Harmon H. Jones, which was bought by Anthony Hagendorn of Kenton county for $13,050. These were considered by those present as very fair prices for these times.

LOUISVILLE ATTY. SLATED TO SUCCEED DAWSON ON U. S. BENCH

Louisville, June 1.—Elwood Hamilton, Louisville attorney, appeared slated to succeed to the Federal district judgeship in Western Kentucky which Judge Charles I. Dawson resigned late Friday.

United States Senators Alben W. Barkley and M. M. Logan announced in Washington they had decided to recommend Hamilton's appointment to President Roosevelt. Action on the appointment is expected next week, the senators indicated.

Judge Dawson announced he had resigned to resume his private law practice because of a desire to devote the remainder of his active years to making provision for his family. He has devoted 25 of the 54 years of his life to public service, and his resigned every public office he ever held. His salary as a Federal judge is $10,000 a year.

A receiving plant has been established in Breckinridge county for 50 acres of pickles, contracted for by the Whitehead-Kelsel Company of Louisville. They pay $1 a hundred for pickles, and farmers will net at least $3,500. The amount might be doubled with a good season.

M. A. Gaunce of Nicholas county sold 100 early fryers weighing up to 3 pounds at 14 weeks for 25 cents a pound.

Sherman Burcham, of Grant, was in Burlington Wednesday.

W.N.U. SERVICE

CHAPTER I.—Matt Kearney, young American living in London, says good-bye to his sister Eileen, on board the steamer Wallaroo bound for Colombo. The Wallaroo is conveying £2,000,000 in gold to Australia. Eileen has a presentiment of coming evil, which affects her brother. On his way home Kearney meets an old friend, Inspector Dawson Haig, of Scotland Yard, who is very much in love with Eileen. Haig is on the trail of a plump, which he is convinced is concealed in Jo Lung's warehouse. Called to other duty, Haig delegates Kearney, with Detective Norwich, to visit the place and find out what he can.

CHAPTER II.—They find the place a veritable treasure house, and Kearney recognizes jewels stolen from his aunt. While in the warehouse he picks up a notebook. Soon after leaving Kearney Norwich is murdered. Haig is puzzled over cryptic notes in the book, referring to stops to be made by the Wallaroo.

CHAPTER III.—Yu'an Hee Sea, high-born Chinaman, whom Haig has long been seeking as the leader of a band of international thieves, is at Jo Lung's. Discovering the loss of his notebook, he sends two of his followers after Norwich and Kearney, one of whom he realizes must have picked it up. Norwich's murder follows, but Kearney is overtaken. While Haig is poring over the book, a man in Kearney's rooms, a monstrous creature enters, seizes it, and escapes.

CHAPTER IV.—Kearney's story of hearing horrible laughter while at Jo Lung's place satisfies Haig his quarry was in hiding there, he recognizing the peculiar malignancy of Yu'an's laugh.

CHAPTER V.—Eileen Kearney, writing to Haig, tells of Jo's fellow passenger, a clever Austrian, Doctor Oestler. At Cairo Yuan confers with his lieutenant, Aswami Pasha, known among the gang as the "chief," over a mysterious coup they are planning. Haig goes to Marseilles, where he meets Eileen when she goes ashore with Doctor Oestler. The inspector boards the Wallaroo, disguised. From radio messages he decodes, he realizes Oestler, with others on board, are members of Yu'an's gang and that they have recognized him.

CHAPTER V

The R. M. S. Wallaroo lay about fifty miles south-southeast of Barcelona. Eileen was in the writing room completing a long letter which she had commenced the day before. Immediately after receipt of a Marconi message which read:

"Don't forget you promised to write. Signed, Billy Haig."

It was destined to be consigned to the post at Marseilles. The final paragraph, written on the previous evening, ran:

"I suppose it's hopeless to expect too much for a fare of thirty pounds. My cabin is quite comfy, and the eats are good. The ship's officers are dears, and Jack Rattray looks after me wonderfully. But the passengers are very plish."

Eileen took writing paper from the rack and continued:

"There's one rather nice man on board, a Mr. Durham, and, oddly enough, he knows you! Isn't that funny? He's going ashore at Marseilles."

"Then there's a Doctor Oestler, whose cabin is next door to mine. He's going to Sydney to take charge of the construction of some big electrical works somewhere in Australia. He knows a terrible lot about electricity. Jimmy Jackson, the senior Marconi man, told me that the doctor is going to revolutionize the radio industry. . . . I don't know what he means. But both times I've been up to send messages Doctor Oestler has been in the wireless room. He sends and receives a great number of messages."

"There's nobody to fall in love with, or nobody I've found so far, I mean. There's a perfectly dreadful woman at the chief's table (old Corcoran is chief engineer. Do you know him?). Some sort of half-caste. A truly terrible plish. I don't know her name and haven't troubled to find out. But old Corky has fallen badly: everybody's laughing about it."

"Charlie Winter says she's some sort of vaudeville act going out to an Australian engagement. I hope she gets the bird the first night she opens."

"There are two very unholly-looking Chinamen living somewhere on the deck below—at least, I thought they were Chinamen, but some one told me they're Siamese. One is small and high-brow and wears glasses, and the other is quite tall with a long neck. I think they must have tried to hang him at some time, but he was too tough. He's a poisonous-looking brute. . . ."

A scratching on the glass of the window immediately in front of the table attracted Eileen's attention. She paused, pen in hand, looking up to see the chief officer, Jack Rattray, performing an excellent pantomime of a very thirsty man drinking.

Eileen shook her head and pointed with her pen to the writing table. But Jack persisted, and finally Eileen nodded consent.

"The doctor's compliments," said Rattray seriously, "if you will step along to his room, he will make up a prescription."

They went downstairs together, heading for the doctor's cabin.

Rattray took a short cut through some of the serving quarters, and, passing an open doorway, Eileen detected over the rattle of a near-by kitchen the strains of a gramophone.

"Is that the chief's gramophone?" she asked, turning to Jack.

"He's entertaining the lady snake charmer," was the reply.

"She's not really a snake charmer, is she?"

"No. I don't think she could charm snakes—as a matter of fact, I believe she trains elephants."

There is a fine old house in the Darb el Ahmar, in the native quarter of Cairo, which, after standing vacant for a number of years, apparently found a tenant. Some time in 1923 it was leased, and ever since had been occupied.

The frontage on the street is not imposing, except for two rather deep windows above a bleached door covered with Arabic inscriptions. But it contains some fine apartments on the first floor, and on the night of the twentieth—two days before the Wallaroo was due at Port Said—one of them was the setting of a scene to witness which Dawson Haig would have paid much.

Under the light of one of the lamps was set a coffee table, and near to it, buried in cushions, Orange Blossom lay. She smoked cigarettes and drank tea from a porcelain cup. A large silver incense burner sent up clouds of perfumed smoke.

The native latch of one of the three doors to the apartment was depressed. Yu'an Hee Sea came in. He closed the door and looked along the room.

"Little blossom," he said, his strange voice echoing in the nearly empty room. "You love the perfume of Ho Nan. I, too, love it, but you burn too much."

The woman pouted. "I can never do as I like," she exclaimed. "Since you brought me from China, I have never known any happiness. What have you come to tell me? Is it that I must embark upon a ship, stifle in a train, or be sick in an airplane? Something, I see in your eyes."

"Yu'an Hee Sea watched her, smiling. "There is indeed a further journey which you must take, little one," he said, "but surely you welcome it—or are you so happy in the house of Aswami Pasha that you regret to leave Cairo?"

"I have small love for Aswami," she replied, "and less for Cairo. We are going, then, to Arabia? There, at least, I have my comforts—my servants."

"In the morning, Orange Blossom," he walked slowly towards her. "You have until the dawn of tomorrow in which to talk to me, to bewitch me with your beauty, and make me more completely your slave."

The woman smiled up at him as he bent over her. "You know that I love you, Yu'an," she whispered.

"I begin to believe so, since you have followed me around the world."

"Followed?"

"You were free to leave me at any time."

Dimly the note of a gong sounded in some place below. "Go now to your room," said Yu'an Hee Sea. "This is Aswami who has arrived. I shall be detained, perhaps for an hour."

In a small square room on the ground floor of the house, furnished very simply as an office, Aswami Pasha sat waiting.

To the gang assembled in the Restaurant Suleiman Bey in Paris he was known as the Chief, but here he was an Egyptian gentleman of established position. Nevertheless, he watched the door of the room with a certain nervousness not strictly in keeping with Moslem fatalism.

"Yu'an Hee Sea stood framed in the open doorway, looking at the Egyptian, his eyes nearly closed. "You are an hour late. What is the explanation?"

"It is simple," was the reply. "The pilot made a forced landing, but a good one. We were ten miles from Heliopolis—which, I think, explains my delay."

"It explains it," the reedy voice conceded. "I accept this explanation. I would add that if such accidents occur to others of our company disaster lies before us like a gulf which no man can pass."

"I have no fears," the Egyptian assured him. "Here is the roll. I can tell you where every man of the company is at the present moment."

"Or should be."

"Some are out of reach, I admit, but with the others we can get in touch if you desire it."

"I do not desire it. You are responsible," he raised a plump hand, the pointed index finger curled. "I do not wish to see your report. Tell me that there has been no hitch."

"No hitch."

"Very good. I am perhaps foolish."

but in London everything went wrong. Since this is our biggest venture, I thought that the auguries were unfavorable."

Across the coarse but handsome features of the Egyptian a momentary cloud passed, its passage instantly detected by those nearly closed eyes of Yu'an Hee Sea.

"You also have been disturbed?" The voice was very soft but incredibly high.

"No, no, Excellency!" Aswami forced a smile. "One of the men rather alarmed me on the night we met in Paris."

"It was the Scotsman? He must be watched."

"No, not Macles. I distrust him only when he is sober. Also, I have arranged to replace him if necessary. But Kid Brown exchanged words with a stranger down stairs in the restaurant. He went down with Franz Hartog, our second engineer, whom he had thrashed for a breach of orders. And this stranger, except for some Russian idioms, was the only person in the restaurant. Too late, he reported the matter to me, admitting that he may have been indiscreet."

There was a momentary silence; then:

"Repeat to me," said Yu'an Hee Sea, "in the man's own words, exactly what he reported to you, including his description of this stranger."

Those desperately narrow streets which lead from the docks at Marseilles to the more habitable quarters of the city were several inches deep in an unpleasant kind of yellow mud. The buildings were yellowish gray; the sky was of this muddy complexion also.

"Simply too unbelievably plishy," Eileen declared, as the taxi floundered and thumped through the morass.

"And I'm real sorry I started."

"That's rather mean of you, Eileen," said Jack Rattray, the first officer, smiling at her slow smile. "Don't you think so, doctor?"

Doctor Oestler patted Eileen's arm soothingly.

"At least, Miss Kearney," he said, "it makes a small change. We shall not be ashore again until we reach Port Said. Yes? And what does it matter, this mud and the gray sky? Ha? Presently we shall be convivial with a little cocktail—ha? And it makes a small change."

Eileen turned to him and laughed. The outstanding characteristic of the Austrian doctor, as she had discovered during their short acquaintance, was his astonishing gift of soothing.

They presently reached a hotel, turned into the little lounge on the right of the door, and sat down at a table. "Good Lord!" said Eileen. "There's that ghastly woman—with the chief!"

Near a pillar leaning very close together across a small table, were the chief engineer of the Wallaroo and a big, dark woman, apparently half-caste, handsome in her way, but of a generously curving figure not strictly fashionable.

"Good old Corky," said Jack Rattray. "He's a fast worker. He's well away with the lion tamer."

"Look who's here!" Eileen exclaimed.

Doctor Oestler and Jack Rattray stared across the lounge. Their popular fellow traveler, Mr. Durham, was crossing to them.

"Ha!" cried Doctor Oestler. "It is our Mr. Durham. He is leaving us—yes?"

"Yes," Rattray could hardly have a final word to him before he got back to the ship.

"He never even said good-by to me," Eileen complained.

But Durham had joined them now.

"Doctor and Mr. Rattray," he said. "I hope you will take a stirrup cup presently. Miss Kearney—if your friends can spare you for a moment—I have a private message for you. But I shan't detain you more than two minutes."

They left the house and walked upstairs, to where, upon a seat in an alcove outside the dining room, a man was waiting. A soft hat and a white raincoat lay beside him.

"Oh!" Eileen gasped, and clutched Durham's arm. Her face grew suddenly pale. Then the pallor was swept by a swift color.

Dawson Haig stood. "I haven't frightened you, Eileen. I couldn't think of any other way."

When Mr. Franz Hartog came on board the Wallaroo at Marseilles to take possession of his cabin on D deck (both berths in which had been reserved in London), through a partly open door across the narrow alleyway Dawson Haig was watching. He saw the tall, blond German whom, with bloody mouth, he had seen coming down the stairs of the Restaurant Suleiman Bey!

Unseen, Dawson Haig left his hiding place and went up to the captain's room. Captain Petersen was seated at his desk, which was littered with papers. He was badly worried about this voyage. The gold was a big responsibility, in the first place, and now, to his other troubles had been added this sudden appearance of an official from Scotland Yard.

"I was right, captain," said Dawson Haig. "It's my man!"

The captain smiled resignedly. "It's a complete muddle to me, Inspector." He confessed, "Whatever it all about? If this fellow is a criminal, why don't you arrest him? I shall be glad to be rid of him."

"Thank you," said Haig. "It isn't so simple as that. But here's the position, roughly: You have five passengers on board the Wallaroo, whom I suspect of good reason of being members of a dangerous international gang."

Through a Partly Open Door Across the Narrow Alleyway, Dawson Haig Was Watching.

gang."

"Five!" said the skipper, staring under tufted eyebrows. "Have they all come aboard here?"

"No. Four joined you in London."

"Holy smoke! What's afoot, Inspector?"

"If I knew that, sir, I should know what I'm here to find out," was Haig's reply. "Certain evidence came into our possession in London which seemed to point to the fact that members of a gang of dope dealers, receivers of stolen property, and other undesirable trades, were sailing in your ship. The exact number of the rooms occupied by them were discovered."

"Got those numbers?"

"I am almost certain I have. My list, however, was made from memory. But in a certain Paris cafe, which we believe to be a meeting place of these people, I recently had a slight of a certain man. Today he has joined the Wallaroo, as a passenger. His room booked in London, is one of those which I have on the list! I think it's safe to presume, captain, that the other four suspects should be watched?"

"I entirely agree with you, Inspector."

"The French authorities have just notified me," Haig went on, "that three other men—all they could trace—who were present at the restaurant I have mentioned, have all set out by different routes for the Near East. . . . Looks like a general assembly at some spot unknown. It's my job to find that spot, captain; because, if I do find it, I expect to meet there the man who murdered Detective Sergeant Norwich in Limehouse the night before the Wallaroo sailed."

As a result of this conversation, a new passenger joined the ship—only a few minutes before she left Marseilles: a certain Mr. Smith, who wore tinted spectacles. He was allotted a seat at the doctor's table next to the distinguished Austrian scientist, Doctor Oestler.

On the following morning, one of the Chinese passengers, Mr. Len Chow of New York, went to the purser's office. He had a serious complaint to lodge. While he had been absent in the bathroom, some one rifled his cabin. He rather thought that his return had interrupted the intruder, as all sorts of papers were left strewn upon the floor, indicating a hurried retreat.

"Can you give me a list of the missing articles?" asked Mr. Winter, the purser.

Mr. Len Chow, his spectacled face unemotional, replied that none were missing.

"Then what's the row about?"

"The thief must be apprehended. He has rifled my papers. They are of great personal value."

"But no value to anyone else?"

"No."

"Are any missing?"

"No."

There was silence for some moments. "I'll make inquiries, Mr. Len Chow, naturally," said Winter. "But as you say he has stolen nothing, I really don't know how we are going to identify this person. Do you?"

"I cannot say. But I must be protected from such visits."

"I'll see what can be done."

At about which time, Dawson Haig, with his cabin door locked, was rapidly making pencil notes, while his memory served him. He had been unable to complete his investigation, owing to the unexpected movements in the cabin which immediately faced that of Mr. Len Chow. He much regretted the disorder in which he had been compelled to leave the latter's apartment. It had been this or discovery, however.

Briefly, he had learned that Mr. Chow, according to his passport, was an American citizen, and that he could have been in England only a week, or possibly less, at the time that the Wallaroo sailed. He found a receipted bill from the Grand Hotel, Birmingham. It was sufficient to convince Haig that Mr. Chow had been engaged upon the frustrated dope smuggling enterprise; had probably been responsible for safe delivery in Sydney, to which port, apparently, he was booked.

A puzzling feature of his passport, which spoke of extensive traveling mostly in the Near East, was a visa bearing yesterday's date, by the Egyptian consul in Marseilles, which strongly suggested that Mr. Chow's plans had been changed and that he was going ashore at Port Said.

Haig presently presented himself to the captain's cabin. There, he remained for a whole hour, busily transcribing from the borrowed Marconi books a number of incoming messages and outgoing messages, received or dispatched by the suspected five. While some of the messages seemed innocent enough, others, notably those sent by Doctor Oestler, quite obviously were compiled in some sort of code.

Haig went to his cabin and settled down before the little table to see what he could make out of this new material.

EARLY LAMBS NEED

NO WORM TREATMENT
Reports of deaths among early lambs, as a result of drenching, has brought a statement from veterinary authorities at the Agricultural Experiment Station, University of Kentucky, to the effect that early lambs as a rule should not be treated for worms. It is not considered necessary to treat lambs before July 1; that is, only late lambs need drenching. In fact, it is dangerous to drench young lambs, and often results fatally unless carefully done.

If ewes are treated for worms in the fall, they usually do not need drenching the following year until the lambs are weaned. If they were not fall treated, they may need treating in the spring.

UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS

Macon, Ga., June 3.—(Special). Colonel James J. Meade, veteran officers in charge of U. S. Marine Corps Recruiting from Washington, D. C., inspected District Headquarters here on arrival from the base at Paris Island, S. C., where he saw the applicants enlisted recently from Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky, and expressed to Lieut. Col. H. W. Stone his pleasure at the excellent physique and good appearance of these men. He said "The practice of accepting only men of superior education, first instituted in the South has proven more satisfactory. The officers coming in daily contact with these men speak highly of their aptitude."

District Headquarters at Macon has received authority to accept thirty outstanding applicants in June, between 18 and 25 years of age and not less than 5 feet 6 inches in height. Full information and application blanks can be obtained from that office.

What IS a Sound Loan?

A sound loan for a commercial bank is a loan which the borrower believes, and the bank expects, will be paid within a reasonable time—a loan which if not fully repaid at the maturity of the note is substantially reduced by regular periodic installments. Loans that are regularly reduced enable a bank to accommodate patrons whose needs may be more essential. A bank must have a turn-over of money in the same way that a merchant must have a turn-over of merchandise, with this difference—bank's turn-over affects the credit facilities of the entire community.

The ability and intention to repay a loan by a planned program, and within a reasonable time, is the essence of a good loan. The giving of collateral does not repay a loan. Collateral is merely a pledge to guarantee the borrower's ability and promise to repay the loan within a reasonable time.

WHEN LIVES ARE AT STAKE

You need the same protection that race drivers demand

KELLY PETILLO ON MAY 30, WON the 500-Mile Indianapolis Race on Firestone Tires, breaking the track record and driving the entire distance at a rate of 106.24 miles per hour.

This record is an outstanding demonstration of tire efficiency. To go 500 miles in less than five hours on this rough and bumpy 26-year-old brick track, without tire trouble of any kind, demonstrates the strength and blowout protection that Firestone builds into their Gum-Dipped Tires.

AB JENKINS ALSO RECENTLY demonstrated the stamina, efficiency, and blowout protection built into Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. He drove his 5000 pound car over the hot salt beds at Lake Bonneville, Utah, 3000 miles in 23½ hours. This was an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, and although temperatures were as high as 120°, he had no blowouts or tire trouble of any kind.

These records are made possible by special construction features built into Firestone Tires.

Take no chances—protect your life and the lives of others by letting us equip your car with Firestone Tires and give you the Safety and Blowout Protection that race drivers demand.

Before you buy new tires ask yourself these three questions

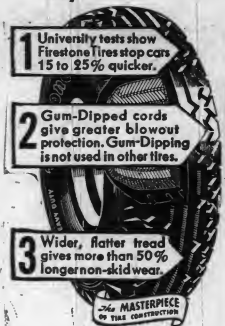

- 1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"
- 2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"
- 3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

ANSWER No. 1—Leading university tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop your car 15% quicker than the best of all popular makes of tires.

ANSWER No. 2—Unequal performance records for sixteen consecutive years prove that Gum-Dipping gives you the greatest blowout protection ever known.

ANSWER No. 3—Thousands of car owners report unequal mileage records—evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

$5,776.354 PAYMENTS FOR TOBACCO GROWERS

Rental and benefit payments to Kentucky tobacco growers from May, 1934, to April, 1935, totaled $5,776,354, says a report of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture on the farm situation. Of this total, $5,068,368 went to cured growers, $408,958 to uncured growers, and $299,028 to farmers producing dark air-cured tobacco.

Cattle prices continue good, as the available supply of beef is small, compared to the demand. Market receipts of cattle in April were only 80 per cent as large as a year ago.

Hog receipts have been only 60 per cent of normal. The spring low price was reached in late April, with an advance in May. Heavier feeding is in evidence, hogs averaging 5 pounds larger than a year ago.

A good pasture season has produced high-quality lambs, the marketing season being in full swing. Increased activity in wool is noted, with better prices a possibility.

While the demand for butter has been good, it has not been sufficient to hold prices for the heavy spring production. Imports continue heavy. Production is slightly under a year ago.

Egg prices have held unusually well, due in part to high prices for flocks in general. Production is under a year ago, and probably will continue under 1934. Poultry receipts are considered moderate and prices steady. Increased hatchings mean larger laying flocks next fall and winter.

O. J. Towler, a Boyd-co., dairyman who feeds about 60 bags of feed a month, saves $21 by buying through the Farm Bureau.

TIPS TO TOURISTS ON SAFE DRIVING

Alertness is the chief requirement for the driver on a vacation tour. He doesn't know the road and its hazards, he is unfamiliar with local traffic customs, and at any moment he may be called upon to cope with a situation that he is not accustomed to meeting in his ordinary driving. Therefore, if he does not concentrate on his job, he is much more likely to have a mishap than when he is traveling the old familiar roads around his home.

Most driving over accustomed routes is done sub-consciously; the driver slows down for curves and busy intersections, halts at stop streets, and observe the traffic lights, without giving thought to them. This is the safest condition of driving; because it permits the man at the wheel to be on the alert for any unusual development. Since he does so, many of the necessary things from force of habit, he is better able to act when the unexpected happens.

On the summer tour, over strange highways, the driver must consciously direct his mind to warning signs crossings, curves, steep grades etc. And it is on this kind of drive, when he needs all his attention on the road, and that he is most subjected to distraction. He has to observe the scenery, keep an eye on the youngsters, converse with his wife, see that the baggage remains in place, and look after a dozen things that ordinary driving cause him no concern.

The first rule of safe touring for the driver, therefore, is to keep constantly on the alert. The rule for the passenger is to avoid distracting the driver from his main job.

"Take nothing for granted" is an excellent rule for the tourist driver. He should not assume that all is clear around the bend of the road or just over the crest of a hill—he should not even count on what other drivers will do. The one safe assumption about drivers, in fact, is that they will do the wrong thing. If you anticipate that they will, you'll save a lot of trouble.

SCHOOL TEACHERS OF THESE DAYS AND OTHER DAYS

Here is a true and reliable story of the development of Kentucky school teachers from the beginning of their work to the present time. The first school ever taught in the state was at Harrodsburg in 1776, the next at Boonesboro, in 1779. These were subscription schools taught by teachers ignorant of the branches of study they tried to teach, and methods of teaching them. The story of school teachers in Kentucky begins in 1840 following the first real school legislation of 1838.

By 1847, teachers from other states had invaded our territory, but being of a "transient" nature, the natural feelings of Kentuckians demanded a supply of native, resident, permanent teachers. By 1850, certificates to teach the elements of a plain, English education, from qualified examiners, was first required. Teachers were advised to form educational associations in which to study details of a more general system of education.

Normal schools for training teachers in matter and method were first provided for in 1856, and by 1867 certificates not renewable, unless the teacher showed improvement over persons "passably qualified," were provided for. Great improvement could be easily observed by 1871, but at that time teachers were badly mistreated, by having their wages, scant as they were, and hard as they had toiled in earning them, held up. Funds that could have been available to them were used in speculation movements, but a remedy was soon provided. Until the remedy, teachers were often, and in many cases, forced to sell their claims for what they could get, a third wholly unnecessary, and unjustifiable.

Are You Protected?

In the world war, the armed forces of the United States, which were actively engaged little more than a year lost 53,381 men. That was war. In the peaceful year 1934 the total deaths by automobile were 36,000 and 1,000,000 injured. If you own a car be sure you have adequate automobile insurance protection, because no matter how careful you may be, you are constantly exposed to many road hazards. You never know what the other fellow will do. Juries are rendering large verdicts for damages against motorists whose automobiles have been involved in accidents. Verdicts of $25,000 and $50,000. You cannot afford to take a chance by driving your automobile without automobile insurance. Let the insurance company carry the risk. The premium charge is nominal. There have been several serious automobile accidents in Boone county in the past few weeks and there will be many more. Who knows you may be next. I represent an old line company fifty one years in business. I will be glad to quote you the rates on your car, or answer any questions.

Wm. C. Walton

able to them were used in speculation movements, but a remedy was soon provided. Until the remedy, teachers were often, and in many cases, forced to sell their claims for what they could get, a third wholly unnecessary, and unjustifiable.

Teachers' institutes met in each county, whose purpose was to better prepare teachers for their great work, able and competent normal instructors, trained teachers in these institutes, thus making them a kind of normal school nearer home. Teachers continued to take advantage of such chances for training, etc., until 1906, when two large State normal schools were established by law. In 1908 these were empowered to certificate teachers.

For a while many teachers rushed to the normal schools for certification etc., while others continued to qualify by the direct written examination plan. This lasted until 1934 when the famous "School Code" became law, putting an end to examinations for certificates to teach. No way now open by which one can become a teacher except through college first.

Many there be that now go to college and get the required "credits," but few there be that get teaching positions thereafter. "A great many are called (to college) but few are chosen, (to teach)."

The new school code, in no way provides for the older teachers, who have chosen the profession as his life work, attended normal schools and colleges at great expense, had rich experience in successful teaching, and is still satisfactory with those with, and for whom he teaches. No evaluation has ever been placed on such teachers. Sympathies come from everywhere, but remedies come out from nowhere. In this matter, "all things may be lawful, but all things may not be expedient."

While there appears to be a tendency towards it, may that sad day never come, when good teachers must depend on "tricks" or "ploys" in order to secure teaching positions, or give up their profession. A good teacher is cheap at any price, a poor one dear at any price. We may have too many teachers but not too many good teachers. In every sense the word applies.

"Let's up and be clad in battle array," for the very best teachers in school of today.

House screens should be made of No. 16 mesh screen wire to insure protection against flies and mosquitoes. Full screens are preferred to half-screens. Both window screens and screen doors should fit closely, and doors held in place by a tight spring.

The time to sell peanuts is when people are on the way to the circus--

AND RIGHT NOW THEY'RE ON THEIR WAY TO THE BIG BUSINESS TOPS

There is a whale of a lot of difference between the buying mood of people today as compared with a year ago.

They are out to spend some money, and they are having more money to spend.

It may have been good business sense for a merchant to have retrenched in his advertising activities when people were not spending any more money than was absolutely necessary.

But such a retrenchment policy at this time is false economy.

Truly, there is now a more profitable investment or expenditure a merchant or business man can make than to get back into an advertising program—not necessarily an expensive one, but some sort of advertising, at least.

Merchants and business have lost customers over the last few years—old customers who have been "badly hit" in a financial way; former customers who have moved away; past patrons who have switched to other stores and sources of supply.

And if Mr. Merchant permits this condition to continue, he will soon awaken to the disastrous fact that his business has been undermined by more alert and energetic competition. It is a hundred times more difficult and expensive to revive an UNDERMINED BUSINESS than to keep a going business going.

Here before you is the opportune time and the business opportunity to get that sales volume back to normal and to increase it.

And advertising in The Recorder is the most productive and economical method of advertising to Boone county people. Any local merchant who practices any other form of local advertising is spending two and three times to bring in the same SALES DOLLAR which The Boone County Recorder space could bring in for one-half or one-third less.

SIGN-POSTS

Imagine yourself on an unfamiliar highway at night in the country. You want to go to Allison. You come to a forked road. No signs! Which way? You turn left and right. You come to a town. It proves to be Liberty. You go back to the fork and turn left. A mile or so farther on you come to another cross-road. A sign pointing right says "Allison three miles."

But for the sign-post you might have traveled miles—spent hours, and come short of your destination. Imagine yourself in need of hosiery, clothing, breakfast foods or anything else, and this newspaper without advertisements.

Advertisements are sign-posts. They are information. They save you from wandering aimlessly from store to store. They keep you advised of the newest products; of the latest values. They save you time, and put greater buying power in your dollars. They assure you of quality and service in merchandise, for only honest goods honestly advertised can stand the spotlight of publicity.

FEEDING PREJUDICES

Most of us who consider ourselves broadminded are anything but that. Otherwise, how can we account for the fact that we are seldom interested in reading "the other side" of any question.

We read almost exclusively such books, periodicals and newspapers as we know in advance will generally coincide with our own views. Few Republicans subscribe for a red-hot Democratic newspaper, or vice versa. People take church papers only of their own denomination. Capitalists take few labor papers, and laboring men would not look to one that reflects the capitalist viewpoint.

In other words, we all have more or less confirmed opinions on nearly every important subject and do not admit that there may be some virtue in the opposite view.

As a recent writer has said, "The only facts we can tolerate are those we already know." We read, not really to learn anything new, but for the purpose of conforming ourselves in our present beliefs and prejudices.

By CARTER FIELD

Washington.—For the third time, in the NRA decision, the Supreme court has tried to diagram for congress a pattern by which it can accomplish the desired New Deal reforms. Until now there has been very little effort to meet the ideas of the high court. But from now on there must be.

Until now many New Dealers have been saying privately that the high court would change its tune. That they really have meant is that there would be a change in the court within a year, and the slender five to four conservative lead would be wiped out.

But in the NRA decision the court was unanimous. There has been a very apparent drift, even among the so-called liberals of the court, toward the "pattern" for progressive legislation on which the majority insisted in the decision throwing out the oil code, but to which so little attention was paid. Also toward another diagram as to authority revealed in the decision on railroad pensions.

The court is very positive about the method in which decisions must be made by such bodies as the interstate commerce commission, the NRA, the AAA, the federal trade commission, etc.

In each case, to put it in simple language, the body making a decision must conduct a fact-finding investigation. It must rectify the facts, rectify the powers granted it by law, and then announce its findings. This last word is very important. The Supreme court thinks a lot of it.

The main purpose behind all this is to force congress to be very specific indeed about powers granted, to set up limits, and to specify who shall make the fact-finding investigations and pronounce the "findings."

Follows Court's Ideas

If all the other governmental bodies would study the decisions of the I. C. C., they would discover that the railroad regulating body has been strictly complying with the court's ideas for these many years. As a result the number of times the I. C. C. has gotten its fingers burned by a reversing court decision has been so small as to be almost inconsequential.

There has been a lot of loose talk since the decision of the court, as to whether the effort would be to invalidate this or that, and to make rewriting this or that essential. Roughly, the court pattern would require the drafting of most of the New Deal legislation, but that part of it is generally recognized. What is not so generally appreciated is that the New Deal agencies must reform their methods of procedure.

They must conduct fact-finding investigations. Granted this is done, and the story of the investigation is told in the final decision, there is no disposition on the part of the high court to go behind the record as to the accuracy of these findings. So it is not a question of heckling the NRA or the TVA, or the AAA as to whether it has the facts correctly.

But it must state them, it must state the power under which it acts, and must then present its findings.

To some observers this fixed purpose on the part of the Supreme court may seem rather capricious. But to the court it is enormously important. The court has made rather clear why it wants the decisions made in this way. In the first place, it gives anyone objecting to a chance for lodging an effective protest, either by attacking the powers under which the action is taken, or by attacking the record of fact-finding as revealed, or the conclusions reached from that fact-finding.

In short, the Supreme court formula gives the constitutional right of appeal a reality, which under the methods pursued by the NRA and certain other New Deal agencies was and is not present.

Up to Soldier Lobby

What happens now on the soldier bonus depends, absolutely, on the soldier lobby. Col. John Thomas Taylor, his advisers and his superiors in the Legion organization, will determine, within fairly sharply defined limits, what will be done.

If they want to, they can put over something very close to the so-called Harrison compromise. At the time this compromise was first proposed, Senator Harrison stated that President Roosevelt would sign it.

Whether the President would sign it if passed now, following his veto's being sustained, is something else again. New elements enter into it. For example, if the Harrison plan had been accepted when proposed, the President might have been able to convince the conservatives he wants to stay with him that otherwise he might have had not only the bonus but inflation forced on him.

He can no longer make that defense to opponents of the bonus. So it is entirely possible that the President might veto the Harrison bill, if passed now.

But—the Harrison bill could be passed over the veto with ease. There is no argument about the house. That body gave far above the two-thirds majority for the Patman bill. So the whole case rests in the senate.

Now the truth is that the apparent margin of eight votes, which the President had in sustaining his veto in the senate, was padded somewhat. It was not a firm margin. For example, close friends of both Senator Pope of Idaho, and Coolidge of Massachusetts report that each of these senators told the soldiers that if they could muster enough votes to override the veto with their votes, they would vote for the bonus. Otherwise not. Both, as a matter of fact, voted for the Patman bill on its first passage.

Kicks From Home

Reports also are that Senator Chavez of New Mexico has had so much kicking from his state on his vote to sustain the veto that he would feel obliged to vote for such a measure as the Harrison compromise if it were put forward, veto or no veto.

It is not necessary to go on with names to substantiate the point. Obviously the Harrison bill would avoid two of the points of attack made by the President in his veto message. In effect, it provides for payment only of present value of the bonus certificates, thus meeting the President's point that $750 invested now in a government bond would produce $1,000 in 1945 when the bonus certificates are due.

Also the Harrison compromise has no printing press money provision. These two important differences would be enough to change senatorial approval from the 54 to 40 veto sustaining roll-call to more than two-thirds favoring the bill.

Privately, everybody on Capitol Hill knows this. The only question is whether the Legionaires want to push their advantage now, or whether they think it would be better strategy to wait until the eve of election next year.

By waiting they could probably get a little more cash for the soldiers. By taking a little less now they would be sure. Naturally the representatives of the Legion are not loath to have something to keep on battling for. It justifies their existence. Not to mention their salaries.

True, it is generally believed that as soon as the bonus has been finally disposed of the Legionaires will start working on pension legislation. But they do not like to talk about that.

G. O. P. Not Jubilant

Old heads among the Republican leaders—there are a few despite the fact that for one reason or another they do not seem to loom as possible candidates—are not as jubilant about the terrible jolting the administration has been getting from the Supreme court as most published interviews would have one believe.

There are two reasons for their pessimism—so far as G. O. P. advantage from the situation is concerned. One is that they know perfectly well Franklin D. Roosevelt is a very resourceful person. They know that within a short time he will evolve some sort of substitute program. They know that the big propaganda machine of the administration will do a swell job in telling the people about its possibilities. And they are not sure that it will be demonstrated to be a flop in time to head off Roosevelt's re-election.

They are perfectly sure in their own minds that no program can be drafted to accomplish the New Deal aims—particularly as to planned economy, government control of production, etc.—which will not involve a drastic revising of the Constitution. But they are not sure the people will be convinced of this before election.

Their minds go back to the first days of NRA, to all the enthusiasm about shorter hours, raising minimum pay scales, eliminating child labor, benefiting manufacturers and other employers by checkmating the chiselers, permitting co-operation, and temporarily forgetting about the anti-trust laws.

Few, indeed, were the Republican leaders in those days who dared attack the whole scheme, either as unconstitutional or undesirable. Even those who privately disapproved the whole thing knew that it would not only be foolish, politically, but coming from Republicans might even be regarded as rather unpatriotic partisanship. For it could certainly be attacked as tending to prevent what then seemed to many as the only proposal to get the country out of the depression from having a chance to succeed.

Seems Strange Now

This view animated public opinion very generally when General Johnson was emitting blasts in the first blush of his enthusiasm. Which seems strange now in view of the chorus of approval for the Supreme court decision.

So what the skeptics among Republican leaders are worried about today is that something approaching that situation may be attained when the administration starts on its new tack.

The other angle for their pessimism is they fear a big reaction from the present wave of satisfaction over the court verdicts. They fear that the strikes now threatening, and various other conditions that may arise, may turn public sentiment all around within the next six months or more.

Involved in this is a rather interesting psychological factor. If the Supreme court decision had been 5 to 4, it is reasonable to assume that the New Dealers would be almost hysterical at the moment in denouncing the "reactionary majority" of the court. They would have kicked up so much fuss that the people in sympathy with the majority opinion would be irritated.

This would keep them in a partisan mental condition, so far as the New Deal program is concerned. In short, a splended mental condition for a good hot political campaign.

But the New Dealers are stunned at the blow. All thought of a change in the court is abandoned. Which is not calculated to keep critics of the New Deal steamed up. They are not only likely to cool off, but to have misgivings.

FORTY YEARS AGO

From the Files of The Boone County Recorder

(ISSUE OF JUNE 12, 1895)

The handsome residence of Mr. J. R. Clutterbuck, with its beautiful avenues, its picturesque surroundings, its romantic scenery and its handsome parlors, presented to the eye of all admirers of beauty, last Friday evening a picture of splendor, luxury and magnificence, the occasion being a superb success in every particular, and no more adaptable place could suggest itself for such an occasion.

About fifteen couples responded to invitations issued. Cards and dancing were the announcements. The music was excellent. It was furnished by the Burlington Orchestra, who played brilliantly the best dance music by Wagner and other modern composers, until the admirers of Telescopic catering the spirit, glided away over the smooth floor to the magical rhythm of the entrancing strains tempting every and anon the tired dancers to dance again, while others sat about and listened to the music and as the dancers moved to and fro in the spacious parlor with its lofty cream tinted walls it formed a beautiful haidoscope of beautiful images. The merry enjoyment was indulged in until a late hour, when the guests reluctantly departed for their homes.

Among those present were Misses Anna and Lottie Garrison, Sallie and Katie Smith, Olga Kirkpatrick, Ella Duncan, Mary and Kathryn Furlong, Fannie Finch, Katie Huey, Mabel Vest, Mrs. J. B. Berkshire, Mrs. W. L. Riddell, Mrs. W. C. Brown, Mrs. J. S. Clutterbuck, Messrs. J. B. Berkshire, Arthur E. Rouse, R. C. Collins, Edson Riddell, W. C. Brown, J. S. Clutterbuck, W. L. Riddell, E. S. McKim, Kirby Tanner, J. H. Craven, W. E. Vest, Hubert Gaines, Charlie Finch and many others.

G. G. Hughes has purchased a new buggy. The next Sunday school convention will be held at Hopeful. Don't forget the Democratic District meeting next Saturday at 2 p. m.

James L. Gaines was appointed administrator of A. S. Gaines, deceased.

E. E. Fry and wife, of Verona, were guests of Sheriff Roberts and family Monday.

A fine rain visited the lower part of the county last week, and a very large part of the tobacco crop was planted.

Let every Democrat in Boone county go to his voting place next Saturday afternoon at two o'clock and take a part in the primaries set for that hour.

The members of the Commissary Beef Club and others interested are requested to meet at the Commissary at 1 p. m., Saturday, June 22, 1895.

THE GARDEN

LATE POTATOES 11

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture. Last week the general requirements for soil and soil preparation, for fertilizing and for general management of late potatoes were discussed. Today, the discussion is finished.

Going back to seed, no grower of potatoes can afford to omit seed treatment to control scab and black scurf. This is more important with regard to scab, for summer-grown potatoes are peculiarly subject to this disease. Either the "standard" treatment or the "quick dip" both described in Kentucky College of Agriculture Circular 202, may be used. The seed should be cut into pieces having about the volume of a pullet's egg, and bearing at least one eye; more eyes do not matter. As contrasted with the practice one may follow in the spring, namely, planting the seed as soon as it is cut, the seed pieces for summer planting should undergo "corking over" so that their moisture is held within them and not lost through being absorbed by dry, warm soil. The seed should be cut from 48 to 96 hours before it is planted, and kept in crates of other ventilated containers in a relatively cool place through which there is not much movement of air.

The seed should be planted in rows from 30 to 36 inches wide, and the pieces dropped 15 inches apart, for Cobblers, and 18 inches for all other varieties.

The depth of planting should be greater than for the spring crop, because in mid-summer and even late into the fall, rains are few, making it necessary for the crop to depend largely on moisture that is already in the soil. If potatoes are planted deeply enough for the roots to reach soil moisture reserves, they will succeed better in carrying over until the fall rains start. Deep soil is cool soil, as well; potatoes are a "cool" crop. Five inches is a proper depth to make the furrows but they should not be filled when the seed is covered, but only an inch or two. As the potaatoes come up, which they will more quickly than if they had to penetrate through 5 inches of soil, the furrows should be filled, and the field made level.

The cultivation of late potatoes should be shallow so that no roots are injured, and level, so as to offer as little evaporating surface as possible.

Planting time depends on the varieties used. For McCormick, the standard "July potato," planting time ranges from June 15 in northern Kentucky to July 15 in the counties along the Tennessee line; for "Snowflake," a favorite in the Purchase, the date is from July 1 to August 1, in southern Kentucky, and about 2 weeks earlier in the counties that about the state of Ohio. For the "French" variety, a newcomer, our best information is that it be planted July 15 in the northern part of the state and as much as 3 weeks later, in the southern counties. In the mountain counties, where summer rains are assured, Green Mountains may be successfully grown; planting date is between June and July 15. When Irish Cobblers is the variety, seed that has been kept on coal storage must be used; planting extends from July 10 to August 10, depending on the latitude, north to south.

The arch-pest of late potatoes is the Colorado beetle and sometimes blister beetles are troublesome; these insects are controlled through the use of arsenicals. Sometime, potato lice and potato leafhoppers come; they may be stopped by applying tobacco extract. Frequently the crop is cut short by blight; applying Bordeaux is the control. In fact, all potatoes, no matter what the variety, are benefited by systematic spraying with Bordeaux Mixture, to which arsenical and tobacco extract are added, when needed for these materials is apparent. A program of at least three sprayings will certainly pay for itself.

Master Commissioner

Horses and mules, when working, should receive a pound of grain and a pound and a tenth of hay or good forage for each 100 pounds of live weight. Thus a 1,000-pound animal requires 10' pounds of grain and 11 pounds of hay daily. If lice get on poultry, put a little melted lard on their heads at night, or poultice over a week old may be dusted with two small pinches of sodium fluoride. Dust the hens in the morning, but never at night or on a rainy damp day.

Carroll county farmers are reporting good returns from poultry, and are giving extra care to their flocks.

LOOKING BACKWARD

A CROSS SECTION OF AN EARLIER DAY.

In looking over an issue of the Recorder of just forty years ago the Editor noticed a number of things that should be of interest to the older subscribers, altho they have probably been forgotten. There was an article by Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage on a controversial subject; a notice of the appointment of Judson Harmon of Cincinnati by President Cleveland as Attorney General; that week W. O. Bradley was nominated by the Republicans for governor and subsequently elected; J. M. Lassing, a young attorney was appointed assessor for E. M. Gaines; there was an advertisement of the Burlington Hotel, 3rd and Broadway, Cincinnati, Henley W. Smith, Proprietor, formerly of Boone county; the Recorder was having a picnic at the Harvest Home Grounds; there was a hotly contested base ball game between Burlington and Hebron; the Recorder had four pages, all hand set; the Boone County Deposit Bank had a capital of $30,000 and a surplus of $17,000; the county and district officers were as follows:

Assessor, R. A. Brady, Jailer, C. L. Crisler, Surveyor, W. E. Vest, Coroner, Dr. A. A. Murat, School Supt., L. H. Voshell, County Judge, Benj. Stephens, County Atty., J. M. Lassing, County Clerk, J. S. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, C. C. Roberts, Trustee Jury Fund, W. L. Riddell.

These items mean nothing to the present generation. However, those were the times when life was unhurried and people had the time to think and be sociable. Probably, there was even more enjoyment then than now, who knows?

BASE BALL

The weather was ideal for the ball game Sunday, played between Verona and Midway teams. The Midway boys won the game with Billy Moore on the mound and James Ogden behind the bat. One of the best plays was made by Jno. Townsend who made a home run. We were pleased to have so many fans out to see our game. Next Sunday, June 16, the Waterloo team will play at Midway Park. We will be glad to have all attend these games.

CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 8:11-18; II Corinthians 9:6-8.

GOLDEN TEXT—It is required in stewards that a man be found faithful.—I Corinthians 4:2.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Sharing God's Gifts.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Joyous Use of God's Gifts.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Does Stewardship Mean?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Practicing Stewardship Today.

I. Warning Against Forgetting God (Deut. 8:11-18).

God is forgotten.

1. Through plenty (vv. 12, 13). It is always true that in time of prosperity the people forget God.

2. Through pride (vv. 13, 14). The natural tendency of the human heart when visited with abundance is to be lifted up with pride.

3. Through self-confidence (vv. 15-18). The inevitable result of pride is self-confidence. The children of Israel arrogated to themselves the power to get wealth. It is ever so that material prosperity turns the natural heart away from God as the source of blessing.

II. The Sin of Robbing God (Mal. 3:7-12).

One of the sins of Israel which brought upon them the chastising hand of the Lord was that of withholding the tithes. The prophet accuses the people that their bringing into the storehouse their tithes and offerings would be responded to by God in sending them abundance.

III. Talents Are to Be Used for God (Matt. 25:14-30).

1. The distribution of the talents (vv. 14, 15). This distribution was a sovereign act, giving to each one of his own servants his own money.

2. The employment of the talents (vv. 16-18). Two put to use the talents given them, resulting in doubling their value. One hid his talent.

3. The accounting for the talents (vv. 19-30). The Lord later demanded an accounting from each one of the servants. The ones who had been faithful were not only praised but also suffered the loss of the talent given him.

IV. Giving Should Be Systematic (I Cor. 16:2).

This instruction concerning giving is based upon the glorious doctrine of the resurrection of Christ. The one who has come under the power of the resurrection of Christ will be both systematic and liberal in his benevolences. The standard for Christian giving is not the tithe, but "as God hath prospered him."

V. Principles of True Benevolence (II Cor. 8:1-15).

1. Examples of true Christian giving.

a. The source of true giving (v. 1) is said to be the grace of God, which means that the disposition to give freely of one's possessions must be created by the Holy Spirit.

b. They gave from the depths of their poverty (v. 2), and their unstinted gifts thus became richer in meaning.

c. Their willingness surpassed their ability (v. 3). God reckons gifts by the degree of willingness, not by the amount given.

d. They were insistent on being allowed the privilege of giving (v. 4). Christians ought to be taught that giving of their means is a high privilege.

e. They first gave themselves to the Lord (v. 5). The only method of raising money which has God's sanction is a consecrated hand in its own pocket.

2. Emulation in giving urged (II Cor. 8:6-15). Paul used the generosity of the Macedonian church as a means of stimulating liberality with the Corinthians.

a. Not as a command (v. 8). Giving which has God's sanction must be not only spontaneous, but liberal.

b. As a proof of the sincerity of love (v. 8). Love is benevolent action toward the one loved.

c. As the completion of their harmony of Christian character (v. 7). The Corinthian church abounded in spiritual gifts, but needed the grace of liberality for the harmonizing of their lives.

d. Christ an example of self-sacrifice (v. 9). Christ was rich, but for their sakes became poor.

e. Gifts to be acceptable with God must be from a willing mind (vv. 10-12).

f. Every Christian should give something (vv. 13-15).

3. Encouragement to give (II Cor. 9:6, 7).

a. The volume of reaping is based upon the sowing (v. 6).

b. There should be a heart purpose (v. 7).

c. Giving should not be of necessity (v. 7).

d. God loves a cheerful giver (v. 7).

All Are of God

Activities commonly called non-religious—science, art, literature, industry—all come from the same God. Their autonomy must be respected in the sense that there must be no attempt at ecclesiastical control over them.

Life

Life is not made up of great sacrifices, of great duties, but of little things. Smiles and kindness given habitually are what win and preserve the heart.—Sir H. Davy.

DEATHS

MRS. JENNIE OSSMAN

Mrs. Jennie Ossman, age 77, widow of the late George Ossman, died Tuesday evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. M. Jack, Beaver Lick, Boone County, from the effects of a fractured hip, sustained from a fall about two weeks ago.

She was taken to Christ Hospital, Cincinnati, for treatment, but was brought home last Thursday. She received every attention, but owing to her advanced years and the shock of the injury, she lingered until death relieved her suffering.

Mrs. Ossman was born at Big Bone and resided in Boone county all her life. She was united in marriage to George Ossman, and to this union was born Mrs. Daisy Jack, their only child. Mrs. Ossman passed away April 23, 1921, and after his death Mrs. Ossman made her home with her daughter and family. She is also survived by grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

She was a good Christian woman, a devoted member of the Baptist church and had a large circle of friends throughout this section, who will regret to hear of her death. She was a grandmother of Mrs. W. W. Rouse, of Walton.

Funeral services were conducted from Beaver Lick Baptist church Friday 2 p. m., by Bro. Roy Johnson in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends.

Chambers & Grubbs in charge.

OBITUARY

Pamela Stephens, daughter of the late Thomas N. and Louisiana Stephens, was born March 23, 1862, and died June 4, 1935, aged 73 years 2 months and 12 days.

She spent her entire life in the neighborhood where she was born. She was a member of a pioneer family. Her ancestors being among the very first to settle in this part of Boone county.

She is survived by one brother, Solon Stephens of this neighborhood, and niece Mrs. Lou Craig, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., two nephews, Lewis L. and William J. Stephens, of this neighborhood. One brother Sydney J. Stephens, preceded her in death less than one year.

She has gone where "the wicked cease from troubling and the weary shall find rest."

She has passed the sunset of Life, and we have the promise of the dawn of a never ending day.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to thank all of those who assisted in any way in the sickness and death of Miss Pamela Stephens. We thank all who furnished flowers at the funeral. We thank Mr. Scott Chambers for caring for her remains at the funeral home at Walton, and for the efficient manner in which he conducted the funeral.

We especially thank the sisters Mrs. Lillard Scott, Misses Dorothy and Irene Cason and Schuyler Hensley, all of whom came from Belleview to aid in the service, and Brother Raymond Smith for his beautiful talk.

Mrs. Emily Craig.
Mrs. Minnette Stephens.

PAMELLA STEPHENS

Miss Pamela Stephens, age 73 years, of Rabbit Hash, passed away at St. Elizabeth Hospital on Tuesday at noon hour after being a patient there for three weeks. Cause, Lobar Pneumonia. Her body was removed to Chambers & Grubbs home for preparation and laid in state until Thursday. At that time it was conveyed to Rabbit Hash and funeral services were conducted from the Town Hall by Bro. Raymond Smith, assisted by his choir from Belleview in the presence of her relatives, one brother, 2 nephews, 1 niece, Mrs. Charles Craig and her neighbors, after which her remains were laid to rest in the family cemetery on the hill overlooking the Ohio river.

Chambers & Grubbs in charge.

M. LEONARD LAUTRY

M. Leonard Laury, age 37 years, one of independence leading citizens, passed away Thursday morning at 6 a. m., following a stroke of five days' duration. Cause, arterial sclerosis. He leaves his widow Mrs. Estella Stephenson Laury, his mother, 3 sisters to mourn his going.

Funeral services were conducted from St. Cecilia church of which he was a member on Saturday morning at 9 a. m., by Father Quinling, in the presence of an overflowing house of relatives and friends. The floral offering was numerous and beautiful. There were many friends who called at the home while he laid in state.

Chambers & Grubbs were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

GAINES HUEY

Gaines Huey passed away Saturday night at Christ Hospital, Cincinnati, as the result of being kicked in the abdomen by a horse two weeks previous. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lula Edwards Huey, one son, Gaines Edwards Huey, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Huey, one brother Joseph Huey and one sister, Mrs. J. O. Taylor, of Louisville, Ky.

He was Master of Boone Union Lodge F. & A. M.

Funeral services were conducted at his late home in Union Tuesday afternoon at 1:30, after which he was laid to rest in Highland cemetery.

Funeral Director Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

MRS. BELLE PORTWOOD

Mrs. Belle Portwood, aged 74 years, passed away Monday morning at Lakeland, Ky., after a short illness. Undertaker Philip Taliaferro brought the remains to his establishment in Erlanger for preparation. Funeral services were held at the Big Bone Baptist church of which she was a member, on Wednesday morning at 10 a. m., after which she was laid to rest in the near by cemetery.

She is survived by her husband, Ambrose Portwood, six children and a host of friends. The pall-bearers were Owen Presser, Ed. Utz, J. W. Aylor, Jim Arrasmith, Jim Butler, and Nath Clements.

Funeral Director Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

ARCH L. ACRA

Arch L. Acra, aged 73 years, passed away Friday night at St. Elizabeth Hospital, following injuries received by being struck by an automobile several days previous. The remains were brought to the Taliaferro Funeral Home for preparation. Funeral services were conducted at the Methodist church in Burlington Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, by Rev. McNeely, of Patriot, Ind. Interment following in the Belleview cemetery by the side of his wife.

He is survived by four sons, Edgar, Owen, Shelby and Howard, several grandchildren, one brother and a host of friends.

Funeral Director Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

ROBERT J. RALENKOTTER

Robt. J. Ralenkotter, aged 63 years, passed away early Thursday morning at his home No. 315 Garvey Ave., Elsmere, Ky., after a short illness with pneumonia. He is survived by his widow Mrs. Clara Ralenkotter, four boys and two daughters. Funeral was from the Taliaferro Funeral Home at 8:30 a. m., Saturday with requiem high mass at St. Henry's church, Erlanger, at 9 a. m. Interment following in St. Mary's cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to the good neighbors and friends who so kindly helped us during the illness and death of our father, John Geisler. We especially wish to thank Rev. Father Koop for his consoling words, Dr. E. J. Love for his careful attention, and Undertakers Chambers & Grubbs for the fine manner in which they conducted the funeral.

Oliver, Katherine, and Frank Geisler and Mrs. C. S. Prichard.

Mr. and Mrs. Denzil Carpenter, of Cincinnati, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Carpenter.

MY TRIP TO JUNIOR WEEK

I want to tell Boone County 4-H Club boys and girls what a fine trip I had to Junior Week.

Creed Harris and I, winners of the 4-H Farm Practice Demonstration Team Contest, Virginia Reimer and Katherine Jane Casper, of Hebron 4-H club on the Home Practice Demonstration team, Mary Elvina Tupman, girls' show member, Wilford Siekman, Utopia club delegate, Mrs. Robt. Reimer, leader and H. R. Forkner, County Agent left last Monday morning for Junior Week held at the University of Kentucky, Lexington.

Tuesday we put on our demonstration, Wednesday and Thursday mornings, we attended interesting classes on making a living, judging of cattle, hogs and sheep, structure of Kentucky rocks, control of weeds, wild life in Kentucky, spiders and insects.

Thursday afternoon we took a trip around Lexington visiting Idle Hour Race Horse Farm, Henry Clay's Tomb, Veterans Hospital, Narcotic Farm and many other points of interest. Friday all six hundred 4-H boys and girls went to Frankfort where we visited the Capitol and heard the Gov. speak. I got a personal autograph signature from the Governor. We also visited the old Capitol where we saw many interesting things.

The most interesting part of all was the meeting together with six hundred other club boys and girls from all over Kentucky. I want to thank my 4-H leaders and also the Early & Daniel Feed Company of Cincinnati who awarded the splendid scholarship trip I received. I hope a large number of Boone County 4-H club boys and girls will get to attend Junior Week next year.

Thomas V. Hensley, Jr., Member Burlington "Blue Ribbon" 4-H Club.

ACCIDENTAL DEATHS GAIN IN KENTUCKY DURING 1934

Although accidental deaths in Kentucky are fewer than the national average of 79.9 per 100,000 population, figures released by the National Safety Council show an increase of 199 fatalities in the state last year above the 1933 figure.

There were 1,842 accidental deaths in Kentucky in 1934, according to the report, which placed Louisville third lowest with a 46 per 100,000 rating among cities between 150,000 and 500,000 population.

Every state except Rhode Island showed an increase in accident fatalities, the report stated. The national toll of accident victims was 101,000 persons.

CLIFF AFTERKIRK PITCHED A NO-HIT AND NO-RUN GAME SUNDAY

The Florence Merchants, a base ball team composed of Boone county boys played a nine game last Sunday against the strong Vieth's Service Station team at Weston Park, Latonia. This was a remarkable game in that Pitcher Afterkirk, Beaver Lick, pitched a no-hit and no-run game, a thing that seldom happens. The final score was 1 to 0 in favor of the Merchants. Jim, the pitcher for the Station boys allowed 7 hits and struck out 11 men. Afterkirk had 8 strike-outs to his credit.

The Merchants are sponsored by the Florence business men who have recently bought new suits for the boys. Homer Eades is manager of the team. The boys certainly appreciate the interest and financial support of the Florence business men and in return they are going to win the championship of the Northern Kentucky League and they have a good chance to do it. Next Sunday they will play the H. C. Beers Team at Sandfortown, about three miles out of Covington on the old LLL road.

PLEASANT RIDGE

Mrs. Sarah Nell Sleet and children of Carrollton, Ky., were the week-end guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Cleek of this neighborhood.

W.N.U. SERVICE

CHAPTER I.—Matt Kearney, young American living in London, says goodbye to his sister Eileen, on board the steamer Wallaroo bound for Colombo. The Wallaroo is conveying £2,000,000 in gold to Australia. Eileen has a presentiment of coming evil, which affects her brother. On his way home Kearney meets an old friend, Inspector Dawson Haig, of Scotland Yard, who is very much in love with Eileen. Haig is on the trail of opium, which he is convinced is concealed in Jo Lung's warehouse. Called to other duty, Haig delegates Kearney, with Detective Norwick, to visit the place and find out what he can.

CHAPTER II.—They find the place a veritable treasure house, and Kearney recognizes jewels stolen from his aunt. While in the warehouse he picks up a notebook. Soon after leaving Kearney Norwick is murdered. Haig is puzzled over cryptic notes in the book, referring to steps to be taken by the Wallaroo.

CHAPTER III.—Yu'an Hee See, high-born Chinaman, whom Haig has long been seeking as the leader of a band of international thieves, is at Jo Lung's. Discovering the loss of his notebook, he sends two of his followers after Norwick and Kearney, one of whom he realizes must have picked it up. Norwick's murder follows, but Kearney is not overtaken. While Haig is poring over the book, alone in Kearney's rooms, a monstrous creature enters, seizes it, and escapes.

CHAPTER IV.—Kearney's story of hearing horrible laughter while at Jo Lung's satisfies Haig his quarry is in hiding there, he recognizing the peculiar malignancy of Yu'an's laugh.

CHAPTER V.—Eileen Kearney, writing to Haig, tells of a jolly fellow passenger, a clever Austrian, Doctor Oestler. At Cairo Yu'an confers with his lieutenant, Aswami Pasha, known among the gang as the "Chief," over a mysterious coup they are planning. Haig goes to Marseilles, where he meets Eileen when she goes ashore with Doctor Oestler. The inspector boards the Wallaroo, disguised. From radio messages he decodes, he realizes Oestler, with others on board, are members of Yu'an's gang and that they have recognized him.

The half-caste woman known as Miss Ednam, and supposed to be a vaudeville artist, Mr. Len Chow, and Doctor Oestler were the suspects whose names appeared in the Marconi books. Studying a list of telegraphic addresses, which the captain had borrowed from the wireless room, Haig discovered that Mr. Chow's first two messages had been addressed to "Lilting Causeway London."

"Excellent," he murmured. "Lilting Causeway London" was the telegraphic address of Jo Lung's establishment in Limehouse!

The messages themselves were simple enough. They were these:

One: "Arranged to transfer or signed Chow."

"Your friend is on board signed Chow."

"That's clear enough," Haig mused. "He is informing friend Polodes that he has arranged to cancel from Port Said to Sydney and is leaving at the former. He later sends the information that there is a 'friend' on board, meaning Durham, of course. Durham thought he was spotted. He was quite right."

Then, in order of date was an incoming message which read:

"Maurice Paris sixteen to eighteen signed Pascal."

Mr. Len Chow's third message, addressed to "Pascal hotel Maurice Paris" read:

"Your friend leaving us at Marseilles signed Chow."

At which moment came the sound of a loud rap on the cabin door. Dawson Haig hastily adjusted his tinted glasses.

Eileen Kearney stood outside. In a green jumper suit and beret, her cheeks freshened and her eyes brightened by sea breezes, she looked absurdly young and, disturbingly beautiful.

"You positively startled me, Eileen!" he said. "For heaven's sake, cut in quickly. Did anybody see you?"

"No," she said breathlessly. "But I heard some one coming along the main alleyway and had to run!" She stepped inside and closed the door.

"It's good to see you," Haig declared. "But, according to our arrangements at Marseilles, I'm not supposed to know you yet! What's happened?"

"This," Eileen replied, speaking very rapidly: "Last night I was awakened by some one banging at a near-cabin door. I distinctly heard him say, 'Marconi message!'"

"That would be Doctor Oestler's cabin," said Haig. He stooped over his notes, scanning them rapidly until he came to the last of several messages received by Doctor Oestler. "That must have been about half-past three this morning!" he suggested.

"It was. Have you the message there?"

Dawson Haig smiled wryly. "I certainly have it here," he replied. "Shall I read it to you?"

"Yes, please do. Then I can tell you if it's the same."

Haig stared at her in a certain bewilderment, then: "This is it," he said: "Oestler passenger rms Wallaroo lbh keeper searchlight near home stop know tell."

He looked up smiling. "Does that convey anything to you, Eileen?"

"No!" she confessed blankly, watching him. "It isn't the same. Of course, you can't possibly know what I'm talking about, so I must explain. While I was in the bath this morning that sudden squall of wind and rain came. Do you remember?"

Haig nodded. "I had opened the porthole and fastened the door back to freshen the air in my cabin, and Doctor Oestler, whose cabin adjoins mine, must have done the same. Because, when I got back—I returned first—a lot of papers which had been lying loose on my table had been blown right out into the main alleyway."

Dawson Haig was thinking. "I have so little to offer this glorious girl. Yet, if I lose her, life won't be worth a hoot. It seems like Fate that we've been brought together."

"I didn't realize, until I looked through them, that some of the papers didn't belong to me. There were sheets of notes in German, some sort of scientific leaflet, and one or two other odds and ends, which I gave to the stewardess, asking her to find out where they had come from. I suggested, as his door was open, that they probably belonged to Doctor Oestler. I was right, and he sent a message back, thinking me. But, later, when I was dressed, I found another fragment."

She slipped a hand into a pocket of her jumper and produced a half sheet of thin paper. "When I saw this," she continued, and her voice grew very serious, "I thought you ought to know at once."

Haig removed "Mr. Smith's" glasses and took the torn sheet from Eileen's hand. Scribbled in pencil upon the paper were the following words:

"Haig, chief inspector Scotland Yard, on board. Identify and advise."

Alone once more, but unaccountably happy amid his difficulties, Dawson Haig bent over his notes. Eileen had slipped in unnoticed. Sheer luck, and her keen wit, had come to his aid.

Doctor Oestler's penciled scrawl was obviously a translation of the message: "lbh head keeper searchlight near home stop know tell."

Its deadly simplicity betrayed genius. The lbh was elementary the letters being merely those next in the alphabet to HAIG, but the fact that "Head Keeper Searchlight" meant Chief Inspector Scotland Yard, was one which no cryptographer could ever be expected to discover. "Near home" evidently corresponded to On board; "Known" to identify; "Tell" to advise.

It was a system of analogies, and he proceeded to apply it to the other messages, with the result that by lunch time he was satisfied that at least the gist of these was in his possession.

He leaned back in his chair and whistled softly. Five members of this mysterious organization, professedly strangers to one another, were traveling in the Wallaroo, and Doctor Oestler was evidently the chief. Three were booked to Port Said (since Len Chow had arranged to cancel his further passage); two to Australia.

What did their presence in the ship mean? And what was the connection with the Limehouse murder? He was baffled. Perhaps the most alarming feature of the case was the fact that these people seemed to be supplied with deadly accurate information. Durham had been identified, so much was evident. Now they knew that he, Haig, was on board! Since he could not recall having ever seen one of the suspects in his life—Franz Hartog excepted—he inclined to the idea that Durham, as well as himself, had been notified to Doctor Oestler from some well-informed source.

He bent over the messages which he had decoded. Those sent by the woman obviously related to the chief engineer, one of them reading:

"Organ grinder sure stop big boy and next of kin not running" signed Val."

This he had translated as follows:

"Chief engineer captured. Commander and chief officer no good. Val."

That this meant that Corcoran had been bought over and become a party to some crooked deal, Haig did not believe for a moment. He read it to mean that the infatuated engineer was playing into the woman's hands. He was to be used, in some way, without his knowledge.

But—Haig stared up at the porthole and asked the question aloud: "In what way?"

Doctor Oestler's radio correspondence frankly defeated him. He could find no parallel, amongst the ship's company, to the strange names employed. And he had come to the conclusion that it related to something taking place elsewhere. Evidently, Doctor Oestler was a sort of chief of staff; his out-going messages took the form of inquiries as to the whereabouts of certain persons, and the desired replies presumably contained the desired information. Which, however, conveyed nothing at all to Dawson Haig.

These messages were sent to a telegraphic address in Paris which he had no means of tracing.

It was all very maddening, because one fact emerged from all this mystification. This complicated conspiracy had nothing to do with drug running. That enterprise had been merely a side line, abandoned at the first hint of danger.

What, then, did it mean? He thought of that hurried removal of the crates from Birmingham—the crates which almost certainly had been in charge of Mr. Len Chow.

Dawson Haig sat, his head resting upon one upraised hand—for five minutes—for ten minutes—thinking hard—very hard.

How had Jo Lung, or the man of whom Jo Lung was merely a creature, learned of the instructions sent to Sydney? They had been sent from the Yard in code to the chief customs officer.

Haig suddenly stood up. "By heavens!" he whispered. "They can't have known—they can't have known! It was a definite change of plan on the part of the gang. They removed their precious consignment because. . . ? Because of what?"

CHAPTER VI

The night train from Cairo to Asuan, pulled into the station at Kenah. Only two first-class passengers alighted there, a man and a woman, a small, very slender woman.

The woman shivered as they entered a saloon car which awaited them in charge of a Nubian chauffeur and groom.

"You shiver, little one," said Yu'an Hee See.

The woman leaned against him. "I am so cold, Yu'an," she explained.

"In two days you will be in your own apartments—amongst your scents and jewels, and those other toys you love, with service and warmth, and those treasures amid which I delight to see you playing."

He stroked her slender knee with a plump, tapering hand, and his words came as a high croon.

The car passed swiftly, and almost silently, along a street in which were lighted cafes, above them a tawdry gaily glimpsed through open windows.

Where a large mosque grotesquely broke the continuity of these houses, they swung into a narrow side turning. The driver skirted one high wall of the mosque, came into the very shadow of the minaret, and turned left again. Through an unpaved lane running parallel and behind the rowdy street they proceeded, slowly now. Twenty yards along, they pulled up.

The Nubian groom deftly unrolled a length of carpet across the muddy path to a gate which was suddenly opened in an otherwise blank wall. An old Arab, black robed and white turbaned, stood there, holding a lantern high above his head. Its yellow light fell upon a wrinkled face which had earned for its owner the title of Father of Cunning.

Yu'an Hee See and the woman passed across a roughly paved courtyard.

Light shone out from rooms on the ground floor, and there was an outer staircase leading up to a balcony illuminated by two fine lattice windows.

One would have judged, and judged correctly, that this was an old Arab mansion. Around it the sordid life of Kenah had crept, fungus-like, almost concealing, but not defacing the home of some former merchant prince.

Yu'an Hee See and his companion entered a lighted room. On the threshold they were met by Aswami Pasha. He bowed low over the extended hand of Orange Blossom, deeply saluting Yu'an Hee See.

"We have done our best, my lord," he said. "I trust you will be happy here for one night."

He clasped his hands, and an old Arab woman appeared.

"My lady," he bowed to Yu'an Hee See's companion, "your apartment is prepared; Margretha will attend you." Orange Blossom followed the aged attendant from the apartment.

"All are here?" Yu'an asked, upon a very high note, which betokened anxiety.

"All. I have the list showing where each man is tonight."

"Yu'an Hee See waved a plump hand. "I do not wish to see it. Next?"

"The detective from Scotland Yard, who is on the Wallaroo, has been identified. . . . He is in touch with the American girl whom your excellency has taken under your protection!"

Yu'an Hee See began very softly to hiss. "It is almost certain then, that this man had read the notes in my book before. . . . ?"

"I fear so, Excellency." Yu'an Hee See, his eyes apparently quite closed, nodded, slowly.

"Even so," said the Egyptian, "alone he could do nothing." "He has had time to inform others. But he cannot know all. Yet this man it was who followed me to Singapore a year ago. . . . and has escaped me since. . . . The Hangman is on board!" he whispered.

"He is?"

A pause, then: "Instruct Doctor Oestler," said Yu'an Hee See.

Aswami Pasha nodded, comprehendingly; whereupon Yu'an Hee See began to laugh, his red lips seeming to swell, but his teeth never showing; the oblique slits of his eyes turned in the Egyptian's direction.

For five, ten seconds, Aswami sustained the gaze of those eyes which he could not see. Then, his own bold glance faltered—he dropped his dark lashes and turned aside.

The laughter of Yu'an Hee See reached a note so high as to be almost audible. . . .

Dawson Haig sat in the room of Jack Rattray, the chief officer, or rather, he sat at intervals, pacing up and down like a wild animal.

"It's a most unhygienic business," said Rattray, in his slow fashion. "I've been looking on, and I've seen things. First thing: you're spotted! . . ."

"I know—and I can't read Oestler's messages! They're in a perfectly undecipherable code."

"Second thing," Rattray went on: "Two members of this silly gang are watching Eileen; meaning Doctor O. and Mr. Chow. What for? She's not in their way, is she?"

Dawson turned, just inside the cabin door, and stared at the speaker. Then:

"You're right, Jack," he said. "I've seen them myself. I don't like it, and I don't understand it."

"But what's it all about?" Rattray asked helplessly. "What are all these birds doing on board? They're a pretty unsavory crew, in my reckoning, any way. Oestler's plausibility enough, but there's a nasty brute hidden under that amiable smile. As for the 'snake charmer,' she'd drown her own twins. Then there are the two Chinks on D deck. The learned one, with the glasses—the little bloke, I mean, Len Chow—doesn't seem in the Number One list to me. But his long pal with the strangled face ought to be put overboard, if I'm any judge. Then there's the big German. Hartog—he seems harmless enough and not in the same galley at all. I don't know what to make of it."

"And I," said Dawson Haig, continuing his restless pacing, "don't know what to make of my report to the chief. I'm acting on information, Rattray, that this scheme, whatever it is, comes to a head before we reach Aden. And as I don't know what the scheme may be, I can't reasonably expect Scotland Yard to go on granting me leave of absence and paying my expenses indefinitely. You see, I'm supposed to be in charge of the Limehouse murder case!"

"I know," said Rattray, and produced his slow smile. "It's never been clear to me what the passenger list of the Wallaroo had to do with it."

"It isn't clear to me," Haig confessed. "But I know there is a connection. And I know I have my hand on the solution of the mystery if only I can grasp it."

He paced up and down awhile longer, then:

"Do you remember, Jack," he jerked suddenly, "the loss of a big German freighter somewhere off Snakim about two years ago?"

Jack Rattray shook his head.

"I wasn't on this run two years ago. Why?"

"Well, there's no point in telling you why, if you don't remember the case," Haig replied. "But do you recall the wreck of the American steam yacht, Miss Minnesota?"

"Clearly! We were only forty miles off at the time! An aunt of Eileen's—Lady Dakenham—was lost in her. What's the chief idea grilling in your brain now?"

"There are several ideas. But I admit they're a trifle hazy. Did you get an S O S from her?"

"Not a thing."

"Then how do you know you were forty miles off at the time?"

"Ran into bits of wreckage and figured it out."

"Wasn't it funny they didn't send out a call for help?" Dawson Haig asked.

Rattray stared at him. "No," he replied. "In my opinion they hit some small heavily laden craft, and the pair of 'em sank almost at once."

"But surely there would have been a few survivors?"

"Have you ever had a good look at a shark?" said Jack Rattray grimly. Followed a short silence, then Haig asked, "Is there much drug smuggling down that way?"

"Lots! Hashish for Egypt, mostly. Also, the good old slave trade flourishes exceedingly. I'm told the poor devils are driven up from Central Africa! The caravans travel at night, of course, and dig in during the day. They run motorboats across nowadays, high-powered craft developing forty knots. I've seen 'em from the bridge once or twice. They cross on dark lights, as a rule."

"But where can the markets be, Jack?"

"There's Mecca. That's still a closed city. Fez, up in Africa. And I'm told there's a small sort of exclusive market somewhere on the Nile in Egypt."

A rap on the door.

"Come in!" Rattray called. The door opened, and Eileen entered, closing it carefully behind her.

"I've caught them!" she declared, her eyes sparkling with excitement—"at last!"

"What?" Dawson Haig demanded. "I saw the snake charmer slip a note into the hand of Mr. Len Chow as they passed on the promenade deck three minutes ago!"

Unless pruned regularly after they have bloomed, flowering shrubs tend to become unsightly. By removing the old wood gradually, the top will renew and the plant will look better and produce more and better flowers. Size and shape may be regulated by pruning.

WHOSE WORD WILL YOU TAKE FOR BLOWOUT PROTECTION?

LOW wheels, larger tires, and the high speeds of today make blowout protection in your tires vital to your safety as never before. Are you accepting exaggerated and unsupported advertising and sales claims—or are you accepting the judgment of men who risk their lives on their tires and know from experience the tire that gives them the greatest blowout protection?

Thirty-three race drivers and their mechanics lined up for the dangerous, gruelling grind of the 500-Mile Race at the Indianapolis Speedway May 30th. Firestone Tires were purchased and used on every one of the thirty-three cars.

Kelly Petillo won the race at an average speed of 106 miles per hour. Wilbur Shaw was second, flashing across the finish line just behind the winner. Both drivers broke the track record without tire trouble. In fact, not one of the thirty-three drivers had tire trouble of any kind.

Gum-Dipping is one of the outstanding reasons why Firestone Tires give such amazing performance. By this process every cotton cord is soaked and every strand is insulated with pure liquid rubber, preventing internal friction and heat, the main cause of blowouts. Gum-Dipping is a patented extra process not used in any other make of tire.

When you consider that there were 882,000 automobile accidents in the United States last year, and of these, 43,000 were caused by blowouts, punctures, and skidding, you will more fully realize how very important it is for you to protect your life and the lives of others by equipping your car with Firestone Gum-Dipped High Speed Tires—the safest tires built.

It will be worth your time to read these three questions and their answers:

QUESTION 1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

ANSWER—Leading university tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop your car 15% quicker than the best of other popular makes of tires.

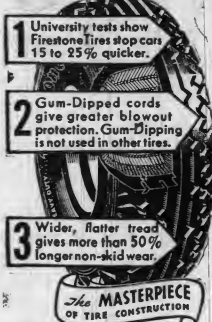

QUESTION 2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"

ANSWER—Unequaled performance records for sixteen consecutive years prove that Gum-Dipping gives you the greatest blowout protection ever known.

QUESTION 3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

ANSWER—Thousands of car owners report unequaled mileage records—evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

Volume—Direct Purchasing—Straight Line Manufacturing and Efficient and Economical System of Distributing to 500 Stores and to 30,000 Dealers, enables Firestone to give greater values at lowest prices

3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear.

What IS a Sound Loan?

A sound loan for a commercial bank is a loan which the borrower believes, and the bank expects, will be paid within a reasonable time—a loan which is not fully repaid at the maturity of the note is substantially reduced by regular periodic installments.

Loans that are regularly reduced enable a bank to accommodate patrons whose needs may be more essential. A bank must have a turn-over of money in the same way that a merchant must have a turn-over of merchandise, with this difference—bank's turn-over affects the credit facilities of the entire community.

The ability and intention to repay a loan by a planned program, and within a reasonable time, is the essence of a good loan. The giving of collateral does not repay a loan. Collateral is merely a pledge to guarantee the borrower's ability and promise to repay the loan within a reasonable time.

Most gardens need an application of well-rotted manure. Commercial fertilizer are desirable, especially if the ground contains plenty of humus. Care is needed, in any event, in the application or commercial fertilizers. To control plant lice, spray with two teaspoonful of nicotine sulfate to a gallon of water, or three eighths of a pint to 50 gallons. Add soap at the rate of an inch cube to the gallon or 2 pounds to 50 gallons. Apply so that insects will be wet, including under-sides of leaves.

CROP REPORT

FOR KENTUCKY AS OF JUNE 1, 1935

Kentucky's crop conditions June 1 indicated a probable production of wheat and rye near the same as in 1934, but the condition of oats in Kentucky June 1 this year was better than that of a year ago and only slightly below the 10-year average, according to the crop report for Kentucky issued by the U. S. Division of Crop and Livestock Estimates thru the Louisville office. Hay condition was good due to ample rains.

Conditions June 1 indicated the probable production in Kentucky of about 4,238,000 bushels of wheat compared to 4,250,000 in 1934, and an annual average of 5,002,000 bu. 1928-32; and about 150,000 bu. of rye compared to 138,000 bu. last year. Final yields, however, may turn out more or less than those forecasts, depending on whether conditions are particularly favorable or unfavorable until these crops are harvested. Condition of Kentucky wheat June 1 was 78 per cent of normal compared to 69 a year ago and a 10-year average 1923-32 of 76 on June 1; while rye condition was 84 compared to 66 a year ago and a 10-year June 1 average of 80. Condition of oats in Kentucky June 1 was 75 per cent compared to only 52 a year ago and a 10-year average 1923-32 of 77; while barley condition was 81 compared to only 63 a year ago and a 10-year average of 78 on June 1. Condition of Kentucky's tame hay June 1 averaged 82 per cent this year timothy and clover hay 82; alfalfa 90; pasture 89; apples 45; peaches 46; and pears 34. The acreage and condition of tobacco, corn and other crops will be reported as of July 1.

HEBRON GARDEN CLUB ENTERTAINS LATONIA CLUB

The Hebron Garden Club entertained the Latonia Garden Club with a garden party at the home of Mrs. Nell Markland Saturday afternoon.

STATE POLICE

MAKES GOOD SHOWING AT END OF FIRST SIX MONTHS

Within the first six months of its existence the State police force supplied impressive evidence to justify its creation, demonstrating that it serves a useful purpose in providing an effective law enforcement agency. It is a snappy looking outfit of high class men.

Within the six months period 116 stolen automobiles were recovered by the officers. Value of the stolen property returned to owners is greater than the expense of maintaining the state police within the period it has been on duty.

Arrests made by the green uniformed officers total 1,371, and resulted in 1,235 convictions. Their presence on the highways has had a good effect, in that it has reduced reckless driving and resulted in drivers of this type being more cautious.

TEN STUDENTS FROM BOONE COUNTY ATTENDING EASTERN

Boone county has ten students in summer school at the Eastern Teachers College this year. They are: Hubert Baker, Kathryn Baker, Mrs. Anna Engle, Mrs. C. V. Lucy, Mary Humphrey, Corrine McCormick, Sadie Rieman, Mrs. Henry Sleet, and James Smith.

PATRONIZE THE P. T. A. ICE CREAM SUPPER. SATURDAY NIGHT

The Burlington public and others in this vicinity are asked not to forget the ice cream supper to be given this coming Saturday night by the local P. T. A. and other patrons of the local schools. The supper is being sponsored by the P. T. A. but the community at large is assisting and interested in its success. The purpose of the supper is to raise funds in order to have work done on the Burlington school grounds. A number of committees have been appointed to attend to the various details in connection with the occasion and the supper no doubt will be a huge success. In addition to ice cream, candy, cakes and lemonade, the ladies will also serve fried fish.

The serving will begin at 5:30 P. M., and the location will be on the croquet grounds. The public should patronize so worthy a cause.

Robert Clure returned to his position at the Covington Gas & Electric Shop Monday after a two week's vacation.

STATE

PARK SYSTEM HAS BEEN VERY GREATLY IMPROVED

"More has been done in the last two years to establish a park system in the state than in all prior years," is the opinion expressed by State Inspector Nat B. Sewell in a report on the division of state parks submitted to Governor Ruby Laffoon.

"Through co-operation between the Federal Park service, and the state park service, under direction of Mrs. Emma Guy Cromwell, Superintendent, the state park system has now reached a definite stage of development, that will permit and demands systematic promotion throughout the country of the attractions offered by the various parks," is the comment of Mr. Sewell.

The combined area of the twelve parks, he reported, is 5,613 acres. The amount appropriated by the State for development of the parks since their establishment during the last ten years was listed at $31,500. In addition, approximately $100,000 has been received from admissions and miscellaneous collections, and since November 1, 1933, the Federal Government has spent $330,049.78 for improving and beautifying seven of the parks.

C. L. CROPPER CHOSEN AS CAMPAIGN CHAIRMAN FOR THOMAS S. RHEA

The Rhea Headquarters have announced that Carroll L. Cropper has been selected campaign chairman for Boone County. Mr. Cropper is at present representative of Boone County in the General Assembly. Mr. Cropper stated that he would gladly accept the appointment offered to him by Mr. Rhea since they were close, personal friends.

SOPHIA LLOYD MEMORIAL SOCIETY TO MEET THURSDAY, JUNE 20

The Sophia Webster Lloyd Memorial Society will meet at 1 P. M., Thursday, June 20th, at the home of Mrs. Fannie Clutterbuck, Chairman of Quilts. Having completed the three quilts ordered by Prof. John Uri Lloyd for his family, our next regular meeting will be held Saturday, July 6, on the lawn of the Lloyd Home, Shelby street. It will be an out of door "Quilting Party" and covered dish luncheon. Business session at 2 P. M. The Lloyd Homestead will be under repairs and within a short time it will be the home of the Sophia Webster Lloyd Memorial Society. We are looking forward to Old Schoolmates Day, first Saturday in September—the 7th. Markers are to be placed by the Society on the Old Schoolhouse and the Lloyd Home that day.

Mrs. R. L. Pearson, President of the Society.

LEAVES FOR ANN ARBOR

George Miller, Jr., youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Miller, Dixie Highway Florence, will leave Thursday for Ann Arbor, Michigan, where he will resume his studies at the University of Michigan. Mr. Miller will spend eight weeks in Ann Arbor and the remaining three weeks of his vacation in New York City. He will return home early in September to his teaching position in the John G. Carlisle Junior High School, Covington.

Little Jimmie Wonderly, of Florence, is visiting at the Maurer home this week.

MALARIA

IS BIG PROBLEM IN DEVELOPING T. V. A.

No vision of cheap power is as important to the south as the Government intends to make of the Tennessee Valley. But President Roosevelt wasn't the first to see the value of this great inland waterway. Nearly a hundred and fifty years ago men like Boone and Crockett saw its hundreds of miles of navigable water, its legends, and swamps.

To get to its headwaters had almost killed them. Thousands that came after died of disease, or were killed by the Indians. But they were brave men, filled with a dream of empire, and the river was the easiest way to get there.

Today it isn't. Planes, the railway, and the motor car have killed the river as a means of transport, but it rolls on just the same, harnessed now, not for traffic, but for power. Times have changed, but some things haven't changed much.

The Tennessee Valley Authority has a three-fold light on its hands. One is Wall Street, which it seems to have locked. Another is the river itself, which it is in the process of taming. But the third is just the same thing that made the pioneers' teeth chatter—malaria, which hasn't changed at all. It still saps the energy of men and brings the creeping misery to women and children.

But if malaria is the same old misery, the ways of fighting it have changed a lot. The pioneers never heard of quinine for it wasn't discovered until years after. But the Government Health Service knows all about quinine and the T. V. A. doctors won't let cheap power be killed by mosquito bites and malaria.

The Government will win that fight too and so can we. All we need to do the moment we feel the chill and fever is to start taking quinine and keep it up until the spell has passed. Nothing else is as sure and cheap.

JERSEY CATTLE WILL PARADE AT FAIR

Fair Directors Are Adding New Features to Enlist Interest and Improvement in Cattle Industry.

The Dearborn County Fair promises this year to surpass all previous efforts—in reality to prove the biggest and best yet held in Lawrenceburg—for many, many years in the front line of popular County Fairs. There will be four big full days as usual with attractions galore, and premium lists that will induce lively competition.

A class of livestock feature that should hold deep interest among farmers and dairymen is the Jersey Cattle show just announced by the Fair Board. This exhibit is in part experimental to determine whether or not the public want this type of exhibit, but more particularly to prove the attitude and interest of the cattle breeders and owners of the vicinity in advertising to the world the qualities and virtues of our livestock. This type of cattle was selected because of the prevalence of Jerseys in this section. Jersey breeders are cordially invited to cooperate with the Fair Board in making this first exhibit representative of the fine Jersey herds of Dearborn and adjacent counties.

FLORENCE BAPTIST CHURCH CIRCLES HOLD DELIGHTFUL MEETING

The Florence W. M. U. and Ladies Aid of the Baptist church spent a most delightful day at the lovely country home of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Tanner and Mrs. Beemon, on June 13. There were forty-five present and that fine family certainly knows how to entertain. The dinner prepared by them consisting of fried chicken and baked country ham was delicious. The program topic was "Lifting the Banner in the Land of the Southern Cross." We appreciated the song service sung so heartily by our workers in other churches, and the special by Mrs. Tom McHenry and Mrs. D. I. Tanner. The Ann Judsons were in charge.

The next meeting will be July 25 instead of the regular day, at which time the group meeting will be held in Bellevue on July 18. The Circles will meet on the 11 as usual, and the invite everybody to attend the meeting held by Sam P. Martin. The next meeting of the W. M. U. will be all day at the home of Mrs. Lewis Stephens, assisted by Mrs. Harry Taylor. Remember the date July 25.

FUNCTIONS

OF WORK PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION ARE EXPLAINED BY KENTUCKY ADMINISTRATOR

Louisville, Ky., June 17.—George H. Goodman, Kentucky Works Progress Administrator, today outlined, in a general way, the functions of the Works Progress Administration and its relationship to the State, once the program is started. While Mr. Goodman made it plain he was not familiar with all of the details from Washington he said:

"The President has definitely declared that the primary objective of the new Work Relief Act is to put to work three and a half million people now on relief rolls throughout the country, on the basis of a National, useful, work program.

"The machinery of the Works Progress Administration soon will be established in Kentucky. It will be simple and yet based on the notion that the success of the Work Relief Program depends upon speed and efficiency.

"All applications for projects will be filed with the local representative of the Works Progress Administration. This type of work relief projects includes projects to be carried on as Federal projects, and also projects of States, municipalities, agencies thereof or other public bodies for which only a grant of Federal funds is to be made.

"Those representatives will be available in the state in the near future to plan with local public officials and citizens projects which will give useful work to the newly unemployed.

"Applications for such projects, when filed with the local Representative, will be forwarded to Washington through the State Works Progress Administrator. The applications will be made on appropriate forms which will be available at the local office.

"Allotment of funds will be made by the President for the Works Program to be conducted by the Works Progress Administration. The State Works Progress Administrator will be advised, from time to time, as to the specific work projects which have been thus approved, and for which allotments of funds have been made.

CHANDLER FORCES SELECT A WALTON MAN FOR COUNTY CHAIRMAN

It has just been announced that the A. B. Chandler forces have selected Leonard Cook, of Walton, Ky., as campaign chairman for Boone County. Mr. Cook was a former member of the General Assembly.

MR. AND MRS. GEO. B. MILLER SURPRISED BY RELATIVES AND FRIENDS

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. B. Miller were surprised at their beautiful country home, Sunday, June 16, at twelve o'clock noon by their immediate family and relatives. The occasion being in honor of Mr. Miller's birthday. Those who attended were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, Poer and daughters, Betty and Martha Annie, Mr. and Mrs. Woodford R. Miller and son, Mr. and Mrs. Karl H. Keim and daughter, Janet, Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Aylor, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Miller Graham, Geo. B. Miller, Jr. Sara V. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Eades, Dorothy H. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. H. Baker, and daughter, Miss Williamette Baker, of Ft. Thomas. Mr. Wm. Black, of Bellevue, Ky.

An elaborate basket dinner was served on the spacious lawn of the Miller home.

FLORENCE M. E. MISSIONARY-AUXILIARY HOLDS MEETING

The Florence M. E. Missionary Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. Mary Carpenter, June 12 at 2 P. M. The meeting opened with song, "Work for the Night is Coming." The devotional was given by Mrs. Cecil Tanner. The program followed in charge of Mrs. Bauer, Mrs. Ocherman, and Mrs. Claude Tanner on "Missionary Women." Prayer was then offered by Mrs. Cecil Tanner. Mrs. Ocherman then gave a splendid report on the Annual Missionary Conference. The Business Session followed during which time Mrs. McKibben was elected vice president, the bulletin was sketched by Mrs. Claud Tanner and a report on the Treasure Hunt by Mrs. Ocherman. The meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. Ocherman to meet again, July 10, with Mrs. Ben Stephens.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Fowler and daughter Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Fowler and Miss Mayme Hawes, took a trip touring the State of Indiana, Sunday.

WOMAN HELD UP BY TWO ROBBERS NEAR AURORA FERRY

Mrs. Maggie Bevis, living near Florence claims she was held up by two robbers Sunday morning and robbed of ten dollars which she was carrying in her purse. After the hold-up the robbers fled.

Mrs. Bevis states that she had gone to Aurora, Ind., to visit a brother and returned early Sunday morning. She was walking from the Ferry through a woods to visit another brother who lives near the home of Lee Snyder. As she was passing through a small woods about one mile from the main highway she was accosted by two men one of whom carried a pistol. Mrs. Bevis ran but was overtaken by the men. They took her purse which contained according to Mrs. Bevis about $10. The men then fled while Mrs. Bevis went to the home of Mr. Snyder and called the Sheriff's office from that point.

Sheriff Cotton and Deputy Walton went to the scene of the robbery at once but could not locate the men nor have they any clues as yet of their whereabouts.

6,158 INMATES

HAVE BEEN PAROLED FROM TWO STATE PRISONS SINCE JAN. 1, 1932.

Of the 6,158 inmates of the two state prisons who have been paroled between Jan. 1, 1932 and May 15, 1935, records reveal that 5,495 have conducted themselves as law-abiding citizens, while 663 have been charged with parole violation, either through commission or new felonies, or as result of violation of terms of the parole, according to B. T. Brewer, Secretary of the Department of Public Welfare.

"In other words," said Mr. Brewer, 89.3 per cent of the prisoners paroled during the administration of Gov. Laffoon have made good on parole, which is a very creditable showing, and compares well with parole records in any state."

The parole laws of Kentucky provide that prisoners become eligible for parole as follows:

Sentences of 10 years or less—At the expiration of 1/2 of the sentence imposed by the Court.

Sentences of more than 10 years, but not more than 21 years—At the expiration of 6 years.

Sentences of more than 21 years, including life sentences—At the expiration of 8 years.

Parole eligibility is calculated upon flat or calendar time, without credit for good behavior. Reductions of sentences provided by law for good conduct on final discharge only.

HELPING HAND CLASS ENTERTAINED BY MRS. JEROME RESSESS

The members of the Helping Hand Class were delightfully entertained on June 11 by Mrs. Jerome Resseps at her lovely home on Dixie Highway. A very delicious dinner was served at noon.

The day was spent in sewing for Home Missionary work. Miss Helen Taylor added greatly to a happy day by giving several very impressive readings. Many thanks to Helen. A very happy time was had and all surely appreciated Mrs. Resseps' interest in the Bible class.

Those present were: Mrs. James Morgan, Mrs. Naomi Dixon, Mrs. Clint Blankenbaker, Mrs. Willa Yealey, Mrs. Grace Wilson, Mrs. Perry Allen, Mrs. Virginia Goodridge, Mrs. Sidney Taylor, Mrs. Kit McHenry, Mrs. Minnie Bradford, Mrs. Clara Ewing and Joe Berkshire. Misses Helen Taylor, Virginia Parsans, Jennie Retshulte, little Mae Campbell and the hostess.

CRUSHER EMPLOYED FOR K. R. C. LIME PROGRAM

Mr. R. W. Auton, of Demossville, R. D. 1, has been employed to crush stone for the Boone county farmers under the K. R. C. lime program according to Joel Gray, president of the Boone County Soil Improvement Association.

Mr. Auton owns his own lime crushing outfit and is reported to be the operator of one of the best crushing outfits in Northern Kentucky. He is expected to begin work about July 25th.

DEAL MADE

THIS WEEK FOR THE FLORENCE FAIRGROUNDS

Information has just been received that the Florence Fair Grounds, located in Florence, Ky. has been sold to E. H. Smith, Corinth, Ky. The purchase price was given as $15,000.00. The property was owned by the North Kentucky Fair Association, a local organization, with C. F. Blankenbaker as president, and Hubert Conner as secretary. George B. Miller, restaurant owner of Florence, made the deal.

Possession will be given about July 1. It was stated that the parties who purchased the property will build a first class hotel on the location and will also erect about twenty modern equipped cabins. The location of the property for such a purpose is ideal since it is located at the junction of State Routes 25 and 42.

The Florence Fair which was strictly an agricultural project was held at this location for about 38 consecutive years and was favorably known for miles around. It was discontinued three or four years ago owing to unfavorable conditions brought about by the depression.

Mrs. J. W. Kelly was shopping in Covington Tuesday.

GET BACK TO WORK

The great government relief program is in motion, backed by appointees of the President who have in charge the spending of billions for work and relief. For three years the public treasury has answered the calls for help from the distressed masses. Each time it has been said that "this is temporary until private employment can take care of the unemployed."

Well, statistical reports show gains in our national industries. Things are better. Meanwhile, idleness has become a habit with many who have secured relief. Local communities and officials have shut their eyes to these conditions. The time has come to help your unemployed neighbor get back to work and for the unemployed person to hustle for a job. Factory whistles are blowing and everything is "rarin' to go."

Now we can snap out of it, and by doing so, end the depression. Let everybody try to do.

SUMMER TOURISTS

Gasoline companies report a demand for road maps and touring information 20 to 40 per cent greater than normal for this time of year. Automobile clubs are receiving many inquiries. Perhaps there is no way of telling, short of questioning patrons, whether this indicates a new vacation urge based on an improved personal financial condition, or whether touring is the method chosen by many Americans to get their money's worth of travel before inflation, just in case there should be any.

But whatever the immediate cause of so many more persons turning to the highways this summer, most of the effects are likely to be good. The only bad effect is the possibility of more accidents; but if motorists and pedestrians really put their minds on avoiding this peril, they can do so. The good effects include all the usual benefits of travel to the open-minded intelligent traveler. They enable citizens of any section of the country to get acquainted with those of other sections. And they include the purely material benefit of stimulated consumption of gas, oil, tires, clothes, food, souvenirs and rest.

MORE RURAL ROADS

With all the road building that is being done in the United States scarcely any farmer should be overlooked. The grass-roots of civilization have always been found in the isolated outposts and a great rural highway system is in view through the program led by Tide Water and other great oil companies to insure the spending of all gas tax money for public roads only. Now the possibility that we may have all the year round roads at figures suitable to the fancies of sparsely settled communities seems to be in sight; at any rate the great oil companies in the country are concentrating in unity in support of such a program," says the Evening Journal, of Washington, Iowa, and the editor of that paper traced the advantages that follow with the laying out of new roads. He says: "If we build roads we have to patronize the cement man, the oil men, the laborer. If we build houses we have to patronize the lumber magnate, the steel man, the plaster maker, the contractor, the laborer."

Following the line of reasoning to its logical conclusion the Journal adds: "It is the consensus now that general good roads are not only a great comfort, a great blessing, a great convenience, but that they are also a dividend paying investment. It is possible now to make scientific estimates that will indicate just how expensive bad roads are and how economical good roads are."

The National Administration and Congress are backing highways. All legislation that calls for specific public expenditures on rural roads will be advanced if the public talks strong enough on the subject to his, or her, representatives in the legislative branches of government.

Editorial of the Week

DID YOU KNOW THAT?
(Owen County Democrat)

Did you know that a well kept farm is a paying investment now days if the proper program is carried out? It is true that it will take much thought, labor and horse sense.

You know whether you are farming with a good program, you know whether you have the proper crop rotations and whether or not your land is properly and thorly cultivated. You know whether you have the proper feed lots, feed barns and sheds for your sheep, calves, hogs, cows and feeder lambs.

You know whether you crowd your work or whether your work crowds you. If you do not know the above things take a few days off and thorly think them over.

Visit some farms you know to be owned by successful farmers. Visit schools of agriculture, take good farm journals and study your game.

Billions of dollars are to be spent in this country in the next two years, get ready to get yours.

No man is farther from market than the one who has nothing to sell.

We need more farm improvements in this section, more fences, more meadows, more pools of water, more cisterns and more feed lots.

Thos. A. Edison loved his work so much that he would forget to go to bed, his wife would have to remind him that he had not eaten or slept. His success was the talk and wonder of nations.

Looking ahead we find that we make our success and that life is what we make it.

THE LITTLE COUNTRY PAPER

When the even' shades is fallin' at the endin' o' the day,
An' a feller rests from labor smokin' at his pipe o' clay,
There's nothing does him so much good, be fortune up or down,
As the little country paper from his O' Home Town.

It ain't a thing of beauty and its print ain't always clean,
But it straightens out his temper when a feller's feeling mean,
It takes the wrinkles off his face and brushes off the frown,
That little country paper from his O' Home Town.

Now, I like to read the dailies an' the story papers, too,
And at times the yaller novels, and some other trash—don't you?
But when I want some reading that'll brush away a frown
I want that little paper from my O' Home Town.

Washington.—Growing conviction here that Herbert Hoover is really an active candidate for the Republican nomination against President Roosevelt next year is the biggest comfort the New Dealers get out of the Supreme court decision. It is the silver lining to the constitutional cloud that put the New Deal in the shadow.

That the Republicans would actually nominate Hoover is too much, friends of President Roosevelt say privately, to hope for. But the mere candidacy of Mr. Hoover at the convention would produce a feeling of bitterness comparable to that which distressed the Democrats after Madison Square garden. It would lack the religious element, and even the prohibition element, but it would be pretty bad, they think, and with fair logic.

All this is based, of course, on two factors, either of which may change. One is that at present it appears likely the issue of the next campaign will be rugged individualism versus government control of wages, hours and trade practices, and planned economy to prevent overproduction, etc. Or, as the New Dealers prefer to state it, the New Deal versus the old law of tooth and claw.

The ideal candidate of the Republicans on such an issue would have been Calvin Coolidge. But Coolidge is dead. Mr. Hoover's views as to government, business, and every point involved fit him ideally, almost, for the leadership of the opposition to Roosevelt. Also, as the last Republican President, he is the titular leader of his party.

But when that has been said for Hoover, everything has been said, in the opinion of the New Dealers. His weakness, as they see it, is that he is branded in the eyes of the country not only as a failure, but as unlucky. And the last is almost worse than the first.

It pleases the Roosevelt supporters to recall that it was during Hoover's administration that the public lost so much money and that so many lost their jobs. They point to the succession of events that led deeper into the depression and call them a succession of Hoover mistakes.

Material Scarce

Students of mass psychology insist that once the public mind is frozen about a man it is next to impossible to thaw that conviction out. It just sticks there. For example, William Jennings Bryan. The truth is he had a fairly good chance of being elected President the first time he ran. Only the most adroitly managed campaign in history, plus an enormous campaign fund, plus intelligent and ruthless co-operation with Republicans by employers of labor, defeated him.

Yet for some curious reason Bryan was stamped as a failure in the sight of the country. His campaigns after that time were just jokes. As one of the Tammany orators said at Baltimore, in 1912, "For God's sake, Mr. Bryan, get out of the way and give the Democrats a chance."

The other factor that seems to point to Mr. Hoover is the scarcity of other available Republicans. One thinks quickly of Representative—former Senator—Wadsworth, of New York. But the forces opposed to him for one reason or another are still very strong in New York state. Notably the old woman suffrage crowd, and the more rabid of the prohibitionists. So that many experts doubt if he could carry his own state—a situation which has nothing to do whatever with present issues.

A canvass of all the talked about Republicans shows none with any real strength, all of which contributes to the theory that Hoover can bring about his renomination if he wants it.

Watch Business

Business is to have a ten-months' trial period of rugged individualism. Meanwhile it will be checked by an army of investigators—the survivors of NRA employees. Under the directing and highly suspicious eye of President Roosevelt, fact finding as to chiselers, overworked and underpaid labor, and kindred evils will proceed.

Then will come the decision. If the experiment succeeds—if business does not oppress employees, if prosperity goes forward, if the country seems to like operating without NRA codes—the whole New Deal program for government direction of business in the interest of the public at large, planned economy and all the rest of it will go out the window.

If the experiment fails—and Mr. Roosevelt believes it will fail—there will be right on the eve of the Presidential election, a New Deal program to supplant the law of the tooth and claw.

The probability is that it will take the form of a proposed constitutional amendment, one which would give the federal government control of over hours and wages, also trade practices—on the theory that what happens in Bangor affects the children's school lunches in San Diego.

Menace of Strikes

Meanwhile, with the Wagner labor disputes bill pushed through Congress—not until after the Supreme court decision did the President announce his approval of this measure—industry will find itself, as it sees the situation, with the most provocative status for strikes for many a year.

Warning that "no false hopes" should be entertained by the country as to working conditions is a significant guide to the President's attitude. He wants the investigations of the corps of NRA employees reinforced by an army of self-appointed scrutineers. He is preparing the public mind for a change in the Constitution to give the federal government the powers necessary to make effective his New Deal policies: higher wages, shorter hours, no big profits, all aimed not only at better living standards for the lower strata but at increased buying power; and planned economy under government control aimed at preventing overproduction.

Roosevelt's understatement of the probable effects of requiring former code conditions on the part of all having government contracts had two objectives—one to provide a constant contrast between what the codes would do if they were in legal effect, the other to prevent these same "false hopes."

Experts believe 1 per cent—the figure used by the President as the dollar volume of government contracts to total production—far, understates the actual effect on employees. Amendments are being drafted to the bill to provide that no one can get a government contract who buys any of the materials used from a concern not complying with former code standards.

Incidentally the government will be in a stronger position in enforcing these "code" requirements from government contractors than was NRA even at the height of its power. For this time there will be law behind them, so that the contractor general will not be able—lawyers agree—to overrule contracts on the ground that the specifications were not broad enough; or that the contract was not awarded to the lowest bidder. As in the automobile cases.

Dill Comments

That President Roosevelt missed the boat as far as accomplishing his New Deal reforms, when he did not press for a constitutional amendment in the spring of 1933, is the interesting comment on the present case of Dill in Washington by Ex-Senator Dill, of Washington.

Regarded as an advanced if not extreme radical, Dill—who was one of the outstanding "For Roosevelt Before Chicago" leaders, voted against NIRA when it passed the senate. Later he began to have misgivings as to whether he had made a mistake, because he saw a number of advantages which grew out of it. But, he contends, it should have been allowed to die some time back, having served its purpose.

Now, the former senator declares, if a constitutional amendment were to be submitted granting the federal government the power to regulate minimum wages, maximum hours, and fair trade practices sought under the code system, he would take the stump against ratification of such an amendment.

All of which is significant in connection with a former dispatch in which opposition to such a constitutional change in Massachusetts, Maine, Vermont, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and Georgia was outlined.

The truth is it is very difficult to pass any constitutional amendment over which there is a real, nationwide battle. Most people do not consider this coldly, because several constitutional amendments have been passed in the last few years without too much trouble.

Amendment Fights

But let's take a look at those fights. For instance, the first battle to put over the Eighteenth amendment. That should have been a real war. But it wasn't. The fact is that the wets just regarded the whole thing as a joke until enough states had ratified to make any remaining fight futile. Even then the stupid wets did not fight. They began assuming that the Supreme court would knock it out! Which sounds crazy now, but anyone in contact with the developments at that time, either in New York or Washington, will remember its accuracy.

Then the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. Every thinking politician concedes that a real fight made by the dries might have held 13 states against it, despite the then popularity of repeal, and the influence of President Roosevelt at the height of his power. This may be disputed, but the fact that outside the two Carolinas no real fight was made to stop repeal cannot be.

The woman suffrage amendment is often mentioned. True, there was some very sharp opposition to it. But this opposition came from a very small minority, and most people who actually did not like the idea contented themselves with private conversation. There was very little violent opposition, even from the minority opposed. Whereas the militant minority in favor was aggressive and persistent.

On the other hand, the issue that would be raised by an attempt to change the Constitution so as to give the federal government the powers President Roosevelt would like—the powers that the nine jurists on the Supreme court held it lacked at present—would provoke a bitter battle in every state in the Union. No state would ratify virtually, by default, as Maryland did the Eighteenth amendment, though actually it was so strongly opposed to prohibition that it would never pass a state enforcement law.

Roosevelt counts very heavily on the nation-wide organization, with units in every country, which Jim Farley has built. But the tremendous response to Senator Borah's radio talk a few nights ago shows that no fight to enlarge federal powers at this time would be a push-over.

FORTY YEARS AGO

From the Files of The Boone County Recorder

(ISS: E OF JUNE 19, 1895)

(ISSUE OF JUNE 19, 1895)

There will be a meeting of the Boone County Democratic Committee Monday July 1, 1895, at Burlington, Ky., to determine the manner of nominating a candidate for County Clerk for this county. It is hoped a full attendance will be present. All the candidates for County Clerk are requested to be present.

J. B. Berksnre, Chm'n.

It is getting very dusty.

J. J. Lillard reports a very fine crop of oats.

The weather has been very favorable for weed killing.

There will be two games of ball at Burlington Park July 4.

The Misses Furlongs are adding a large cistern to their premises.

Miss Laura Martin will have ice cream for sale next Saturday evening.

Many fields of wheat in this county will not be worth cutting, and the meadows indicate a short supply of hay.

Sidney Gaines put in a few days of the heated term remodeling some of the fencing on the premises he occupies.

The voters in the territory in which it was proposed to organize the Petersburg graded school, defeated the proposition at the polls.

It will require frequent rains to enable the ground to retain moisture sufficient to make good crops this year it having been good so long since the ground was thoroughly wet.

A bus commenced running last Saturday between Erlanger and Covington, leaving Riggs Bros. station at 8 a. m., returning at 11 a. m. It also makes a trip down in the afternoon. The trip down in the afternoon will be made in 45 minutes for 40 cents round trip. The conveyance will be a nice one and the team safe. It will be quite a convenience for the travel from this county.

James Pace, of Indianapolis, is visiting his sister, Mrs. W. L. Ridgell.

W. C. Brown and wife attended the circus at Lawrenceburg, last Thursday.

W. E. Rouse, the old reliable live stock trader, of Florence, passed through town early Monday morning, evidently to collect stock he had purchased.

Mr. Edward Gaines, of the Woolper Heights, who was a guest of his son Atty. Sidney Gaines, last Friday night, made the Recorder a pleasant call Saturday morning.

James M. and Geo. Barlow, of Pleasant Valley, called at this office Saturday.

Joe Reed came down from Walton last Saturday at noon and remained over until Monday morning. His friends were glad to see him looking so well and hear him say he is getting all the work he can do.

G. C. Graddy, of Bullittsville, was in town Saturday. A few days before a valuable horse belonging to him tore a plank off the fence to which it was hitched and in running so injured itself as to necessitate it being killed.

Our young friends, Owen Blankenbaker, was in town early Monday morning on a most important mission, the securing of a marriage license, and today at 2 p. m., he and Miss Pearl McAtee will be united in marriage.

W. E. Rouse received about fifty lambs from Geo. Bythe and G. T. Gaines each Monday. They claim they were the toppest lambs in the neighborhood.

Geo. Bythe has killed two large spreading adders in the last few days. These dangerous reptiles are becoming numerous in this county.

Uttinger

Pink Rice has invented a derrick for stacking hay. It will hoist it as fast as two men can stack.

The wheat crop will be the sorriest raised in this county for many years.

It is a settled fact that the Hon. John S. Gaunt will be a candidate for Circuit Judge in this district.

Jack Berksnre had a box seat at the big circus.

Union

The Teachers' Institute will be held in Union again this year.

Rabbit Hash

T. C. S. Ryle has returned from Illinois where he went to visit his sick daughter Mrs. Scott, who is getting well again.

Verona

The Verona Grays and the Walton combination, ball teams, crossed bats last Sunday afternoon, the score being 46 to 21 in favor of Verona.

J. G. Tomlin is adding to the appearance of his residence on the old Vest farm, by giving it a coat of fresh paint.

A good rain would be very acceptable at present, as stock water is becoming scarce and crops are suffering for want of rain.

Bellevue

Miss Etta Moody visited friends in Rising Sun last Saturday.

J. J. Huey and Robt. Clore and families, spent last Sunday with friends in Burlington.

If you want to see two of the best natured fellows on earth, come down and see Pete Clore and Dump Marshall.

Hathaway

Cut worms and grass hoppers are destroying nearly all of the tobacco that has been set.

Limaburg

W. M. Gaines was on the road with his force of hands spreading metal, last week.

Mrs. Charles Youell, who has been very ill, is improving.

Florence

Born to H. C. Collins and wife, a boy.

Hardin has the advantage of Clay in the instructed votes. Hardin—273—Clay 241. Uninstructed—113.

THE GARDEN

TIMELY TOPICS

(By John S. Gardner, Ky. College of Agriculture)

LATE CABBAGE—Any time, now, seed should be sown for the late cabbage crop. Although plants may be grown in a seedling bed, and set when they have made 4 or 5 true leaves, it is safer to sow the seed in the final row in the garden, dropping the seed in twos or threes, and thin to a plant at a place. If there is a "season," the extra plants may be set. It should be remembered that, no matter what its season, cabbage needs high fertility, and if the late cabbage follows an earlier crop, manure should be spaded under, or high-grade fertilizer chopped in with a hoe.

Although Drumhead and Late Flat Dutch are both good varieties to use, some gardeners object to their size; these should try Houser. Houser has the advantage, too, of being more sure to make firm heads in the event the late summer is dry. In this, Flat Dutch and Drumhead sometimes fail. Also, Houser is quite as capable of storing as the others.

Cabbage worms are, if anything, more troublesome on late cabbage than they were on the early crop. This is so because they have had opportunity to multiply, on old cabbage stubs and on the ragged leaves of the early greens. It would seem to be the proper thing to do, to clean up crop remnants as one goes along, rather than let the breeding of insects go on rampant.

LATE TOMATOES—It still is not too late to start tomatoes with which to close the season. An excellent plan is to sow the seed in groups, in rows of beans just past their prime, a trowl-full of earth and bean plants removed every 4 feet. The strongest seedling should be left. Marglobe should be used if tomato wilt is at all suspected; Greater Baltimore, if the soil is free of this trouble.

BEANS—The schedule of planting beans every two weeks should continue, but the row-length should be doubled through the months of June and July, so that there will be excess for canning. Although it has been necessary, up to now, to use early sorts, change may now be made to Refugee or Thousand-to-one. As its name implies, this is a most prolific variety, whose special season is in midsummer and early fall. Its few strings some gardeners consider an objection but its heavy yield commends it, nevertheless. An important additional item is that Refugee seed is lower in price than the others.

SUMMER LETTUCE—Those gardeners who wish to have lettuce after the ordinary sorts have become acrid in flavor and bolted to seed, could try Cos lettuce or Deer Tongue. Plants raised in a seedling bed may be reset, or the seed may be sown sparsely in drills and the plants thinned to a stand of eight inches, there to provide palatable lettuce all summer. Trianon is the variety.

TOMATO PRUNING—The early stalked tomato should be kept rigorously pruned, each sucker removed just as soon as it starts. The plants should be headed above the fifth cluster. Anticipating their removal as soon as they have borne their crop, two "hills" of bush lima beans may be started between each two tomatoes. The limas will not need the space until after it is time to remove the tomatoes. Any one of Fordhook Bush, Henderson Bush, or Carolina Sieve may be used. Two plants constitute a "hill."

CHRISTIAN MISSIONS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 1:6-8; 13:1-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.—Mark 16:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Sharing the Good News of Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Goes Preaching.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Can I Do for Missions?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Missionary Purpose of the Church.

God is, in his essential being, merciful and compassionate. All his promises to and actions toward man have been with redemptive ends.

1. Israel a Missionary Nation.
Following the apostasy of the whole race, God called Abraham to become the head of a race through whom all the nations of the earth were to be blessed (Gen. 12:1-3). The first gospel promise, that of Genesis 3:15, was to become an actuality through the missionary activities of the Jewish people.

1. The nations of the earth invited to look to God (Isa. 55:22). Israel was called to be the peculiar witness to the nations of Jehovah, the one God (Deut. 8:4).

2. Christ given as a light to the nations (Isa. 49:6). Christ is the way, the truth, and the life (John 14:6). Christ is the light of the world (John 8:12).

3. Jonah, a Jew, goes as a missionary to a Gentile city (Jonah 3:1-10). Jonah is prophetic of the nation and God's purpose for the Jews. While the chosen nation has been disobedient to God as Jonah was, yet after severe chastisement they shall fulfill the divine purpose.

4. The Church a Missionary Organization.
The very genius of the Church is propagation through devout missionary effort.

1. The apostolic commission (Matt. 28:18, 20).
a. The authority of Jesus (v. 18). God gave him all authority in heaven and earth. b. The commission of the apostles (vv. 19, 20).

(1) It was to teach, that is, make disciples of all nations (v. 19). They were to make known to the world that Christ died to save sinners.

(2) Baptize those who believed. This baptism was to be in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, indicating that the believer has been brought into definite relationship to each member of the Holy Trinity.

(3) To teach the disciples obedience (v. 20). Profession is not enough. Obedience must issue.

e. The all-sufficient promise (v. 20). There would constantly be the blessing and fellowship of the all-powerful Savior and Lord.

2. The missionary program (Acts 1:8). The Church is under solemn obligation to witness to all the world of the gracious salvation which has been provided in Christ.

3. The first foreign missionaries (Acts 13:12). The occasion for this enterprise was a meeting of certain prophets and teachers at Antioch. While these ministers were engaged in praying, the Lord laid heavily upon their hearts the evangelization of the world. This marks the beginning of foreign missions as the deliberately planned enterprise of the Christian Church.

4. Preaching the gospel in Europe (Acts 16:10). Paul's inclination was to tarry in Asia Minor preaching the Word, but he was carried along by the Spirit. The Holy Spirit is just as active in closing doors as in opening them. The time had come for the gospel to begin its conquest of another continent. Paul, being hemmed in on all sides, was given the vision of a man of Macedonia pleading for help.

5. Preaching Christ before Agrippa (Acts 26:12-20). Paul, having been brought before the king, took advantage of the opportunity to witness to him of the Savior. Observe, a. His manner of life (v. 12). He showed that he had been in strictest accord with the most rigid sect of the Jews. b. His supernatural conversion (vv. 13-15). Christ had appeared to him on the way to Damascus and revealed himself to him. c. Jesus Christ commissioned him for a work (vv. 16-18). He was sent to the Gentiles to open their blind eyes, to turn them from darkness to light and from the power of Satan to God. d. His consecration (vv. 19, 20). He rendered immediate obedience to his commission. He showed that the opposition which he now experienced was due to his vigorous prosecution of his work.

The Foot of the Rainbow
The foot of the rainbow is never where you think it is. Perhaps there is a pot of gold there, but there are many more pots of gold that you will pass on your way to realize your dreams. Some men have the vision to see them.

The True End of Life
Happiness is the true end and aim of life. It is the task of intelligence to ascertain the conditions of happiness, and when found the truly wise will live in accordance with them.

TONS OF FOOD TO FEED THE FAMILY

Suppose that, over a period of 22 years, a farmer and his wife rear a boy and a girl and send them out from the farm home on their 18th birthdays to seek their fortunes. The food supply for such a family for 22 years, as calculated by Miss Miriam Birdseye, U. S. Department of Agriculture, would be worth approximately $12,000. Here are the amazing totals required by this family:

4 tons of meat and poultry.

6,000 gallons of milk.

1,300 dozens of eggs.

2½ tons of butter and other fats.

8 tons of potatoes.

1 ton of dried beans and peas.

4 tons of leafy or green vegetables.

3½ tons of tomatoes.

1 ton of dried fruits.

5½ tons of other fruits and vegetables.

7 tons of flour and cereals.

2¾ tons of sugar, molasses and other sweets.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Each Wednesday is dairy day in the Kentucky College of Agriculture radio programs over WHAS. A member of the dairy department of the college gives a practical and timely talk for the benefit of dairy farmers. The program is from 12 to 12:15, central time.

The Maysville Milk Producers and Distributors Association has been in operation a year. Price cutting on milk has been reduced, and the bottle exchange is working satisfactorily. Most herds in the Maysville milk shed are TB and Bank's disease free.

Through the efforts of the Fish and Game Association and the county agricultural agent, five acres of rearing pools were established in Pike county. The fry are taken from the pools when they are about six inches long. More than 50,000 bass will be put in the Levisa river next year as a result of this project.

The Trigg County Sheep Growers Association was organized last month, with the purpose of promoting better sheep raising methods. Assistance will be given county officials in getting dogs tagged, as a large proportion of the losses have been due to them.

Four leaders of poultry work among Christian county Negro farmers shipped 16 cases of eggs to market, getting $7.50 a case or $120. In the poultry program, 4 purebred flocks were started, and 2,000 baby chicks and 1,000 baby cockerels for capon work were bought.

A series of studies on reading in the home, covering hobbies, scientific study, farm life and entertainment, are being given in many counties as part of the new reading project. Books are obtained free from the Kentucky Library Commission at Frankfort. Miss Lena B. Nofcier, secretary of the commission, prepared the studies.

W.N.U. SERVICE

CHAPTER I.—Matt Kearney, young American living in London, says goodbye to his sister Eileen, on board the steamer Wallaroo bound for Colombo. The Wallaroo is conveying £2,000,000 in gold to Australia. Eileen has a presentiment of coming evil, which affects her brother. On his way home Kearney meets an old friend, Inspector Dawson Haig, of Scotland Yard, who is very much in love with Eileen. Haig is on the trail of opium, which he is convinced is concealed in Jo Lung's warehouse. Called to other duty, Haig delegates Kearney, with Detective Norwich, to visit the place and find out what he can.

CHAPTER II.—They find the place a veritable treasure house, and Kearney recognizes jewels stolen from his aunt. While in the warehouse he picks up a notebook, alone in Kearney's Norwich is murdered. Haig is puzzled over cryptic notes in the book, referring to stops to be made by the Wallaroo.

CHAPTER III.—Yu-an Hee See, high-born Chinaman, whom Haig has long been seeking as the leader of a band of international thieves, is at Jo Lung's. Discovering the loss of his notebook, he sends two of his followers after him. One of them, a Chinese named Norwick, is murdered. Haig is poring over the book, alone in Kearney's rooms, a monstrous creature enters, seizes it, and escapes.

CHAPTER IV.—Kearney's story of hearing horrible laughter while at Jo Lung's place satisfies Haig his quarry was in hiding there, he recognizing the peculiar malignancy of Yu-an's laugh.

CHAPTER V.—Eileen Kearney, writing to Haig, tells of a jolly fellow passenger, a clever Austrian, Doctor Oestler. At Cairo Yuan confers with his lieutenant, Aswami Fasha, known among the gang as the "Chief," over a mysterious coup they are planning. Haig goes to Marseilles, where he meets Eileen when she goes ashore with Doctor Oestler. The intruder boards the Wallaroo, disguised. From radio messages he decodes, he realizes Oestler, with others on board, are members of Yu-an's gang and that they have recognized him.

CHAPTER VI.—A huge Chinaman tries to throw Haig overboard but goes over himself in a desperate struggle. At Port Said Eileen disappears.

There was a dance after dinner that night.

Dawson Haig, desperately worried, went up onto the boat deck, quite deserted at the moment, and leaned over the starboard rail, at a point just aft the bridge, staring across calm sea in the direction of the African coast. He tried to think—to think calmly.

The problem was one demanding the exercise of all his powers. And, set like a jewel in this dark affair, was Eileen—a distracting figure (he could not be blind to the truth), and one upon which all too often he found his thoughts focused. That Eileen had twice proved of incalculable service did not alter the plain fact that many times when he should have been concentrating upon the mystery, he found himself concentrating upon Eileen.

From a professional point of view he was faced either with something very like ruin, or, alternatively, with a triumph which must prove a stepping stone in his far-flung ambitions.

Granted this success—now doubly to be prayed for—he might dare to think about Eileen as he longed to think about her; not as the charming sister of an old friend, nor even a capable little helper, but as . . . Eileen.

Where did the clew lie to these mysterious activities? What should be his next move? It was maddening to watch, to know some incomprehensible plot stretching from Limehouse to Paris, Paris to Marseilles, and thence to Port Said—further, perhaps,—was fermenting under his very eyes, coming to maturity, and yet—to do nothing!

At which point in his reflections, he was seized from behind in a steely grasp and lifted lightly, as a nurse might lift an infant! He was in the grip of that creature of Yu'an Hee See's called "the Hangman." But of this fact he was ignorant.

Swung back over the shoulder of his unseen, but incredibly powerful assailant, he recognized, with a cold chill of dread, that he was about to be hurled into the sea!

Automatically to his mind sprang those instructions which every police officer receives, in Jiu-Jitsu. His fists were useless, flung high, impotent, above his head. But the cunning grip which told him that he was dealing with an expert, held him so poised that only at one moment—for which, dangerously, Haig must wait—could he counter.

That moment came—as the seemingly irresistible forward swing commenced which was to hurl him into the sea. He checked a cry in his throat. He was icily cool. And, following the curve of that mighty throw, instead of endeavoring to check it as an ill-informed victim would have done, he swung forward, drew up his knees, and kicked backward with all his strength!

It was sheer guesswork, but one heel registered dolly upon the head of the athlete who held him aloft.

That death swing was never completed. Haig dropped with a crash upon the rail, hung perilously for a moment—and felt a vise-like grip upon his ankles. . . .

He was tipped forward, forward, irresistibly—until he saw the lights of portholes beneath, the lower ones reflected in the sea. He claved at the rail. That silent horror was behind him, hanging above him!

Clutching grimly, he kicked—kicked again. . . . got a hold with his left hand higher up, and realized that the man was craning right over, was reaching down to relax that detaining grip. In desperation, resting his head against the lower rail, he managed at last to free his ankles, to draw his legs down.

Then, with all his remaining strength, he shot both feet upward! There was an impact—a stifled cry. His jacket, held in clutching fingers, swept down over his head, but he clung on—clung on dizzily.

A wrench—a bulky shape streaked past him. . . . a dull splash. The Hangman had failed!

Disheveled, punting, Haig dragged himself back to the deck. He leaned dizzily against a boat, striving to adjust his disorder. Already the plan was forming which later he carried out. No one knew that the thing was overboard. No one should ever know, but the sharks, until his absence was discovered!

When, bewilderingly, came the swish of a silken shawl—a patter of feet—a soft, terrified cry. . . . and Eileen's sweet arms were about his neck!

"Bilby—Bilby dear! Oh, my G—d! you're covered with blood! What is it? What is it?"

"My dear!" he said—"It's nothing. I'm safe—and no one must know."

She was staring into his face eagerly, her own raised in a sort of agony of apprehension. Haig began to tremble. Gone was every resolution he so recently had made—useless—hopeless.

He held her so close that she thought, "He will break me in half," and exulted. He kissed her until she was breathless, helpless.

"Oh, my darling," he whispered. He had so little to offer this wonder girl, locked, happy, in his arms—so much to tell her—so much to explain. Yet somehow all he could say over and over again, was:

"Oh, my darling. . . ."

A few moments after the Wallaroo dropped her anchor off Port Said, the British consul came aboard. There was a conference in the captain's cabin.

Haig had deliberately failed to reveal the fact that there was a man overboard. It had gone into his Scotland Yard dossier, but he had suppressed it from those on board, with a specific object.

The first news was given by a steward entering the missing man's room in the morning. The conclusion was come to that the morose Chinese passenger had committed suicide during the night by jumping overboard. . . .

Now, in the closed cabin of the commander, Dawson Haig revealed the truth to Captain Peterson and the British consul.

"I take full responsibility," he said; "you can see for yourselves the sort of gang I have to deal with. First, the Limehouse outrage, and now this murderous attack on me. I got off lightly, with a cut scalp and a torn sleeve!" The commander scratched his grizzled head.

"What do you wish me to do, Inspector?" the consul asked. "In my opinion, the persons whom you suspect of being associated with the missing assassin should be detained."

Dawson Haig stood up, grinning savagely, and shaking his head.

"Upon what evidence?" he demanded. "I assure you that except for a scrap of paper provisionally discovered by Miss Kearney, there's nothing to associate Doctor Oestler, for instance, with any conspiracy directed against me. And even that is far from conclusive. I mean, he could explain it in all sorts of ways. He doesn't appear to be acquainted either with Miss Valerie Ednam or with Mr. Chow; and certainly not with the German, Hartog, on the lower deck. And what have I against these three people which would justify detention? I assure you—he shook his head emphatically—"absolutely nothing."

"Then what are we to do?" said the consul. "Of course, I could detain them here, for a time."

"No, no. Nothing official," was Haig's reply.

With the coming of daylight, the babel of the curious port rose to full blast. Sellers of all kinds of wares—carpets, lace, jewelry, Birmingham antiques, and the rest—set up their shops on deck, turning the ship into a miniature bazaar. The inevitable conjurer was there with his little brass cups. And there were divers in boats who shouted—who never stopped shouting—except when they actually dived, which was rarely.

Dawson Haig, very reluctantly, had agreed to allow Eileen to pursue her inquiries in her own way; but he didn't realize that she had actually left the ship until she had been gone some time. He was watching Len Chow, who, having collected his baggage, was now following a porter towards the ladder. Hartog had quietly gone ashore an hour before.

Just before Mr. Chow reached the gangway he passed a fortune-teller, an evilly handsome fellow, wearing shabby European clothes and a turban—not an Egyptian, Haig determined, but possibly a Greek, or an Armenian.

Some Words Were Exchanged Rapidly.

Some words were exchanged rapidly, although Haig was too far away to overhear them. The Chinaman pointed shoreward. Haig looked and saw a native boat. . . . In this boat sat Eileen with two women passengers, the party being escorted by Doctor Oestler and the ship's surgeon.

Dawson Haig became acutely uncomfortable. The girl had played her part admirably, even to the extent of striking up a friendship with Miss Ednam. But neither from the woman nor from the Austrian physician had she gleaned anything in the nature of a clue. She was convinced, and had assured Haig of the fact, that they knew she was watching them.

Hurrying down the ladder, the dark-eyed fortune teller was pulled away by a boat which waited. Len Chow followed in another. There was nothing to show that the pair were associated. But why had the Chinaman pointed out Eileen's party?

Haig stood there watching, and trying to make up his mind which of several courses to adopt. Eileen! At all costs he must keep Eileen in sight.

He was up against a closely and cleverly organized group, he alone holding all available threads in his hands. It was a job for three men, but, somehow, it had to be done by one.

Eileen had some shopping to do by Simon Artz, and so to this store the party made their way. Doctor Oestler, it appeared, had purchases to make also. The ship's surgeon, Heatherley, went along. Dawson Haig, who had been in Port Said twice previously and, oddly enough, upon the same business which saw him there now, having satisfied himself that this was the destination of the party, became interested in the movements of Mr. Len Chow.

This gentleman, depositing his baggage at the Eastern exchange, had strolled out, like a man with nothing better to do than kill time.

The fortune teller had entered a shop nearly opposite.

Dawson Haig, wearing the tinted glasses of "Mr. Smith," sat down at some distance from the door and ordered a cool drink. He was doing some hard thinking.

At about this time, Eileen had completed her purchases. Her companions—excluding Doctor Heatherley—had allowed themselves to be lured by wonderful shawls, scarves, and other pitfalls which await unwary travelers in Eastern shops.

Doctor Oestler was inspecting a handsome casket of inlaid wood. Eileen, covertly, was watching him. That this man was an associate of criminals, murderers, she could not doubt; yet he was a most entertaining companion, and in spite of his marked ugliness, possessed the rare quality of soothing without boring.

Eileen was enjoying that sense of martyrdom so dear to woman's nature. Her spirit was seeking Dawson Haig all the time. Where was he? Was he safe? Did he appreciate what she was doing? With it all, she was so bappy that she was frightened.

Doctor Oestler had stepped to the open doorway to examine the casket by daylight; and:

"My gentleman," said a soft voice. The doctor stared through his glasses at the speaker. It was the Armenian fortune teller.

"I do not wish to buy anything, ha?" said the doctor good humoredly. "I do not wish my palm to be read—no? And I do not wish to know my future. Is it so?"

"It is not so, my gentleman," the soft voice continued. "It is that I know where there are boxes such as this, but ever so much better—and cheaper."

"You know this—ha?" said Doctor Oestler, smiling at Eileen.

"You think, perhaps I don't know this?"

"I think—ha?—you may, I say I do not wish to buy even such a box."

"I make with you a bargain," the man went on earnestly. "I charge you nothing—nothing—unless you buy from the shop I take you to. This is my bargain."

Eileen began to laugh. "My lady laughs," said the Armenian earnestly. "But I will show her." He took her hand, as Doctor Oestler returned and placed the casket on the counter from which he had taken it. The doctor rejoined them.

"If I tell this lady true," said the man, still holding Eileen's hand, "something I cannot know except from the palm, will you come with me to the shop I show you?"

Eileen agreed. "But he'll fall down on it and expect half-a-crown all the same."

"We shall see—ha? Proceed, my good fellow."

"You belong," said the man, staring into her hand, "not to England—not, I think, to Europe, but to some country far west of Europe—perhaps it is America."

"Detected my accent," was Eileen's mental comment.

"You come not to Egypt, but to somewhere farther—to India, I think. And in India some one is waiting for you—some one you love and who loves you. No!" He stared closer. "It is not so. Yet there is some one who waits. There is some one—I think in England—this one I have spoken of—who is now on his way to India, or to some place very near to India. And there he will meet you. . . . Ah, but still I am not right! He is here, this one—here, in Port Said!"

Eileen betrayed herself by a sudden start.

"For him there are many dangers. . . . and for you, too, lady, I read in your palm. But you will be married and be very happy. There will be—"

"That's enough," said Eileen, started by the man's reading.

"Then we must stick to our bargain—yes?" said Doctor Oestler. The man smiled triumphantly. "Please—follow, my lady, my gentleman," he said. "It is not far. Please follow."

Eileen was conscious of a sudden vague uneasiness. It was very difficult to appreciate the fact that she was in the company of a criminal, but it remained a fact, nevertheless, a fact that the man's strange charm of manner invariably made her forget.

"Perhaps the others would like to come?" she suggested.

Doctor Oestler nodded, returned to the shop, and presently came back. "The ladies are still absorbed with silk wear," he said, smiling. "Silk undies—ha? So I have left Doctor Heatherley to take care of them, and I arrange that we shall meet at the Eastern exchange in half an hour."

The Armenian led them into the native quarter. Eileen's brain began working rapidly. The question repeated itself over and over again: "Should I go? Should I go?"

Perhaps even at the last moment she would have conjured up some excuse. But suddenly she saw a slight which reassured her. She made her heart sing. Dawson Haig had followed Len Chow, whom the Chinaman, apparently innocently, had sent out, and had temporarily lost sight of him at a corner. Almost at the same moment he had seen Eileen—alone with Doctor Oestler—accompanied by the fortune teller.

And so Eileen, glancing back apprehensively along the narrow street, recognized the glitter of "Mr. Smith's" smoked glasses. Dawson Haig followed, twenty paces behind! Doctor Oestler was talking to the palmist-guide and could not possibly have noticed her backward glance.

On they went into several streets. Presently, in a street narrow from end to end, they paused. A dingy little shop on the left was evidently their objective. Eileen glanced back.

Dawson Haig was still only twenty paces behind!

The shop was purely Arab in appearance. They went down two steps into the interior, and from a dim corner the proprietor, whom the guide addressed as Mohammed, appeared.

Mohammed was quite the most venerable specimen of a living Egyptian upon whom Eileen had ever set eyes. His face was a maze of tiny wrinkles, and of the color of a walnut shell. His eyes, bright as a snake's, lurked deep in cavities resembling small caves. Wisps of dirty white hair, almost indistinguishable from his turban, and a straggly beard of the same, outlined that aged countenance.

Mohammed bowed low, opened a door hidden in the dark recess from which he had emerged, and stood aside. Eileen glanced back in the direction of the street. . . .

Dawson Haig was outside. Confidently, now, she stepped through into a big room—to pause, breathless with astonishment. The fortune teller had not exaggerated. This was, indeed, a wonder house, a treasury of beautiful things! And there were other rooms beyond.

"You see, my lady," said the palmist softly, "what I tell you true."

It was indeed true, since this, and not the establishment in Stamboul, was the principal warehouse of that great and mysterious industry controlled by Yu'an Hee See. Here, to Port Said, came the choicest pieces, to be distributed for sale.

Some even found their buyers in Turkey, some in France, and some in England.

Eileen experienced a sense of bewilderment. It was amazing, in fact, terrifying. . . . opening as it did out of that awfully little shop—what did it mean? What could it mean? She looked around that Aladdin's cave, and slowly the realization came to her that only a Rockefeller could have bid for the contents.

What IS a Sound Loan?

A sound loan for a commercial bank is a loan which the borrower believes, and the bank expects, will be paid within a reasonable time—a loan which if not fully repaid at the maturity of the note is substantially reduced by regular periodic installments. Loans that are regularly reduced enable a bank to accommodate patrons whose needs may be more essential. A bank must have a turn-over of money in the same way that a merchant must have a turn-over of merchandise, with this difference—bank's turn-over affects the credit facilities of the entire community.

The ability and intention to repay a loan by a planned program, and within a reasonable time, is the essence of a good loan. The giving of collateral does not repay a loan. Collateral is merely a pledge to guarantee the borrower's ability and promise to repay the loan within a reasonable time.

TIRES MAY LOOK ALIKE ON THE OUTSIDE ON THE INSIDE THEY ARE DIFFERENT

HEAT on the inside created by friction is the main cause of blowouts. Firestone Tires are different on the inside—they are built with the patented extra process of Gum-Dipping that soaks every cord and insulates every strand with pure liquid rubber, preventing internal friction and heat. No other make of tire is Gum-Dipped.

When you realize that there were 882,000 automobile accidents in 1934, injuring 954,000 people and killing 36,000, and that 43,000 of these accidents were caused by blowouts, punctures and skidding, you will be more interested in the make of tires you use on your car.

Firestone performance records again emphasize the undisputed evidence that Firestone Tires are not only blowout-proof, but give greatest protection against skidding. There are three questions and answers that will solve the problem of what tires to buy:

QUESTION 1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

ANSWER—Recent tests by a leading University show that Firestone High Speed Non-Skid Tires stop a car 15% quicker than any other of the leading makes. For eight consecutive years Firestone Tires have been on the winning car in the dangerous Pike's Peak Race where a skid means death. This is undisputed evidence that Firestone gives car owners greatest protection against skidding.

QUESTION 2—"Are they blowout-proof?"

ANSWER—Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have the most amazing records for being blowout-proof of any tires ever built. In the gruelling 500-Mile Race at Indianapolis, May 30th, every one of the 33 cars was equipped with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. Kelly Petillo won the race and broke the record over this 26-year-old rough brick track without tire trouble—in fact, not one of the 33 drivers had tire trouble of any kind.

Ab Jenkins drove his 5,000 pound car on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires over the hot salt beds of Utah, 3,000 miles in 23½ hours, at an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, with temperatures as high as 120°, without tire trouble of any kind. These are most amazing proofs of blowout protection ever known.

QUESTION 3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

ANSWER—Firestone High Speed Tires not only give you more than 50% longer wear, but also lowest cost per mile. This is made possible by the tough, wear-resisting tread built with higher shoulders and a wider, flatter contour. This thick, rugged, scientifically designed tread is held securely to the Gum-Dipped cord body by Firestone's patented construction of two extra layers of cords under the tread. This is a special construction feature not used in any other tire. Unequaled mileage records by thousands of car owners add undisputed evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

You Always Get Better Quality at No Higher Price when You Buy a Firestone Tire with the Firestone Name and Guarantee

1 University tests show Firestone Tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker.

2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires.

3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear.

NUMBER 18

WOOL GROWERS

SELL 57,509 POUNDS FOR $16-335.38

Boone county wool growers thru the Boone County Wool Pool sold last week 57,509 pounds of wool for $16,280.38 net to growers according to H. C. White, president and Lillard Scott, secretary of the association. Growers received net 28.5 cents per pound for clear and 24.5 cents per pound for rejections. When both clear and rejections were added together the growers received an average of 28.31 cents per pound which is slightly more than 3 cents per pound higher than that received last year.

The wool was delivered and paid for at three convenient points in the county. Growers delivered at Walton on last Thursday 22,006 pounds for which they received $6,182.83. 18,399 pounds were delivered at Burlington Friday and brought growers a total of $5,280.00. Petersburg received 17,113 pounds of wool on Monday of this week which was the largest amount on record at that point. Growers received $4,959.55 for this delivery. Heavy rains on Friday caused many growers who ordinarily deliver at Burlington to go to Petersburg on Monday.

Growers as a whole were well pleased. Heavy rains recently caused some wool to be damp or wet. The rejections brought only four cents per pound less and reduced the average price for the crop only 19 cents per hundred pounds. S. Steinhauser and Company were the purchasers of the wool. They handled the crop in a most satisfactory manner.

REPUBLICANS PICK CANDIDATES FOR STATE OFFICES

After a six-hour session marked by a bitter dispute which brought about a physical encounter and for a time threatened to disrupt the meeting in Lexington, the Republican State "Recommendation" Convention submitted to the party's followers the names of eight candidates for election to State offices at the November election.

The candidates "recommended" by the convention's 1,979 delegates who had no legal power to nominate formally, for nomination at the August primary and election in November follow:

Lieutenant Governor—Judge J. J. Kavanaugh, Louisville, Third District.

Attorney General—Daniel W. Davies, Newport, Fifth District.

Secretary of State—Mrs. Edwin P. Morrow, Somerset, widow of the former Governor, Ninth District.

Auditor of Public Accounts—S. Byrd Allen, Salyersville, Seventh District.

State Treasurer—Charles Cole, Harlan, Ninth District.

Commissioner of Agriculture—Andrew Alexander, Henderson, Second District.

Superintendent of Public Instruction—W. J. Moore, Richmond, Sixth District.

Clerk of the Court or Appeals—Joseph Martin, Edmonson, Fourth District.

The convention made no recommendation for Governor, but Judge King Swope, Lexington, in the Sixth District, has the support of party leaders and apparently will be the gubernatorial nominee.

GOOD NEWS

FOR THE COUNTY. NEW STATE ROAD IN PROSPECT

Judge N. E. Ridder is in receipt of the following notice from the State Highway Commission:

"On motion of Chairman Donaldson, the Commission ordered a survey in Boone county from Burlington and running to Waterloo, thence to the Baptist church in Normansville, thence to U. S. Highway 42 by way of Big Bone Baptist church."

This is a much needed road and when located and built, it will open up one of the most thickly populated parts of the county. Judge Ridder says that he expects the engineers will begin this work in the near future and he hopes to give the people of the Carlton and Hamilton precincts the benefits of a state owned and maintained road.

These are the only precincts in the county through which a state highway does not now run. More power to you, Judge, and keep at the good work until this road is done.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Davies and sister, and grandsons Dave and Jimmie Hill, of Hyde Park, Cincinnati, were visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Lassing on Monday.

ROBERT BEEMON ACCEPTS POSITION AT HOLMES SENIOR HIGH SCHOOL

Robert Beemon, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Beemon, has recently received a deserved promotion in the teaching profession. Mr. Beemon has just been elected as teacher of Mathematics in the Holmes Senior High School, Covington, Ky. Last year Mr. Beemon taught Mathematics in the Reuben Post Halleck Junior High School, Louisville. He was reemployed for 1935-1936 at the Louisville school but resigned to accept the Covington post. Mr. Beemon made the change on account of a considerable raise in salary and the further fact that he preferred work with the upper classes of a senior high school. In addition, he will be located nearer his former home in Boone county. The Recorder wishes to take this opportunity to commend Mr. Beemon on the success he has thus far made as a teacher.

Mr. and Mrs. Beemon left this week for Ann Arbor where he will attend summer school and receive his Masters Degree in Mathematics at the close of the summer session of that university.

LARGE ### NUMBER OF STUDENTS ENROLLED AT U. OF K. SUMMER SESSION.

A total of 118 of the 120 counties in Kentucky and 36 states and the District of Columbia are represented in the enrollment for the first term of the 1935 summer session at the University of Kentucky. The second largest enrollment for a single term of summer school in the history of the University has been recorded, 1,669 students having entered at the close of registration Monday, June 17.

In 1931, 1,596 students registered for the first summer term, and this total will probably be reached for the current term if enrollment for the basketball and track coaching schools and the short courses in vocational education are normal. The total registration of 1,669 recorded does not include registration in the University Training School, where approximately 300 children are enrolled, in the first six elementary grades and in the high school.

Among those registered from Boone county are: Boyd Wunder Mahan, Petersburg; Kathryn Chandler, Walton; Chester Goodridge, Hebron; Marvin Souther Moore, Burlington; Mary Bess Cropper, Burlington; and Laura Katherine Evans, Hebron.

RESPESS FILES SUIT IN RACE HORSE SALE

Suit for $500, alleged to be due on the sale price of two race horses, was filed in Kenton Circuit Court by J. B. Respass against H. G. Shoemaker.

Respass states in his petition that he sold the horses Storm Angel and Twilight Girl to Shoemaker June 24, 1931, for $2,500.

He says $2000 was paid on account and that the defendant agreed to pay the additional $500 when that sum was won.

Respass alleges that a Storm Angel has won $6,195, the sum due has not been paid.

BASE BALL NEWS

The Constance ball team won the game Sunday at Midway park. Some of the Midway players were absent making an easy victory for the Constance boys. We were glad to have them and their friends at our park. Next Sunday, June 30, the Union ball team will play at Midway park. Come and root for your home team. July 4th the Bellevue ball team will cross bats with the Midway boys. Don't forget the dates—2:30 (fast time).

Midway Ball Club

Mrs. Oakley Easton and the driver of a new Chevrolet car, collided on the Dixie Highway near Graves Ave. Monday morning. Mrs. Easton was on her way to work at Cincinnati, and the driver of the other car was the owner of the Chevrolet which he was driving to his home in Texas. The new car was turned over and both cars were damaged, but neither of the occupants were seriously injured.

Mrs. Deufel, of the Deufel Nursery, on the Dixie Highway, has completed her work of improving the Petersburg and Bullittsville cemetery. Mrs. Deufel has made a big improvement in the appearance of these cemeteries by planting trees and shrubs in the right locations. 125 trees were planted in Petersburg and 43 in the Bullittsville cemetery.

CHANDLER

WILL MAKE POLITICAL ADDRESS HERE COUNTY COURT DAY, JULY 1.

The first political speech in this county in the present race for Governor will be held at the Court House, in Burlington, on County Court Day, Monday, July 1, at two o'clock (slow time). At this time Lieutenant Governor A. B. Chandler will address the voters on the issues of the campaign. No doubt this speech by Mr. Chandler will be followed by a number of other speakers since several candidates are in the race.

In a political advertisement which appeared in last week's issue and also in this present copy of the Recorder on a different page the managers of Mr. Chandler's race announce that all the voters of Boone county are cordially invited to attend and hear Mr. Chandler give the grounds upon which he is asking the electorate of the state to nominate him at the August primary. Leonard Cook, of Walton, has been selected as chairman of the Chandler Campaign for Boone county. Those in charge of the Chandler Campaign for Governor predict that a large audience will be present to give respectful attention to any arguments that Mr. Chandler may present.

AUTO VIOLENCE IDENTIFIED AS VIRGIL KERR, ERLANGER, KY.

The body of Virgil Kerr, 30 years old, Sanders Drive, Erlanger, who was injured fatally Thursday night when he was hit by a hit-skip driver on the Dixie Highway, near Erlanger, was identified by his widow, Mrs. Mary Kerr.

Kerr, who was found on the side of the highway by a passing motorist died shortly after his arrival at St. Elizabeth Hospital, Covington. He suffered a broken neck and cuts on the head.

His widow, his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Kerr, and one sister, Mrs. Margaret Evans, 427 West Sixth Street, Newport, survive him. Services were conducted at the home of his sister Monday.

ERLANGER MAN CAPTURED AFTER HE ENTERS HAMILTON, OHIO HOME

Captured by Dr. Simon H. Rosin, 315 South Second Street, after a chase from his residence, Herbert Maynard, 32 years old, Box 342, Center and Hubbard Streets, Erlanger, Ky., was placed in jail there charged with burglary.

Dr. Rosin had been talking to a friend in the front part of the house. He walked toward the rear for cigarettes and found Maynard police said.

Maynard ran from the house, followed by Dr. Rosin, who overtook him and held him until Patrolmen Hart and Welch arrived.

Maynard took a fountain pen, two medical thermometers, and two men's coats, valued at $41. Dr. Rosin said.

A .25 caliber bullet and a skeleton key were found in Maynard's possession. Maynard gained entrance to the home by cutting a screen door, police said.

SILVER LEADERS 4-H CLUB

On June 18, we had our annual tour. Twenty-one members were present. We visited all of the club members, looked at their work and record books and found everything in fine shape. We believe our club as a whole, is as good as any in the county. We had lunch at the home of Mr. Claude Black, which was enjoyed by all. There were 29 for dinner, members and leaders. Games were played at noon. Then we had our meeting and finished the tour.

Lloyd K. Jones, Reporter.

NOTICE TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS

We have been sending paper and stamped envelopes to our correspondents at the first of each month, sufficient for the number of weeks in that month. This system does not work in that several correspondents do not send in communications every week. In the future we are asking our correspondents when out of paper or envelopes to send a request for the same on the first page of their communication. We will then send the envelopes and paper immediately.

Miss Margaret Sue Hall and Lee Roy Hall, of Covington, are visiting their grandmother, Mrs. Susie Stephens this week.

Mrs. Sallie Carpenter, of Sparta, Ky., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Carpenter this week.

MISCONCEPTION

SECURED BY TOBACCO GROWERS OF RECENT N. R. A. RULING

Many Boone county tobacco growers have secured a misconception of the recent NRA ruling in reference to their AAA tobacco contracts. The NRA ruling has no direct bearing on the regular AAA tobacco contracts. Payment for 1935 production and full compliance will be met according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

There is a contest suit to come before the Supreme Court on the Smith-Kerr Act which places a tax on tobacco not under contract. Growers who think this act may be decided unconstitutional should file application for tax returns with the Internal Revenue Department, a branch office of which is at the Post Office building in Covington. There is only very slight possibility that any taxes paid can be returned. There is also a strong possibility that a 33 1-3 per cent tax will be collected on all tobacco not under contract in 1935.

Boone county growers who applied for special base contracts are being notified to sign their contracts before June 29 as compliance as to acreage will be checked beginning July 1. Those growers who do not sign their contracts by that date will subject their allotments to be given to other growers. Many growers could not secure base contracts, due to the limited acreage and base pounds allotted the county.

P. T. A. SUPPER HUGH SUCCESS

The P. T. A. supper held on the local court grounds Saturday evening was well attended and a nice profit was realized.

The Parent-Teachers desire to take this opportunity to thank the Recorder for the publicity given this affair. The many courtesies extended from the Editor in the past have been much appreciated. The Association also wishes to thank Mr. Conner for his generous help use of equipment and room; the ones who fried the fish, Mr. Joe Huey being in charge and all who helped in any way to make the evening a success. The donations were most liberal, showing the keen interest of the community in this work.

UTOPIANS PLAN TOUR

Boone County Utopia Club No. 2 members completed at their regular June meeting last Thursday night plans for their annual project tour to be conducted July 18.

The annual tour will begin with the project inspection of Florence members, followed with an inspection of Burlington project work, noon lunch at Hebron followed by visits to Hebron and Petersburg members. A recreational event will be held at the close of the tour.

The members last Thursday night were the host of Robert Graves, of near Hebron. The event was enjoyed by all attending.

GOOD 4-H PROJECT WORK SEEN ON 4-H TOURS

Boone County 4-H Club members as a whole are doing the best job of project work on record according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Tours of Hamilton, Hebron and New Haven Clubs were held the past week and both project work and record books were found up-to-date in practically every case. Florence, Petersburg and Burlington Clubs will hold their annual tours on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, respectively this week. Grant, Walton and Verona Clubs will hold their tours during the latter half of July.

UTOPIA CLUB

The Boone County Utopia Club No. 2 held their June meeting at the home of Robert Graves, last Thursday night. Wilford Slekmann, our delegates to Junior Week, which was held the first of June at the State University, gave a report on his trip. Mr. Slekmann was elected State President of the Utopia Clubs and was also awarded a medal for the outstanding boy club member of the State.

The contest for new members will close the July meeting. The boys are ahead in the contest by five members—they had one new member at this meeting.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Graves and Mrs. Slekmann.

Mr. Will Brumback, of Covington, was a visitor of Calvin Cress and family Monday.

Robert Hensley is suffering with a cut eye and arm, results from a ball game at Brocksmith's picnic Sunday at Onnie Rouse's farm.

MUSICAL RECITAL TO BE HEARD IN ERLANGER, THURSDAY NIGHT

Mrs. Lillian G. Faber, Erlanger, Ky., will present her orchestra and pupils in recital at the Lloyd Memorial Auditorium, Erlanger, on Thursday night, June 27 at eight o'clock. Mrs. Faber's recitals are always well attended and greatly enjoyed. She has made a fine record in this section as a teacher and undoubtedly her recital will be greeted by a large and appreciative audience.

Those on the program include a number of Boone and Kenton county students as well as the Erlanger and Hebron High School orchestras which Mrs. Faber conducts. A number of singers also will be heard in the recital.

GUNPOWDER ROAD TO BE RECONSTRUCTED BY K. E. R. A.

Monday E. A. Marye, Director of Works of the Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration approved a relief measure in Boone County to RECONSTRUCT GUNPOWDER ROAD. Seven (7) workers will be given employment daily until this job is finished at a total cost of $234.75.

AAA TOBACCO

CONTROL COMMITTEE ELECTED SATURDAY

The Board of Directors of the Boone County AAA Tobacco Production Control Association met at Burlington last Saturday, June 22 and elected the following officers for the 1935 compliance year: H. E. White, President; A. S. Burcham, Vice-President; John E. Crigler, Secretary; A. B. Renaker, Treasurer; J. F. Cleek and O. K. Powers, Members of Control Committee.

The Board of Directors voted the immediate starting of measuring allotted acres for compliance, and, if possible, as a matter of economy to measure tobacco acreage at the same time, corn acreage of the Corn-Hog Association is measured. The measuring of allotted acres is expected to begin July 1.

The members of the 1935 County AAA Tobacco Board of Directors are: H. E. White, Burlington; A. S. Burcham, Grant; J. F. Cleek, Beaver; L. D. Rennecker, Florence; August Trapp, Hamilton; William Hill, Hebron; J. J. Klopp, Petersburg; Ezra A. Blankenbaker, Union; O. K. Powers, Verona; J. C. Bedinger, Walton.

JIM WELCH, VETERAN SHOWMAN, IN TOWN THIS WEEK

Jim Welch, the veteran showman, is holding forth this week in Burlington. His show opened on the school grounds Tuesday. Mr. Welch has been making this county for several years and has made many friends in this section. His show is always clean and clever. For these reasons he deserves a good audience from the general public. No doubt the show will be well attended and enjoyed by all.

FLORENCE MERCHANTS TRIM LONGWOOD HERD DAIRY, SCORE 3 TO 2 IN SUNDAY GAME

Pitching in his masterly style Afterkirk of the Florence Merchants base ball team limited the Longwood Herd Dairy team to two hits and two runs to win 3 to 2 in a very hotly contested game Sunday. Afterkirk struck out 14 men and was master of the situation at all times being given excellent support by his team at all times. Beckers for the Longwood Herd Dairy team was also very effective although he did allow 8 hits he kept them well scattered which accounts for the low score.

It will be remembered that Afterkirk only two weeks ago pitched the Merchants to victory with a no hit game which is the desire of all pitchers in base ball.

Boone county should give this deserving team their loyal support as it is quite an advertisement to be represented by a winning team, and it is hoped that anyone wishing to support Boone county and this team will make themselves acquainted with the schedule and be present as many games as possible this season.

This team is now supported by the Florence Merchants but it is the desire of all concerned to let Boone county share in its success, and in the coming seasons perhaps Boone county will be to the front in base ball, the national game and the ideal of every boy in the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Sullivan are sporting a new Chevrolet car.

TEACHERS

EMPLOYED FOR THE COMING SCHOOL YEAR BY COUNTY SCHOOL BOARD

Supt. D. H. Norris states that the County School Board has employed the teachers for the 1935-1936 term for all schools under its jurisdiction. Most of the teachers were re-employed and there were very few changes in the list. The prospect for a fine school year during the coming session is particularly good. The list of teachers for the various schools is as follows:

STATE ROAD FUNDS ALLOTTED BY FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

The State Highway Commission, session Monday at Frankfort, was notified by the Federal Government that $2,300,000 would be allotted to Kentucky as its part of the regular Federal aid, according to J. Lyter Donaldson, chairman of the Commission.

The money, Mr. Donaldson said, would be available as soon as the Federal program is completed, and will be matched on a fifty-fifty basis by state funds.

This allotment does not include Public Works Administration funds.

The Editor had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Ed Berkshire this week. He came in to transact some business with the Recorder and while here said that he had been quite successful with his berries the present season.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maurer spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Jarrell.

FARMERS

IN THIS STATE ARE PAID. $15,000,000

Rental and benefit payments through April 30 to Kentucky farmers cooperating in the agricultural adjustment program totaled $10,596,350, according to a report of the AAA received at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. In addition, burley growers are now receiving their second benefit payments on last year's crop, which it is estimated will total $5,000,000.

Of the $10,596,350 that had been received on April 30 $6,125,401 had come to tobacco growers, $3,990,077, to producers of corn and hogs, $395,773 to wheat growers, and $105,101 to cotton farmers.

By counties, farmers in Bourbon had received the largest amount, $304,377 including $216,631 on tobacco, $75,663 on corn and hogs, and $12,031 on wheat.

Union county was second, with a total of $302,997, of which $226,293 was for corn and hogs, $24,072 for wheat and $52,631 for tobacco.

Fayette county was third, with $292,480 mostly for tobacco; and Daviess fourth, with $286,009 of which $158,787 was for tobacco and $105,204 for corn and hogs.

VALUE OF ADVERTISING

Did you ever stop to think what a big part advertising plays in business? The department store considers advertising a necessary part of its expenses. So much so that the average department store in its annual budget assigns a certain percentage for that purpose. Then think of the household articles that would never have been heard of but for advertising. Milady's brand of face cream, the toothbrush you use, many articles in daily use on our dining tables; almost everything that we eat, drink, wear or enjoy are made known to us and popularized through advertising. In fact, advertising is the greatest force in the world, and newspaper advertising tops all the mediums. Newspaper advertising performs a great public service. It shows what to buy for their comfort, their convenience and their enjoyment. It shows them where to buy safely and economically.

A GREAT CHALLENGE

Business and labor are today faced by one of the greatest challenges ever to confront them, as the result of the Supreme Court's disruption of the NRA. They must meet a period of readjustment that will test them thoroughly in both principle and practice.

If all employers of labor make no immediate change in hour or wage schedule there will be need of nothing to replace NRA. For we shall thereby retain all that has been good in that agency.

But this spirit of co-operation for the national welfare must come not only from business. Labor faces as great a challenge. All the "chiseling" has not been on one side of the industrial fence by any means. There must be mutual recognition in this industrial readjustment. Business and labor must consider not only each other, but both should remember their duty to the public.

Labor and business both now have a wonderful opportunity to prove that they can be fair to each other, and to the public as well, without government regulation.

GRADUATES OF 1935

The colleges and universities of the nation have just turned out the largest crop of graduates in all their history. Most of all these young men and women are looking for a job. Many, perhaps most of them, will have a good deal of difficulty in finding satisfactory employment. Some of them will turn bitter and wonder what good their education has done them, if they cannot immediately obtain positions above the grade of filling station attendants. This is the usual first reaction of a high proportion of college graduates in their first few years of trying to fit themselves into the social scheme.

We think this is the result of over-emphasis upon the economic purpose of education. We do not know that the schools are to blame for the prevalent idea that a boy or a girl goes to college primarily to become fitted to earn "big money." We do not know of any university which teaches that the world owes a living to its graduates merely because they are graduates. It happens, however, that the economic standard is the one by which most people are inclined to measure everything.

The real purpose of education, as we understand it, is to fit men and women to understand and appreciate the realities of life. Those who come out of college equipped with such understanding and appreciating realize that contentment and happiness are measured by other standards than the size of the pay-check. They are the ones who get the greatest and most lasting benefits from their university courses.

Editorial of the Week

NOTE THE CAUSE
(Greenfield Dispatch)

In the mail bag column of the Columbus Dispatch last week there appeared a letter from a writer who put forth some statements and arguments well worth serious consideration by our officials and citizenship. We pass it on for the consideration of our own readers. It follows:

"The editorial in The Dispatch of May 1, 'Who Knows the Answer?' may be answered to some extent by the statistics released by Highway Director John Jaster, Jr., which cover the automobile accidents on state highways outside municipalities during March. Here is one paragraph: 'Reports on the condition of drivers involved in the accidents showed 43 were intoxicated, 30 were asleep, 12 were extremely fatigued and three had physical defects. The editorial speaks of 'recklessness or dreaminess,' the intoxicated would naturally be reckless—and possibly the dreamers (or the 30 who were asleep) were the very light drinkers. To the victim of the wreck it makes little difference whether it was caused by one intoxicated or one in the blissful stage of dreaminess."

"Of course we always did (and always shall) have the road hog and the dumbbell as a menace, and the percentage of unpreventable accidents; but the newspapers seem strangely quiet on the subject of the cause of the terrible increase in automobile accidents since the repeal of the 'noble experiment.' And let us put the responsibility for the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment where it belongs; it was the lawlessness of the 'better class' (not the best class which caused the amendment to fail, and they are no doubt blissfully ignorant of that fact. The more enlightened one is the greater his influence and responsibility. I wonder what highway conditions will be, say five years from now, when the youngsters become victims of the thirst they are cultivating?"

"Alcohol and gasoline or alcohol and cigarettes are dangerous combinations. Liquor, cigarettes—fire; liquor, gasoline—wrecks; liquor cigarettes, gasoline: Death and destruction. It does not take an Einstein to figure out the above equation. It has been verified thru the newspapers repeatedly."

"For the future: 'Who knows the answer?'"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor, Recorder:
I intended to have you forward the Recorder to my new address but overlooked it. We left home June 4 and are now located at Gaylord, Michigan. We will be here until June 28 after which time we will go to the Upper Peninsula for a few days. Will appreciate it if you will mail the old papers since June 4 and including June 27 to me here.

There are four of us in our party, Prof. F. D. Caton and bride and Mrs. Renaker and myself. We are having a great time fishing and rowing on Lake Osego and horse shoe pitching. I am feeling better.

Respectfully,
J. G. RENAKER.

SEEN and HEARD

around the

National Capital

By CARTER FIELD

Washington.—Old human nature is working for an early adjournment of congress. It is not so much the heat, although despite the local boosters, Washington is no summer resort. But the senate and house chambers are both air-cooled, and so, for that matter, is the White House. As a matter of fact, the national lawmakers are probably more comfortable here than they would be at home. Not all of them, of course, but most of them.

The answer to the desire for early adjournment has nothing to do with temperature. It is the overpowering sense of futility, developed sharply since the Supreme court decision on NRA. Laws are being passed, which half the members believe will be held unconstitutional by the high court later on. Everything that is being done is frankly and openly admitted by the administration leaders to be of the stop-gap variety.

Hence there is no feeling that what they are doing is really constructive—that it is the kind of thing to which they can point with pride later on, telling their admiring constituents that they helped frame this or that.

Senators have told the writer in the last few days that they feel they are on Ickes' "work relief." Just going through motions on more or less fruitless errands. In short—time serving. But—senators and members of the house are not paid by the day. They are paid by the year. Staying in Washington a month or two longer than is absolutely necessary does not put a penny into their pockets.

Like Home Publicity

All of which might not be important if there was really important work to be done here. Oftimes senators and members of the house figure that it is much better politics for them to stay on the job in Washington than to go home. The publicity in their hometown papers is better. The folks back home think of the congressman as sweating in the sultry heat of Washington, working for their interests. Especially if his secretary is a good letter writer.

But there is very little percentage for that sort of thing in the present situation. The country isn't much interested in this stop-gap legislation. Huey Long managed to get headlines by talking all night to stop a bill, which passed early next morning anyhow. But the average senator doesn't want to do that, and the average representative would be preoccupied by the rules.

So there has developed a real yen on the part of the legislators to go home. Which may bring about adjournment earlier than most observers had figured—especially right after the NRA decision.

Prior to that the prospect never was for an early adjournment. These dispatches consistently held to the idea of an August adjournment, not on any detailed calculations as to how long the White House "must" list would take, but on the theory that something always turns up to consume time in the senate. And it is the senate, not the house, which determines time.

Joint Selling

A wave of "joint selling companies" is in the offing as a result of the expiration of the codes, and the determination of the administration to prosecute anti-trust suits.

The original bargain of NRA, it will be recalled, was that industry was to agree to pay better wages, work its labor shorter hours, eliminate child labor, and stop chiseling, and in return the government would go lightly on anti-trust prosecutions, permitting all sorts of agreements as to prices, distributions of territory, etc.

Naturally industry liked the latter, whatever it thought about the price it had to pay, and right now it wants to continue the benefits, if any, from what have been regarded as combinations in restraint of trade.

Whereupon many eyes have been turned on the famous Appalachian Coals, Inc., case. This is a case in which a large number of coal producers joined in having one corporation sell their product. The avowed object was to cut selling costs—to abandon the ruinous cost of each coal operator maintaining an office and selling force in every important market.

The government did not like this setup at the time. The Department of Justice pointed out forcefully that actually the selling company in question maintained, in many cases, separate offices and selling organizations for every coal producer it represented.

But the Supreme court, after lengthy arguments and due consideration, held that this practice did not violate the anti-trust laws.

Now there are some who think that the high court took due cognizance of the fact that coal is a more or less distressed industry; that if the same case were presented to the high court affecting a prosperous industry the decision might be different.

Astute lawyers here, looking into the situation for a number of industries, do not think so. They think the language of the court in deciding the NRA case shows conclusively that the court is not willing to temper the Constitution to the shorn lamb.

Here's the Point

The whole point now is whether some industry which, if it attempted to get together and frame price scales for its products or divide up terriories in which its various corporations would sell, would run afoul of the anti-trust laws, could avoid this danger by following the Appalachian Coals example.

Determined to enforce the Sherman and Clayton acts, the Department of Justice is concerned over the situation. It fears a number of industries will attempt this plan—far more effective, it believes, than ever were the famous Judge Gary dinners, at which the steel trade fixed prices by mutual consent, thus getting around the law.

All the government agencies, incidentally, are interested, notably that of Public Works Administrator Ickes, who lets out loud blasts every now and then attacking agreements by producers of this or that commodity sold to the government.

Just what Ickes would say if the cement industry had a common selling agency is not hard to imagine. One lawyer, studying the problem for an industry having nothing to do with cement, commented with a grin that his industry would take pains to have different bids submitted by the various units whenever the government wanted any of its products. Thus, he thought, it could avoid running afoul of Ickes and all the departments except that presided over by Homer S. Cummings.

Meanwhile industry generally takes no satisfaction whatever out of the Harrison amendment to NRA extension. As some of the business men here observed, it gives business the right to do everything it could do already without congressional approval, and denies it the right to violate any law.

Question of Power

Not even in the hottest days of disunion between Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and Donald R. Richberg were the friends of the two men further apart than they are right now over the solution to the problem presented by the Supreme court's invalidating the Blue Eagle.

Richberg's followers are all demanding an amendment to the Constitution. That, they contend, is the only way to meet the situation.

Johnson's friends are insisting that there is a perfectly constitutional method of solving the whole problem.

The real difference between the two, which would appear to be a matter for constitutional lawyers to determine, is actually not that at all, but a difference in powers desired for the federal government, with the Richberg crowd being for absolute federal powers. And with the President, very vigorously, siding with the Richberg crowd, but giving the Johnson crowd a chance to show what it can do.

Hence the Shanley bill. This little publicized—so far—document, is threatening to attract a good deal of attention before congress adjourns. It imposes, under the taxing power of the Constitution, an excise tax of $1 a year on every person, firm, corporation, or other form of business enterprise engaged in or whose business directly affects commerce among the states or with foreign nations.

It fixes a 40-hour week, for general practice, noting exceptions. It fixes a minimum wage of 50 cents an hour, saying that piece workers' pay shall be graduated so that the lowest will not fall below the 50-cent-an-hour minimum. It fixes an eight-hour day. It provides for time and a half for overtime in emergency work. It provides for collective bargaining.

Richberg Idea

What is in the minds of the Richberg group is clearly shown by some quotations from the language of the bill. For example:

"Interstate commerce as hereinabove defined is hereby declared to be in the nature of a public utility; and every such enterprise engaged therein shall in respect thereto, and in connection with the payment of the excise tax hereinabove provided and apportionment thereto, be subject to regulation and control in the manner and with respect to the matters herein-after provided."

Also:

"The congress hereby finds as a fact and declares that the employment of children in the trades and industries within the jurisdiction of this act, and underpayment of employees and the working of employees for excessive hours and under conditions which are hazardous in nature or dangerous to health, the denial or obstruction to employees of the right to bargain collectively with respect to their wages, hours and other working conditions, and unfair practices or methods of competition affect directly the flow of interstate commerce; and that, to facilitate and promote the full utilization of the nation's productive capacity and the free flow of such commerce, it is necessary and vital that basic standards be laid down with respect thereto."

And:
"Commerce among the states has become so interwoven in the fabric of economic life that our congressional experience and knowledge dictates that finding that those agencies of industry which are directly and immediately linked to interstate commerce must be deemed objects of interstate commerce in the interests of national defense and otherwise for the public welfare."

Senator Borah was not consulted, it might be stated, perhaps unnecessarily. Best judgment is that the constitutional lawyers in the house and senate will relieve the Supreme court of any embarrassment in ever passing on it. But it shows how a good many minds rather important in the New Deal are working.

FORTY YEARS AGO

From the Files of The Boone County Recorder

(ISSUE OF JUNE 26, 1895)

Our friend, Wm. Clayton, of Hebron, presented the Recorder with a bunch of nice flowers, the other day. They being bound together with a one dollar bill. That is a financial scheme heartily endorsed at this office.

J. C. Revell left for Louisville last Sunday, going by Owenton, Owen county, where he will spend a couple of days with friends.

G. G. Hughes was in Frankfort a day or two last week.

Malcus Souther and wife were in town one day last week.

D. E. Castleman and wife were in Cincinnati shopping, last Friday.

Mrs. Dr. Furnish is visiting the Doctors mother at Wheatley, Owen county.

Mrs. Eva Huey was the guest of her brother W. C. Brown and wife, a few days last week.

J. J. Lillard was a guest of his old friend W. A. Crigler, of Bromley, a few days last week.

Sheriff Roberts and wife, of Burlington, were visiting friends here Saturday, Charley has equipped himself with a new buggy.

We were blessed with a nice rain, last Thursday. It was badly needed.

Jamison Rogers, one of our estimable friends, has announced himself a candidate for County Clerk. Mr. Rogers is a sound Democrat died-in-the-wool. He has the confidence of the people here, and if elected will serve them successfully.

Dr. James F. McCormac has located here, instead of Warsaw as was stated a few weeks ago.

Boys, when in town and want a lunch just send an order down to Mr. Marshall, our clever druggist, for sandwiches.

Mrs. N. E. Hamilton, who has charge of the League Institute, will open a select school Sept., the 9.

Mrs. Mattie Ransom has been very ill with whooping cough.

Petersburg
F. C. Laws has been seriously injured at Indianapolis. While collecting fares he fell off his car, and has been unconscious ever since. He is not expected to recover.

John Geisler, who operates a planer, got his hand caught in the machine, Thursday, and all the flesh and muscles were stripped off, exposing the bones. Drs. Grant and Tilley dressed the wound, which although painful, they do not consider serious.

Constance
The body of W. Works, who was drowned last Thursday, was found at Home City, and brought here for burial.

The Constance base ball club has sent several challenges to the Hebron club but have heard nothing from them.

Mrs. Coker died of a complication of diseases last Thursday. John Klassner is very ill.

William Weaver will serve as chairman of the personal workers committee, Walter Brown as chairman of Ushers Committee and Franklin Huey as chairman of Finance Committee.

Rev. Cline Vice, a member of the Burlington church, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Vice, of Burlington, R. D. 1, a graduate of Georgetown College, and at present a student at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. He is a consecrated man and possesses exceptional ability as a preacher of the Gospel. For several years he has given himself to christian service in his home church and is highly loved and respected by all the members. He conducted a successful meeting at Burlington last summer.

Special musical numbers will be rendered each evening during the meeting. The dates—June 30—July 7. The time—7:30 each evening. You are most cordially invited to attend.

DEATHS

JOHN F. WHITESIDE

John F. Whiteside, aged 63 years, of 117 Graves Ave., Erlanger, passed away early Friday morning at the Jewish Hospital, Cincinnati, following an operation. The remains were removed to the Talliaferro Funeral Home for preparation.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Geneva Whiteside, two brothers and one sister, besides many friends. He was an engineer in the Chief Engineer's office of the Southern Ry., Cincinnati, Ohio, and had been an employee of that System for 29 years. Fellow office employees acted as pall bearers. Funeral services were conducted at the Talliaferro Funeral Home Saturday at 4 o'clock by the Rev. R. D. Martin, Pastor of the Erlanger Baptist church. Saturday night the remains were forwarded to John City, Tennessee, his old home, for interment on Sunday afternoon.

COURTNEY WILLIAMS

Courtney Williams, aged 52 years, passed away Saturday noon at Christ Hospital, Cincinnati, following an operation for appendicitis. The remains were removed to the Talliaferro Funeral Home for preparation.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Eva Williams, one daughter Elizabeth Williams, three brothers, J. T., Eli and James Williams, four sisters, Miss Lottie Williams, Mrs. A. P. Dickerson, Mrs. Lane Riggs and Mrs. Jack Corbin, besides a host of other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted at his late residence near Bullittsville, on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock by the Rev. Paris B. Akin, brother-in-law of the deceased. Interment in Petersburg cemetery.

The pall-bearers were A. P. Dickerson, Lane Riggs, Jack Corbin, J. T., Eli and James Williams.

Funeral Director Philip Talliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

ANNA A. HOGAN

Anna A. Hogan, only child of David and Jane Hogan, was born at Burlington, Boone County, Ky., June 14, 1866. Was united in marriage to Charles E. Daugherty at the First Baptist church at Cincinnati, Ohio, February 20, 1906. Departed this life at her home near Maxson, Kansas, April 26, 1935 at the age of 68 years, 10 months and 18 days.

After her marriage they came to Osage County, Kansas where they have since lived, except for a period of 4 years when they resided in Shawnee county.

She leaves to mourn her going her husband, Charles E. Daugherty; 1 step-son, Horace B. Daugherty, of Marshalltown, Iowa; 1 foster son, Lewis E. Bonstelle, of Albany, New York; 1 half-sister, Hostense Rice of Prichett, Colorado and a host of neighbors and friends.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon from the Federated church at Quehemo, conducted by the minister, Fred B. Benson.

Mrs. Daugherty was a beautiful character. She has left us to be with her Savior and we shall miss her. We shall not wish her back but will prepare to go with her.

Their souls are past, their work is done.

And they are fully blest; They fought the fight, the victory won, And entered into rest.

Then let our sorrows cease to flow. God has recalled his own; But let our hearts in every woe, still say, "Thy will be Done."

CARD OF THANKS

We sincerely thank all who helped us in so many ways and were so kind and sympathetic during the illness and last rites of our beloved wife and mother.

C. E. and Horace B. Daugherty.

William Phillips, a former employee of the Recorder but now holding down a position at the Central State Hospital, Lakeland, Ky., writes that he wishes the Recorder mailed to him. He also states that as yet he has not been hurt, bruised, or killed at his present work. The Recorder is betting that these Boone county boys, Phillips and Greenup, will hold their own in their respective positions.

W.N.U. SERVICE

CHAPTER VII.—Halg, trailing Eileen and Doctor Oestler, was lured into a drug-impregnated path of feathers. Oestler reports that he left Eileen shopping, and that under suspicion his story cannot be shaken. Halg escapes from the drug trap and shoots Joseph, one of the store's clerks. Eileen, who has been drugged, remains unconscious in an Arab's mansion, Yu'an's headquarters.

Dawson Halg still only twenty paces behind.

The shop was an Arab in appearance. They went down two steps into the interior from a dimly lit corner the proprietor, whom the guide dressed as Mohammed, appeared.

Mohammed was the most venerable specimen of a living Egyptian upon whom Eileen had ever set eyes. His face was a mass of tiny wrinkles, and of the color of a walnut shell. His eyes, bright as a snake's, lurked deep in cavities resembling small caves. Wisps of dirty white hair, almost indistinguishable from his turban, and a straggly beard of the same, outlined that aged countenance.

Mohammed bowed low, opened a door hidden in the dark recess from which he had emerged, and stood aside. Eileen glanced back in the direction of the street.

Dawson Halg was outside. Confidently, now, she stepped through into a big room—to pause, breathless with astonishment. The fortune teller had not exaggerated. This was, indeed, a wonder house, a treasury of beautiful things! And there were other rooms beyond.

"You see, my lady," said the palmist softly, "what I tell you true." It was indeed true, since this, and not the establishment in Stamboul, was the principal warehouse of that great and mysterious industry controlled by Yu'an Hee See. Here, to Port Said, came the choicest pieces, to be distributed for sale.

Some even found their buyers in Turkey, some in France, and some in England.

Eileen experienced a sense of bewilderment. It was amazing, in fact, terrifying... opening as it did out of that tawdry little shop—what did it mean? What could it mean? She looked around that Aladdin's cave, and slowly the realization came to her that only a Rockefeller could have bid for the contents.

CHAPTER VII

Dawson Halg pulled up before the shop of Mohammed.

Further consideration had convinced him that his earlier fears for Eileen were groundless. His own life hung upon a thread. This he recognized. And he scrupulously avoided overhanging windows and watched warily anyone who walked too closely behind him. But he had no intention of leaving Eileen alone in the company of Doctor Oestler.

He entered the shop, and looked about him. The place was empty. Halg clapped his hands—and a moment later the aged proprietor appeared, bowing low.

"What can I do for you, my gentleman?" he created.

"I came to join my friends, who arrived here just ahead of me," Halg replied.

"Ah!" Mohammed nodded. "Yes, yes. Wait but one moment."

The door of the treasure house was opened, and he had a glimpse of a long, low room lined with shelves and cases. The sound of Mohammed's stuffing slippers grew faint—died away.

A blank wall faced the shop, and there were no passers-by. It was a queer backwater, and Halg wondered what had induced Eileen to visit it. He stared again through the open door. Then he moved forward and looked along the room.

Like a flash of summer lightning revelation came. This was a branch—or perhaps the parent establishment—of Jo Lung's Limehouse emporium. Came the sound of shuffling foot steps returning. The aged Arab reappeared.

"My gentleman," he said, "I am sorry to keep you waiting, but your friends have gone."

"Gone?"

"By the other door." Halg stared through dimness, seeking for the expression in those sunken eyes. "They didn't stay long!" he snapped.

The old Arab spread his palms eloquently. "They buy nothing, sir." "Show me the way to this other door," Dawson Halg directed. "I shall overtake them more quickly by going out that way."

Mohammed bowed low. "Please follow," he said.

Halg entered, his hand upon the butt of an automatic. Yes, the very arrangement of the place told him now that this was the receiving house. Jo Lung's was merely a salesroom. But—Eileen—

"This way, my gentleman," The Arab mounting three steps, indicated a further room beyond.

Dawson Halg followed. A second treasure cave stretched before him. There was a sort of narrow passage connecting this room with another beyond. Through this corridor the aged man was hurrying. Halg increased his pace, entered the passage almost on heels of Mohammed—and...

... floor collapsed beneath his feet a stifling drug-like smell swept meet, to envelop him, as he fell.

... late, he knew... to what "other" this old friend had led him... the "Feathers!"

... for Heatherley, and the two passengers from the Wallaroo... at a table outside the Eastern exchange, long drinks with straws before them. Presently Doctor Heatherley glanced at his watch.

"Our friends are late," said he. "They must have found the Mystery shop."

"What's the Mystery shop?" one of the women asked.

Doctor Heatherley smiled. "All sorts of stories are told about Port Said," he replied, "most of them frankly lies. There's supposed to be a store here compared with which Simon Arz's is merely Woolworth's. I've never found anybody to lead me to the Mystery shop, but I believe there is such a shop. Doctor Oestler may know where it is."

Even as he spoke, Doctor Oestler, smiling broadly, bore down upon them. "Well, my friends," he said, taking a chair, removing his hat and mopping his forehead. "I have walked quickly, hoping to overtake our Miss Kearney."

"Hoping to overtake her?" said the ship's doctor blankly. "But she was with you! You said that you and Miss Kearney were going to make some purchases elsewhere."

Doctor Oestler nodded his head vigorously. "It is so," he agreed, "it is so. Yes, we went, as I said. This shop is not a hundred yards from here. It belongs to a Greek—ha?—who has most excellent perfumes. Miss Kearney also knows it well. I excuse myself—ha?—while she is making her selection, for I see it will occupy her for at least a quarter of an hour—yes?" He shrugged deprecatingly. "I call at another establishment that I know of, and purchase—ha—these five hundred cigarettes, look—then hurry back. Miss Kearney has already left the shop of Ostopolos, and so I continue to hurry—and here, yes, you see me."

The ship's doctor stood up. "It sounds very odd to me," he said. "Port Said's healthy enough in these days, but not for a woman walking about alone. I'll walk back with you." Doctor Heatherley turned to the two women. "Please excuse us for five minutes," he added. "Don't start back until we rejoin you, or you might get lost, too."

With Doctor Oestler he set out. Before a small shop not more than two hundred yards from the Eastern exchange, they paused. A suave gentleman who wore a black pointed beard smiled agreeably.

"I left a lady here about twenty minutes ago," said Doctor Oestler. "You remember?"

"I remember, sir."

"When I returned, she had gone—do you remember?"

The surgeon was watching the speaker. "Did she say where she was going?" he demanded.

"No, sir. She purchased a small sample of jasmine, such as this—" he indicated one—"a larger size of attar of roses, of this kind—" he held up a long cut-glass phial shaped like a square ruler—"and three small tubes of other essences—I forget which she selected."

The surgeon stared at Doctor Oestler, and then, without a word, walked out of the shop. "I suppose there's nothing to worry about," he admitted, "so, as you seem to know an A-I Egyptian tobacco merchant in this town, doctor, I like a really genuine Egyptian cigarette myself, and my stock is low. Do you mind taking me along?"

"But not at all!" Doctor Oestler replied genially.

When they reached the store, the Egyptian owner immediately recognized Doctor Oestler. The ship's surgeon, baffled, bought fifty cigarettes and departed. But when they returned again to the Eastern exchange, Eileen Kearney had not returned.

At the end of a very uneasy half hour, Doctor Heatherley stood up suddenly. "Let us see the ladies into a taxi for the ship," he suggested. "And then, perhaps, Doctor Oestler, you would step along to the American consulate with me?"

As Yu'an Hee See sat at a large writing table, he pressed a bell. A Chinese servant entered, and dropped on one knee, extending a silver tray upon which a paper lay. Taper fingers took the document, the servant went out.

Yu'an Hee See read:

"No news of the Hangman. May take it for granted he is drowned."

"Len Chow has succeeded. The lady is on her way."

"Joseph, the new Armenian, did good work here."

"Mohammed reports Dawson... chief Inspector C. I. D., is dead."

"Joseph, recommended by Mohammed, joins up here in place of Fernand."

"R. M. S. Wallaroo in the Canal."

British and American consuls Port Said very active.

"Position on Wallaroo strained in regard to doctor and madame, but legally secure."

"Len Chow due at Keneh tomorrow five o'clock. Franz Hartog reports from Cairo."

"Polodos arrived Stamboul tonight."

Yu'an Hee See removed his glasses remaining motionless for several minutes, hissing softly. Then, again he pressed the bell. The Chinese servant came instantly to his summons.

"Effendi Aswani Pasha."

The servant bowed low, and with drew silently.

Port Said was seething with indignation. When towards dusk it became evident that Eileen Kearney had been abducted, for no other conclusion remained, both the American and British consulates set to work in earnest.

The town was combing with a nicety calculated to discover a rat in a corn field. But no trace could be found of the missing girl. Doctor Oestler's account of what had happened was simple enough. Miss Kearney had suggested walking along to the shop of the scent merchant, and he had accompanied her. The doctor's statement was confirmed both by the Greek scent merchant and by the Egyptian tobaccoist. Mr. Len Chow, it was learned from the Eastern exchange, had caught the train to Cairo, only having had lunch in the hotel. Of Franz Hartog no trace could be found.

The news, of course, was known on board, and a state of consternation prevailed. Port Said was living up to its ancient reputation. Every woman passenger who was ashore hurried back to the ship.

Captain Peterson paced his cabin, his tanned, lined face haggard with anxiety. The company's agent sat at the desk, Shale, the British consul, standing beside him, and the American consul stood by the door.

"It's all very well, Mr. Forman," said Shale, addressing his American confere. "But what can I do?"

"What can you do, sir?" the other retorted. "A young American citizen—daughter of my friend Kearney in Colombo—is kidnapped in broad daylight when she is in the company of a suspected person! What can you do?"

"Suspected, yes," cried the other desperately. "But that's not proof!"

"What puzzles me," the captain interjected, trying to pour oil on troubled waters, "is the absence of Inspector Halg. If we had the authority of Scotland Yard behind us, we might be able to act. Besides, what evidence there is, he holds."

"It's little enough," said the British consul—"unless he had added to it since this morning."

Mr. Forman's face was very stern. "In short, sir," he said, "you don't intend to take any steps about this gang of crooks you're got on board; although you know—whatever the evidence may be, and I say it—n the evidence—that they are certainly responsible?"

"But the Inspector himself assured me that there was nothing to justify an arrest," said Captain Peterson.

"Another point; the attempt to murder Inspector Halg off here last night is good enough to show the type of desperadoes we're dealing with."

"That's true enough," the captain admitted. "But nobody on board ever saw the missing Chinaman speak to a soul except to the stewards."

"There's nothing," Shale explained wearily, "nothing whatever, to connect him with the rest of the gang. Surely you can see that, Forman? I mean, the attempted murder can't be used as evidence to hold these people."

Forman tugged savagely at his mustache. "That man Oestler is lying," he declared outright. "You all think the same as I do. How can I ever face Mike Kearney with a tale like this!"

cabin, where he had been submitted to a close cross-examination on the exact circumstances of his visit to those two shops with Eileen. However as the shopkeepers had been questioned and had confirmed his statement in every particular, there was nothing whatever to go upon. His papers were in order, or appeared to be. He had even produced correspondence which seemed to leave no doubt upon the point. And since he was certainly bound for Australia, common sense suggested that this part of his story, at least, was true.

The woman Ednam produced a contract with an Australian vandeville circuit and displayed a number of professional photographs, programmes, and billing matter relating to recent engagements in Europe. She declared that although she had made the acquaintance of Doctor Oestler on board, she had never met him before.

The agent was in a quandary. To hold the ship meant transferring mails and a loss of thousands of pounds to the company. And, if Eileen were found any time during the night or early morning she could easily be transported to Suez in the rejoin the Wallaroo there.

"If only Inspector... up!" Forman exclaimed.

"I'm putting all my faith in the... because he's evidently on the... I still have hopes."

"But there's nothing to show," man cried, "that he's on the job."

"If I understand the situation, one has seen this man, Halg, since he left the ship early this morning."

"It's my belief," said Captain Peterson, "that he was following Miss Kearney and Doctor Oestler."

What IS a Sound Loan?

A sound loan for a commercial bank is a loan which the borrower believes, and the bank expects, will be paid within a reasonable time—a loan which if not fully repaid at the maturity of the note is substantially reduced by regular periodic installments. Loans that are regularly reduced enable a bank to accommodate patrons whose needs may be more essential. A bank must have a turn-over of money in the same way that a merchant must have a turn-over of merchandise, with this difference—bank's turn-over affects the credit facilities of the entire community.

The ability and intention to repay a loan by a planned program, and within a reasonable time, is the essence of a good loan. The giving of collateral does not repay a loan. Collateral is merely a pledge to guarantee the borrower's ability and promise to repay the loan within a reasonable time.

YOU ALWAYS GET BETTER QUALITY AT NO HIGHER PRICE WHEN YOU BUY A FIRESTONE TIRE WITH FIRESTONE NAME AND GUARANTEE

Tires may look alike on the outside, but on the inside where blowouts start, they are different. Firestone Tires are made blowout-proof by Gum-Dipping, a patented extra process which soaks every cotton cord and insulates every strand with pure liquid rubber. In fact, every 100 pounds of cotton cords absorb eight additional pounds of liquid rubber. This special process prevents internal friction and heat, the main cause of blowouts. No other make of tire is Gum-Dipped, yet you pay no more for Firestone blowout-proof protection.

The make of tires you buy for your car becomes a matter of vital importance when you realize that in 1934 alone 43,000 accidents were caused by blowouts, punctures and skidding.

THERE ARE THREE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS THAT WILL SOLVE YOUR PROBLEM OF WHAT TIRES TO BUY

1 "Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

Recent tests by a leading University show that Firestone High Speed Non-Skid Tires stop a car 15% quicker than any other of the leading makes.

For eight consecutive years Firestone Tires have been on the winning car in the dangerous Pike's Peak Race where a skid means death. This is undisputed evidence that Firestone gives car owners greatest protection against skidding.

2 "Are they blowout-proof?"

Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have the most amazing records for being blowout-proof of any tires ever built. In the grueling 500-Mile Race at Indianapolis, May 30th, every one of the 33 cars was equipped with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. Kelly Pettilo won the race and broke the record over this 26-year-old rough brick track without tire trouble—in fact, not one of the 33 drivers had tire trouble of any kind.

Ab Jenkins drove his 5,000 pound car on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires over the hot salt beds of Utah, 3,000 miles in 23½ hours, at an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, with temperatures as high as 120°, without tire trouble of any kind. These are most amazing proofs of blowout protection ever known.

3 "Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

Firestone High Speed Tires not only give you more than 50% longer wear, but also lowest cost per mile. This is made possible by the tough, wear-resisting tread built with higher shoulders and a wider, flatter contour. This thick, rugged, scientifically designed tread is held securely to the Gum-Dipped cord body by Firestone's patented construction of two extra layers of cords under the tread. This is a special construction feature not used in any other tire. Unequalled mileage records by thousands of car owners add undisputed evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

BIG BONE LICK

ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED AND PLANS EXPLAINED

In great numbers the buffalo and the elephant, the deer and the moose, once crowded the highway to Big Bone Lick where just recently from areas in three states came thirty-seven people to a country school house. The school house has been there for a hundred years and has seen many things, but none more momentous perhaps, than that which took place there on the night of June 17th, 1935, when the thirty-seven met. Into the school house came doctor and lawyer, business men, a scientist, farmer, townsman and laborer to found a society of common interest to them all.

This place, the Town Hall of Florence, Kentucky, once the school room of John Uri Lloyd, witnessed the birth of the Big Bone Lick Association, which had been formed to develop and excavate at Big Bone Lick, Kentucky, famous for two centuries as a spot where elephants bones have been found.

Outstanding among plans of the Association, is its determination to keep whatever may be found at Big Bone Lick. Those bones have been taken away. Those which remain stay there. Officers have been elected and plans have been made which include historic sites in Indiana and Ohio. A museum will be built. Scientists will excavate. Subscriptions will be signed to those of the public who wish to join the Association. Subscriptions are of four kinds. The first is the active which entitles the member to vote and view findings free of charge and to receive the publications of the Association for the period of a year. The second allows the same privileges for life and the third called contributory provides for the donation of larger sums which will entitle the holder to a permanent record of his name in bronze plus the other advantages of membership. The fourth is called resident subscription and is limited to residents of Boone county in the Big Bone region. Its time is one year and entitles holder to viewing of the findings and to have access to the publications of the Association.

Officers of the Big Bone Lick Association are John Uri Lloyd, president; former resident of Boone county and now Cincinnati scientist and writer, Harry B. Mackay, Boone county lawyer, first vice president, John Thomas Lloyd, son of the elder Lloyd, second vice president; Horace C. Williamson, Cincinnati business man, secretary, and Wallace S. Espy, Cincinnati banker, treasurer. The Board of Directors consists of twelve members representing the three states mentioned.

Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Cropper and son Billy, of Winchester, are here for a few days visit with his mother, Mrs. Lorena Cropper.

Robt. Hensley spent the week-end in Lexington and stopped in Paris Monday to visit friends there.

50,000 JOBS

IN STATE ARE IN PROSPECT UNDER ORDERS FROM WASHINGTON

Under orders to expedite action, bar politics or other favoritism and give permanent public works the preference George H. Goodman, Kentucky work relief administrator, has returned to Louisville with wide authority for launching a programme calling for the expenditure of between $75,000,000 and $90,000,000 in the state during the next year.

This undertaking will be the largest of its kind in the history of the state. Mr. Goodman said that, under the general plan worked out during his three-days of conferences with federal officials here, it is proposed to put 50,000 to 60,000 persons in "definite employment" within a very short time. There are now about 105,000 persons on relief rolls, many of whom, however, are engaged in temporary work-relief inaugurated by Administrator Goodman. A much more comprehensive programme than that contemplated before Mr. Goodman came here is now in prospect.

While Mr. Goodman was not ready to specify projects, the tentative schedule in which he will start work include schools and hospitals; improvement of non-federal marked highways; recreational facilities, grade-crossing elimination and similar undertakings.

Mr. S. L. Cowen, of Wyoming, Ohio, was the dinner guest of Miss Nell Martin Monday evening.

TALIAFERRO-DENNY

Wedding bells rang Wednesday for Philip Taliaferro, Erlanger funeral director. Taliaferro was married to Miss Shirley Hudsey Denny, at 4 p. m., in the home of the bride in Lancaster, Ky., by the Rev. Garland Rotenberry, pastor of the Presbyterian church in that town. The marriage was revealed Thursday.

Following the wedding the couple left on a motor trip to the mountains of North Carolina, where they will spend their honeymoon. The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Marshal K. Denny of Lancaster.

EXPLANATION

OF NEW WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION IN KENTUCKY

When asked how workers would be selected for the new Works Progress Administration program in Kentucky George H. Goodman, administrator, pointed to a bulletin issued over his signature and containing instructions for his organization throughout the State. An excerpt from the bulletin follows: "Orders have been received by the Works Progress Administrators to the effect that cases containing eligible workers which received relief during the month of May, 1935, are to receive priority for employment on WPA Projects.

"Names of cases containing eligible workers, appearing on the Blue May cases lists, as submitted to E. C. Hursey, are therefore, to be considered as Workers having priority for employment in your county."

"Cases containing eligible workers, which have been added to your relief rolls, subsequent to May 31, 1935, are to be eligible for employment on WPA Projects after the May workable cases have been employed."

CITIZENS' MILITARY TRAINING CAMP OPENS

The Citizens' Military Training Camp which opened this week at Ft. Harrison, in twenty-four hours, transformed 1,700 young men who have come from far and near, into well turned out CLT Candidates. Traveling along a path which starts with the boys divesting themselves of all clothing and emerging at the other end an enrollee, the boys will enter upon a thirty day period of training and recreation designed to benefit them both mentally and physically.

On July 4th the boys will take the Oath of Allegiance for their thirty day stay, to obey the rules of the camp which are designed for the welfare of all. The following day will see the candidate in the full swing of his training, military drill and instruction in the mornings, tempered with talks on citizenship and health lectures with athletics in the afternoon. All equipment is furnished the boy and various athletic teams will spring up like magic. The time will pass quickly for the boys and before they know that the time has arrived, they will be back in their civilian clothes, their month at the Citizens' Military Training camp have slipped away. Back to their homes, the 1,700 young men will have great tales to tell of their eventful and interesting month as guests of their "Uncle Sam."

CARL PETERS DROWNED AT RABBIT HASH FERRY LANDING

Carl Peters, 22, was drowned in the Ohio river at the ferry landing, Rabbit Hash, Sunday afternoon. Peters and a number of young folks from that neighborhood were bathing when the water began to raise, causing an undertow. This drew young Peters under and it was with difficulty that others in the party reached shore safely. The body of Peters has not been found, as it drifted very rapidly in the swift water.

It is reported that the cause of the sudden raise in the river at that place was caused by the bear traps at the McVie dam being opened on account of a raise in the upper river.

Peters resided with R. L. Hodges and has no relatives in this county.

FLORENCE MAN APPOINTED TO FEDERAL POSITION

Stanley L. Lucas of Florence, Ky., formerly manager of the Summit Hills Country Club has received notice of his appointment as Income Tax Auditor in the Bureau of Internal Revenue. He will leave for Detroit June 30th where he will be in training for two months.

EMPLOYMENT

TO BE EFFECTED BY CHANGE IN ORGANIZATIONS

Estimating results of the change from the Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration to the new Works Progress Administration, George H. Goodman, administrator, aid employment in the state, area and county offices would be reduced fully one half. By the same token Mr. Goodman expects the cost of overhead to be reduced materially.

"Every Effort," Mr. Goodman said, "will be made to develop the highest type of Works Progress Administration organizations in Kentucky through the use of persons trained in the work of the Kentucky Emergency Administration." When asked to amplify his statement Mr. Goodman said it was his intent and purpose to select from the old Kentucky Emergency Relief organization the "cream" to carry on the new program.

"It is essential," Mr. Goodman continued, "that we have an organization of this kind when we consider the magnitude of the job ahead of us. If I am to be responsible for the spending of from $75,000,000 to $90,000,000 in Kentucky certainly I am going to look to an organization as nearly infallible as is humanly possible to obtain, embodying efficiency and thoroughness as well as honesty and integrity."

ESPY NAMED SECRETARY OF BIG BONE LICK ASSN.

Wallace Espy, Cincinnati, was appointed secretary of the Big Bone Lick Association by its directors and Bernard Soutgate, Covington, was appointed Chairman of the Real Estate Commission, with instructions to ask Dr. Willard J. Jilison, of Frankfort, to make a survey of the land for fossils.

The Big Bone Lick Association is a corporation formed, not for profit to take steps to preserve Big Bone Lick, famed as a lick of pioneer Kentucky days, in which fossils of mammoth and bison, and other prehistoric monsters have been found.

A public meeting at the Lick is to take place in the near future.

WOMAN'S CLUB

D. H. J. A. LEADS STATE

FOR MONTH OF MAY The Boone-Carroll-Shelby County Association led the state in herd averages for the month of May according to the State D. H. J. A. monthly report. Three hundred and sixty-eight cows averaged 661 pounds of milk and 31.5 pounds of butterfat per cow. Mr. John W. Hood is testing in the association.

Mr. Joel Gray, of near Burlington, with 104 purebred Gernsey cows led the association with an average of 966 pounds of milk and 46.5 pounds of butterfat per cow for the month. Mr. Gray's herd has led the association a record of which he is justly proud. Mr. O. R. Russ, of Florence, Ky., R. D. with eight pure bred and grade Jersey cows producing 934 pounds of milk and 46.0 pounds of fat is the owner of the second high herd in the association.

WILL HOLD BAKERY SALE AT FLORENCE

The Althean Class of the Florence Baptist church will hold a bakery sale Saturday, July 20th, at Martin's Grocery, Dixie Highway, Florence, Ky. The public is cordially invited to patronize this sale since the proceeds will go for a worthy cause.

Mr. and Mrs. Root, Tanner, of Florence, were visiting in Burlington Friday.

Mrs. Hal Highhouse, of Ludlow, and Robt. Clutterbuck, of Crescent Springs, were callers in Burlington Tuesday.

CANDIDATES

FOR STATE OFFICE ENTER RACE IN LAST MINUTE RUSH

The race for the Democratic nomination for Governor is made up of five entrants, as the time for filing expired. The entrants in the race are Lieutenant Governor A. B. Chandler and Thomas S. Rhea, the two who are widely regarded as being the foremost contenders, and Elam Huddleston, Frederick A. Wallis and Bailey P. Wooton.

Approximately forty candidates for minor state offices filed their papers with the Secretary of State at Frankfort on Monday in the last-minute rush. The aspirants for the Republican nomination are Judge King Swope, Lexington, generally recognized as being the Republican choice and D. M. Bingham, Pineville, and Judge Sam Hurst, Beattyville.

It was reported that the Chandler side has "slated" the following candidates: Senator J. E. Wise, of Elizabethtown, for Lieutenant Governor; Beverly Mills Vincent, of Brownsville, for Attorney General, and Mrs. Laura Rowe Strow, Benton, for Secretary of State.

A complete list of candidates who have filed for the various state offices is as follows:

Governor—Thomas S. Rhea, Russellville; A. B. Chandler, Versailles; Frederick A. Wallis, Paris; Bailey

McCORMICK—MADDEN

Two widely known Boone County families were united with the marriage at Florence, Ky., of Miss Christine Madden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Madden, Florence, and Elbert McCormick, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McCormick, Verona, Ky.

The marriage was celebrated at St. Paul's Church, Florence, with Rev. Lee Egbring, assistant pastor at St. Mary's Cathedral, Covington, officiating.

Miss Madden was a recent graduate of the New Haven School at Union, Ky. McCormick is a successful young farmer.

The young couple will tour Illinois on a honeymoon trip.

FORMER BOONE COUNTY MAN VISITS COUNTY

The Recorder was favored with a visit from W. T. Crisler the past week. Mr. Crisler is a former Boone county man but has been living for a number of years in Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Crisler left Boone county about 1898 and accepted at that time a position in Brooklyn, N. Y. He has been ever since connected with the same company.

Mr. and Mrs. Crisler are visiting relatives in this county. Mr. Crisler says he will be compelled to leave in about one week but that Mrs. Crisler will remain in this section for a month longer.

FLORENCE MERCHANTS

VS. ANDY CAFE TEAM

PLAY SUNDAY AT ELSMERE An exciting base ball game will be played Sunday, July 4, at the Elsmere base ball park at which time the Florence Merchants will play the Andy Cafe team. This should be a hotly contested affair. At present the Merchants are leading the North Kentucky League and the Andy Cafe boys are in second place. Homer Eades is the manager of the Florence Merchants. The game will be called at three o'clock, (fast time).

SMALL TOBACCO GROWERS BENEFITED

Those tobacco growers who signed regular AAA tobacco contracts and have bases of 1.2 acres or less may now grow their base acreage or 0.8 of an acre which ever is smaller and sell 600 pounds or their base which ever is the smaller.

This administrative ruling No. 42 covering this point further provides that if the producer accepts this ruling that no rental, adjustment or deficiency payments will be made. This ruling will allow smaller producers to raise and market more tobacco than they otherwise could by taking a 40 per cent reduction from their base acres and pounds and may be more profitable to them, although they will receive no government payments.

Mr. and Mrs. George Cook of the Price pike, were the guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Cook. We are glad George has recovered from his recent illness.

Misses Melicent Ann and Helen Berkshire, of Midway, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Cropper Monday and were meeting with their many friends.

WALTON—CASO

Miss Irene Cason, the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Cason, of Middle Creek, and Mr. John Edward Walton, son of Mrs. Loulah B. Walton, of Bellevue, were united in marriage by Rev. Raymond Smith in the Bellevue Baptist church at 5:30 p. m., Saturday. The attendants were Miss Dorothea Cason, sister of the bride, and Mr. Howell Riley Hensley. The couple will make their home with the groom's mother at her home in Bellevue. The Recorder joins their many friends in extending them best wishes for a long and happy married life.

The acreage will be measured as rapidly as possible so that growers may know at the earliest possible date if excess acreage is planted. The cost of measuring acreage is borne by the local associations. Farmers should render the supervisors every cooperation possible as this will lower the local administrative expense. The rental payments will be made soon after the compliance acreage is checked.

SMALL FIRE AT ERLANGER DRUG STORE, ERLANGER

The Erlanger volunteer fire department was called out early last Thursday in answer to a call from the L. A. Bentler drug store, Dixie Highway and Commonwealth road, Erlanger, after persons three doors from the store noticed smoke coming up through their door. Chief Andy Scheben of the department found the smoke to be coming from an overheated electric motor in the basement of the store. Damage was confined to the motor.

4-H PROJECT WORK SHOWS MARKED IMPROVEMENT

Boone County 4-H Project work from recent tours shows the most marked improvement of any year to date according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. One hundred and eighteen projects in Florence, Petersburg and Burlington 4-H Clubs were checked and visited in tours conducted the past week.

Six of the nine 4-H community clubs have held tours to date. Grant, Walton and Verona clubs will hold their annual tours the latter part of July.

SOPHIA LLOYD MEMORIAL SOCIETY WILL HOLD MEETING

The Sophia Webster Lloyd Memorial Society will hold an all day Quilting Party and Picnic on the lawn of the Lloyd Homestead, Shelby Street, on July 6. Coffee and sandwiches will be served at 12:30 p. m. All persons that have given assistance to the work are cordially invited. The chairman of the covered dish affair is Mrs. Edward Osborne. Mr. E. O. Rouse has made a ten foot table and will present it to the Society. We thank him for his good work.

Mrs. R. L. Pearson, President.

WHEAT RESTRICTIONS REMOVED

The wheat limitation on AAA tobacco contracts for 1935 have been removed according to information received at the County Agent's Office the past week.

Growers this year who have signed AAA tobacco contracts may now harvest for market all wheat produced. Restrictions on other basic commodities grown by Boone county farmers are also removed.

MEETING WELL ATTENDED. CHANDLER ADDRESSES BOONE CO. AUDIENCE

Addressing an audience which comfortably filled the Court House in Burlington, A. B. (Happy) Chandler, candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor presented his views on the issues of the current campaign for governor of Kentucky.

Among other things he asserted that if elected, J. Lyter Donaldson, Chairman of the State Highway Commission would not remain a member of that body.

The declaration was made in answer to a statement issued a few days ago in which Thomas S. Rhea, said that if he is elected, Donaldson certainly would remain on the commission.

In his talk, Chandler said that when he started his campaign he determined to make no promises of any sort except to assure the people of the State good government, but that he now was determined to make one exception to his rule. The lieutenant governor said he would make the promise that if the voters elected him governor in November, Donaldson would be removed from the commission.

Chandler told his auditors that the Rhea forces were trying to create the impression that building of roads and the making of improvements generally, depended upon the election of Rhea. Chandler said this sort of propaganda was being spread throughout the State and especially in Donaldson's district.

Chandler reviewed his prolonged fight to defeat the sales tax law and he told of his success in giving the voters of the State the primary law.

Senator O. M. Rogers, Covington, presided. He also made an introductory address giving his reasons for supporting Mr. Chandler for governor. Senator Rogers then introduced Leonard Cook, former Boone county representative in the General Assembly who was named the Chandler campaign chairman for this county.

A delegation from Kenton and Campbell counties attended.

FLORENCE 4-H CLUB

On June 25 the X-L ALL 4-H Club had their annual tour.

There were three members, one leader, and Mr. Forkner that made the trip. Namely, Mary Carpenter, Jane Taylor, and Mary Butts members, and Mrs. Lois Dunn leader.

We met at the Florence High School at 10:00 a. m., and it took us all day to visit the members club work and to check up on their record books.

We visited 57 members and found their work and record books in a very good condition.

We had some members that dropped out of the club, but we still have a large number left.

The date set for our club picnic will be July 18.

FUNDS

ARE PROVIDED FOR EDUCATING YOUTH

President Roosevelt established a "national youth administration" to meet what he called a "great national need" by offering unemployed youth "their chance in school, their turns as apprentices and their opportunity for jobs."

The new agency will be under the work relief programme. The President set aside $50,000,000 to be used in providing work apprenticeships in private industry, in offering high school and college training for those between 16 and 25, and in giving work relief to youths.

The new undertaking was put under the direction of Miss Josephine Socie, assistant secretary of the treasury, and Aubrey Williams, assistant to Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator.

Roosevelt in announcing the plan to aid an estimated 500,000 young men and girls, said:

"I have determined that we shall do something for the nation's unemployed youth because we can ill afford to lose the skill and energy of these young men and women."

The President stressed the point in enlisting State and city aid, that every attention be given to finding jobs in private industry and promised a "minimum allowance during the duration of apprenticeship."

An average payment of $15 a month for youth on work relief was fixed; $6 a month would be given to those going to high school and $15 a month to youths in college.

THE CHURCHES

This is the fifth year of the depression, but churches in this country remain alive and continue to grow. No institution in this country has done better, few have done as well. It is evident that in times of distress men and women are willing to turn to religion and the church for moral and spiritual aid and guidance. Herein lies an opportunity for the church and its ministers. Both are entrusted with an obligation of tremendous importance. How is it being discharged?

BUILDING A TOWN OR COUNTY

Towns and Counties move on to better things and win a place in the sun, not so much because of the powerful shoves of the big leaders, but largely because of the thousands of tiny pushes of the rank and file of the people. Every word or praise, every attractive home, every helpful act, every expression of faith in the future of your town or county is a forward shove. Thousands of wrong things can destroy a town almost as completely as can artillery fire. Thousands of citizens doing and saying the right thing—the constructive thing—can cause a town or county to reach heights of greatness.

LAUGH

When the laugh is on you, laugh with the rest; or some passing student of science will put you down as being of no intelligence; that is if he belongs to the same school of thought as Professor Gaum, of Rutgers College.

According to this school, the ability to laugh at oneself is proof of intelligence. Not all who laugh at themselves are intelligent, mark you, but none who can't are.

Here is a test which pretty definitely fixes the mental calibre of the politicians. No politician, not even the Kingfish, can laugh at himself, although all, when they do not have the taxpayers gnashing their teeth, have the populace doubled up with laughter. There is nothing so funny as a man possessed of an exaggerated sense of his own importance, infallibility and indispensability.

It is the intelligent thing to laugh if you slip on a banana peel or push your eye into a door and survive, unless perchance your friends can get a good laugh out of your embarrassment and agony.

Of course, slipping on a banana peel and running into doors are not very intelligent things to do.

GRASS

All flesh, is grass, saith Scripture. Certainly grass becomes flesh—blood and milk and hide and bones, when the ruminants eat it. Yet Nebuchadnezzar is represented as quite crazy when he grazed like his own cattle in the fields and tales of peasants eating herbage in the famine districts of China, or in France before its Revolution, have a gruesome sound. It happens, however, that all our cereals—millet, wheat, rice, barley or corn—were developed from grasses by forgotten generations of skinned Bur-banks.

These reflections may serve as introduction to the statements of C. F. Schnabel of Kansas City before the biological chemistry division of the American Chemical Society at its recent annual meeting. Having experimented with grass as a means of promoting the health and egg-production of hens, he thinks well of it, and urges it on humans as a substitute for spinach and carrots. One pound of grass flour, as he declares contains more vitamins and greens values than fifty pounds of fresh head lettuce. Young cereal grasses, when dried, have a food value from two to five times that of many common vegetables. They are said to taste like malted milk. That there are virtues in scores of common herbs, the very names of which most of us have forgotten, is an antique belief perhaps too hastily dismissed as an old wives' fable.

Editorial of the Week

THE TWO WISHES
(Blanchester, O. Star)

Not all the boys brought up in the country and on the farm, are dissatisfied with their tasks and environment. A lot of them are however, and their occasional visits to the town and city, create a desire to desert the quiet old home among the trees, the plow and the field and all the endless responsibilities of farm life and his way to the white collared allurements of urban activities and every evening social entertainment. The poet who reduces human longings and aspirations to rhyme, puts it in this convincing way—

An old farm house with meadows wide
And sweet with clover on the side,
A bright-eyed boy who looks from out
The door with woodbine wreathed about
And wishes his one thought all day—
O if I could but fly away
From this dull spot the world to see,
How very happy I would be.

On the other hand, there is experience of the man who left the country home of his youth, went to the town, then to the city, and being fortunate enough to make a little money, he traveled 'round the world. He saw, of course, all that was worthwhile and returning to the city of his adoption, he realized that the happiness which he had been seeking all the years he had been absent from his country home, was still far from being gratified. More than ever he realized that,

"Amid the city's constant din
A man who 'round the world had been,
Who, 'mid the tumult and the throng,
Is thinking, thinking, all day long:
O, if I could trod once more,
The field-path to the farm-house door;
The green meadow, could I see,
How very happy I would be."

THE EDITOR'S BEATITUDES
"Blessed are the merchants who advertise because they believe in it and in their business; for their prosperity shall increase many fold."
"Blessed are the country correspondents who send in their well written items every week; for fame of their friendly neighbors shall go abroad in the land."
"Blessed is the woman who sends in a written account of a party or wedding for she shall see the details of the function and the names of guests correctly reported."

around the
National Capital

By CARTER FIELD

Washington. — Whether President Roosevelt's new tax program for big inheritance levies is put through at this session, or goes over until next year, there is little doubt of its eventual enactment.

The answer to that is simple. It is just that there are, and probably would be in almost any upset which might occur, enough votes in both houses of congress to impose high taxes on big fortunes.

This fact is realized now pretty well by holders of these same big fortunes, so the most important thing at the moment is what they will do to circumvent the effects, or soften the blows, that are certain, to come.

One of the most serious aspects affects such institutions as the Ford Motor company. There are many others, though all of them are smaller but the idea is the same in every case where a big business is owned almost exclusively by one small family.

No one is authorized to say, of course, what Henry Ford will do, as he sees this thing coming. But, the opinion of shrewd business men as to what he will be forced to do is interesting.

The problem would be what Edsel Ford could do if his father died suddenly and the government demanded, for example, in both estate and inheritance taxes, say 80 per cent.

How could the cash be provided with which to pay this tax? Obviously by doing what Henry Ford has fought against all his life, and fought against successfully, by refusing to have securities of his company sold through Wall Street.

If, for instance, in view of the certainty of heavy inheritance taxes, Ford should decide not to have such a terrific problem put up to Edsel, some day, for immediate decision—perhaps at a most inopportune time—the thing to do would be to sell to the public shares of his stock, or bonds in his company.

Simple Solution

If the stock and bonds were on the market, had a recognized value, and were being constantly traded in, the problem would be comparatively simple. Enough securities could be sold to pay the taxes. This would not entirely eliminate the possibility that there would have to be a great sacrifice of values. The public would know that these stocks and bonds must be sold, in a very short time, and the probability is that the price would decline to far below normal. It would be strictly a buyers' market.

This sort of thing has been illustrated time and again in smaller enterprises. In fair sized cities, say of around half a million people, it often develops that everybody "in the know" realizes a large block of some local stock must be sold. Always the price declines in advance, and the person who must do the selling for one reason or another nets far less than the actual value of his securities.

In fact, one of the reasons many investment bankers have always advised clients to deal only in securities listed on the New York Stock exchange has been that—merely because of its bigness—there was less of that sort of thing possible than in the case of securities in smaller enterprises, where the interest in buying was confined to a small territory.

But in the real big cases, such as Ford would be, New York would be come just as bad as many of the smaller communities are now for small enterprises.

Wall Street Knew

President Roosevelt's recommendation of high inheritance taxes was made directly against the advice of nearly all his congressional advisers.

Within two hours after he had told newspaper correspondents that there just might be a message to congress during the day, though he declined to say what it would be about, Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the senate finance committee, and Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee, denied to reporters any knowledge of a move by the White House to obtain higher income taxes and inheritance taxes.

Which would seem to prove that the two chairmen mentioned, heads respectively of the committees in house and senate which would handle the legislation desired by the President, still hoped until the message actually arrived that they had dissuaded the President.

But, what is really of great interest to newspaper men in particular and the public in general, the tip on which these two chairmen were questioned came directly from Wall Street.

In fact, smart brokers operating on the New York Stock exchange knew almost the precise pattern of the President's tax plan at the very moment the President was declining to take newspaper men into his confidence as to what his message would be about.

There have been many leaks of information in Washington. There have been evidences again and again that speculators on Wall Street had advance information as to what the administration would do. There is nothing new about this. There have been many investigations, one of the most interesting of which, and incidentally one of the most typical, being the famous "leak investigation" by the house rules committee back in Woodrow Wilson's administration.

On that occasion news that the President would make a move to obtain peace in Europe—this was in the late fall of 1916—before the United States got into the war—was known in Wall Street, and occasioned a terrific crash in the stocks of companies manufacturing munitions for the allies. Thomas W. Lawson, of Boston, of frenzied finance fame, charged that certain people had made millions on advance information. Bernard M. Baruch was put on the stand, and admitted making half a million the day the news broke, though he convinced the committee that he acted on news from London, not Washington.

Pinned on Reporters

But the point is that at the end of that investigation some five or six newspaper men were pilloried as the real source of the leak. Some of them lost their jobs. Some were just reprimanded. All were in disgrace. The whole thing was construed as a terrific reflection on newspaper ethics.

Everybody in Washington knew there had been a real leak—that the telegrams sent by the newspaper men thus besmirched were just an alibi—in short that Thomas W. Lawson in essential was right.

But this administration, having watched the Lawson and other leak investigations, is taking no chances. This was evidenced by the fact that at 11 a. m., on June 19, the President would not admit what his message that afternoon would be about.

Yet hours before the stock market closed this writer and several others were working desperately to confirm tips from Wall Street reporters in their organizations that the President was about to propose high inheritance taxes and big advances on the higher brackets on income taxes.

And if readers will pardon a humble confession, the Washington reporters were not able to confirm the report! But the smart Wall Street operators knew. You can draw your own diagram of what that means.

Relief Plan in Peril

The $1,100 per man limitation which President Roosevelt has imposed on the work-relief program, as far as the selection of projects is concerned, not only promises to force a general blow-up in the whole scheme, but to make a lot of trouble, politically and otherwise.

For instance, the big water project for central California, for the San Joaquin and Sacramento rivers. Recently Senators Johnson and McAdoo called on the President. They urged him to lift the $1,100 ban on this project. The President insisted that he had only $4,000,000,000, and that this $4,000,000,000 must provide work for three and a half million men. Hence each project must put a man to work for every $1,100 spent.

The senators urged the President to consider that purchases of materials, machinery, etc., would provide work far in excess of the jobs actually provided on the site of the project. But the President was unmoved.

Later on, however, he had a qualm, and wrote Public Works Administrator Ickes, inquiring whether the $1,100 would actually ban the project, and suggesting a restudy of the whole situation to determine this point. Ickes himself would not "fudge" on the figures. But he gave some of his subordinates a chance to juggle them.

At last accounts the assistants declined to pull the chestnuts out of the fire. They made lengthy reports calling attention to the value of the project, and to the tremendous amount of employment it would provide indirectly. One of them even called attention to the fact while most of this indirect employment would be outside the state of California, some of it would be inside the state. That would be cement.

Curious Paradox

Which brings up a rather curious paradox in the mental processes of the President and some of his advisers—particularly Harry Hopkins. (It must always be remembered in this connection that Ickes himself has no sympathy for this policy—he approves this particular California project, and is keen for providing employment indirectly.)

The country has been divided for relief work purposes into some three hundred odd districts. Apparently the administration is trying to conduct them as though they were water-tight compartments. The number of unemployed in each has been surveyed, and the idea is to provide sufficient employment in each to take care of that situation.

This policy does not take into account the fact that a district which happens to be big in steel manufacturing would not need work relief if enough work relief projects requiring steel should be approved. In that case the unemployed men in the steel district would have jobs automatically provided for them—jobs paying much better wages than work relief—giving them the opportunity to spend more money, and thus provide jobs for still others, etc.

All of which is in strange contrast to the President's bitter complaint against the Supreme court decision in the NRA case. For he talked of the country's being relegated to the horse and buggy days, and harped on the point that with increasing speed of communication and transportation, nothing could happen in Maine that would not affect Oregon.

There is the sharpest division among his advisers as to this $1,100 per man limitation, and observers are predicting that the whole work-relief program will bog down in the next few months simply because of the impossibility of finding enough projects worth doing where the cost per man employed will come within $1,100.

From the Files of The Boone County Recorder

(ISSUE OF JULY 3, 1895)

Sam Wilson, of Rabbit Hash, was in town Saturday.

Chas. Bannister, of Union, attended court yesterday.

B. S. Kirkpatrick has improved considerably in the last few days. Master Harry Walton, of Utzinger, was a visitor to the town last Thursday.

Drs. Duncan and Jones, of Walton, made Burlington a flying visit last Friday.

Mrs. Tousey, of Erlanger, was visiting Miss Mary Thompson two or three days last week.

J. E. Hall has moved his barber shop into the building he recently purchased of Mr. Winston.

D. Beall and wife were visiting their son Elmer and wife, of this place, Monday and Tuesday.

Frank Smith and wife, of Covington, were guests of Dr. J. H. Smith and family Saturday and Sunday.

Prof. J. C. Gordon, of Pleasantville, is spending his vacation with his parents in Bullittsville neighborhood.

J. H. Rogers, of Walton, candidate for County Clerk, was calling on the voters in this part of the county last week.

Mrs. Maud Williams, of Kokomo, Indiana, is visiting her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Kirkpatrick, of this place.

We have before us an account run at the store of Erastus Tousey Burlington, in the years of 1827-28, and copy a few items from it for comparison with the prices now charged for same items: 7 yards calico, $3.01; 3 yards black silk, $2.63; 1 pair stockings 69c; 1 1/2 yards white satin, $1.87; 2 yards bobnet, $3; 1 shell comb, $3.37; 1 yard French crepe, 75c; 1 1/2 yards white ribbon, 56c; 1 bonnet and trimmings, $8.34; 7 yards calico $2.33.

The above articles were sold during a period often referred to as the "good old times," but such prices at the present day, and under much more favorable conditions, would cause us calamity howlers intense alarm.

That was another very fine rain that fell Sunday night and Monday. It gave the potato crop the finishing touch.

Tomorrow is the glorious Fourth. About all the wheat has been harvested.

Two games of ball at the Burlington park tomorrow (Thursday) July 4th.

Rev. Frank Blackfort will preach at the Universalist church next Sunday. A basket dinner will be served at noon. All are invited.

Rev. Lafe Johnson, of Walton, will preach to the Masons at the Baptist church, Erlanger, next Sunday, July 7th. All brother Masons are invited to be present.

In June, 1881, Mr. W. T. Winston and Miss Louella Watts were married on the farm now owned by W. T. Snyder, and in the death of Mr. Owen Kirtley, a few days since the last survivor of that occasion passed away.

J. M. Lassing has embarked in a new enterprise. He has purchased an outfit of Belgium hares, which are said to be very prolific, and will endeavor to supply this and the neighboring markets with rabbit meat. Send in your orders early. Ed. Hawes and Steve Dempsey are giving the cupola on the Court House a coat of paint. Considerable work has been done repairing the tin work on that building. The original job of tin work was a botch, and the repairs already have cost considerable.

The Fiscal Court was in session yesterday, County Judge Stephens presiding, and the following Justices of the Peace present: M. B. Green, O. W. Gaines, Henry Ransler, T. E. Roberts and Joseph Wagstaff. The usual grist of claims were passed upon.

Union

Mr. Davrainville and family, of Newport, spent Sunday with Mrs. Elliston.

Tom Burkett came near losing his arm in a self-binder—was badly hurt.

Robt. Rice nd family, of Florence, were visiting Dr. Crouch, Sunday.

Verona

Boone Roberts spent Saturday and Sunday at home, looking as hearty as ever.

Crops are looking well since the recent rains.

Petersburg

Miss Ida Latham, of Florence, has returned home after a two week's visit with Mrs. Mary Cox.

A number from here attended the Louisville convention, among them Hon. N. S. Walton and George B. Berkshire, who were for Hardin and silver.

Utzinger

Miss Euna Duncan fell out of an apple tree and broke her arm. H. C. Duncan, while repairing some fence, fell on an axe and nearly cut his hand off.

The Petersburg Flour Mill will start the 15th of July.

Hubert Walton has a mare that has been in training a few days and can pace a mile in 2.25. Hubert has refused a good sum of money for her.

Joseph L. Hartman, son of Mr. Frank Hartman, died of brain fever at his home in Cincinnati, last Wednesday. The remains were interred at Petersburg.

Mrs. Earley and John McCool's child died and were interred the same evening.

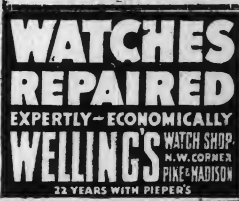

James Kirtley, Jr., was at home from Georgetown College was at home to spend the heated term.

THE GARDEN

POTATO POINTERS

(By John S. Gardner, Ky. College of Agriculture)

In the event the season continues wet, potatoes may need emergency treatment to prevent losses. Already, from here and there, reports about the tubers beginning to rot are being heard. While potatoes are actively growing, and until they die down they need moisture in almost unbelievable quantity, but once the tubers are mature, only moderate moisture, or better still, almost wholly dry soil is preferred. Even though more moisture is present than is best, the damage may be small, for the tubers adapt themselves through the enlargement of their "breathing pore," appearing as white pimples over their surface.

Sometimes, as in the present season, and in certain sections of the state more rains are falling while the crop is developing than is good for it, with the result that the tubers swell much too rapidly to develop firm flesh, but are water-soaked and of poor table quality. An additional eventuality may be that hollows will form in the centers and about these, decay may set in. If conditions persist too moist, entire tubers may break down.

Nothing can be done about the weather, but much may be done to avoid the bad effects of unsuitable season. Obviously, inasmuch as excessive moisture, now, and perhaps more to come, is a potential cause of potato loss, means should be provided to carry it off. This is simply to provide drainage ditches between the rows, to lead off excess rain as it falls, and to drop the water-table below the tubers in the hills. If the rows are as much as 3 feet wide, the likelihood is that take place. A single-shovel or wide bull-tongue is a good tool to use, though a one-horse plow will do, too. In fact, using the latter, but later, after the crop has been made, has the advantage of providing extra soil cover on potatoes left in the garden through the summer, thus insuring the tubers less exposed to sun heat than if they lay more hallowly.

Another potato trouble may come because of the continued wet weather is blight. With the temperature low, in the main, blight develops slowly, if it comes at all, but as the summer advances, temperatures on clear day rise and with the evaporation from water-soaked soil proceeding rapidly the humidity rises. Too, under just such conditions, warmth and "mugginess," blight flourishes. When it is recalled that the plant tissue of the vines lacks firmness and toughness, it is not difficult to appreciate that the disease may destroy the tops just that much more rapidly. Potato growers may arm their crop against the blight by applying Bordeaux mixture; Bordeaux spraying is, in fact, copper-plating the foliage against the entrance of the spores of the disease. In the event the blight does not come, after all, the application of Bordeaux will have served enough to have well paid for itself, in controlling the black flea-beetles and in imparting a "tonic" effect to the plants. With the result of improving the yield from even "healthy" plants.

The Bordeaux should be made after the 4-4-50 formula, 4 pounds of bluestone, 4 pounds of stone lime and 50 gallons of water. Directions for its making may be found in Kentucky Circular 202, but because these directions deal with quantities larger than a grower of small acreage may need, it is suggested that he ask the College of Agriculture to send him instructions to help make up the spray in quantities that better fit his conditions.

A large crop of soybeans will be harvested in Lee county for the first time.

One-Way Drive

To The Cemetery

"Dolly" Gray, employee of the Kentucky Traction and Terminal Company, says that the man who created the signs at the Independence cemetery believes in telling the truth. Mr. Gray discovered yesterday that a large sign at the entrance to the graveyard boldly proclaimed, One-Way Drive—Lexington Herald.

ONE EGG

IN ANOTHER

Mrs. Maggie Smith, of route 2, exhibited to this office last week a large egg with a perfect egg in a hard shell inside. The outside egg was about the size of a large duck egg and upon cracking the shell of the outside egg, it was found to contain another egg, perfect in size with a hard shell. The inside egg was completely surrounded by the white of the outside egg. This is the first account we have of an occurrence like this.—Citizen-Times, Scottsville.

Violin Made

Of Black Walnut

Mr. John Wyatt, of Princeton, route 3, brought to the Times office this week for inspection a beautifully hand made violin. Mr. Wyatt has made many articles that have received mention, but the violin is the most artistic piece of work he has produced.

The frame is made of figured black walnut and is inlaid with tiny cut glasses of red and crystals. Other trimmings are made from a goat horn and the horn of a Texas steer.—Caldwell County Times, Princeton.

Indian Peace

Pipe Unearthed

Another curio came to light in Washington county a few days ago when J. C. Jenkins found an Indian peace pipe on his farm near Willsburg. The pipe is estimated to be more than 150 years old, and in spite of the fact that it has lain in the earth for over a century, is in a splendid state of preservation.

The old pipe measures 10 inches in length. The stem is about four inches in circumference at the largest point and tapers down to about 1 1/2 in. at the smoking end. At the opposite end is a neatly carved squirrels head. The stone from which the pipe was carved measures 1 1/4 inches across and is not found in this section of the country.—Springfield Sun.

Plants From

Tobacco Stalks

Somewhat out of the ordinary is to see a tobacco plant sprout from a last year's tobacco stalk. This happened this year on the farm of Willie Loveall. Early this year he plowed under approximately one acre of stalks and soon thereafter tobacco plants began to make their appearance.—Record Herald, Greensburg.

Terrapin Displays

New Deal Lettering

James Stillwell, of near Stephentown, this county, brought to the Enterprise office the first of the week a terrapin which he had found Saturday on his farm bearing both figures and letters. On one side of the shell were the letters CEEF, in capitals, all in a straight line, plainly discernable. In the center of the terrapin's back were the figures 33, while on the other side were found 1323.—Hardin County Enterprise, Elizabethtown.

Little Known

Culinary Tool

The jewelry firm of Cundiff Bros., became the owner recently of a table implement often used 200 years ago, but seldom seen today. It is a silver marrowbone spoon, used to extract marrow from the bones of roasts served back in the early days of 1700.

The spoon is of solid silver and is in perfect condition. It is 9 1/2 inches long and 1/2 inch wide at one end and 1/4 inch wide at the other, apparently made in the two sizes to apply to different sized bones. Each end of the spoon is slightly hollowed to hold the marrow. The center portion which joins the spoon ends is very thin. An English hallmark is plainly discernable on the back.

The spoon was obtained in a quantity of old silver which Cundiff Bros., recently purchased.—Somerset Journal.

ANNOUNCES HIS PLATFORM IN RACE FOR REPRESENTATIVE IN AUGUST PRIMARY

I made announcement a few weeks ago as a candidate for Representative from this district, at solicitation of a few of my friends. In making this announcement, we wish to state that we have no money to spend and really haven't the time to spend in this race. But we feel that farmers, laborers, small business and truck operators need representation.

The state has become a government of bi-partisan politics, controlled by professional politicians, who trade, traffic in offices, jobs, roads, public works, to keep themselves in power.

This government has become, then, a governmental "racket" at the expense of many for the benefit of a few and it will go from bad to worse until the people wake up and change the reins of government.

Do not misunderstand me, I do not think that I can change it single handed, but I would like to be one factor to promote the change.

We do not mean to clean up the payroll and fire everybody for there is too much to be done in this state; and the people that are just drawing wages could be put to work, that would be a benefit to all the state.

We are against the present administration and the present sales tax, because we do not think it is accomplishing what it should with the amount of money that is coming into the treasury. And to keep out mercenary motives, it is necessary to keep a sales tax of some form in this state, we will not be for exempting automobiles because it happens to be our line, for the automobile is really somewhat of a luxury. At present, we are against the sales tax because we do not appear to be getting the results we should be getting.

Tobacco growers, laborers, farmers in general, truck operators, retail merchants small real estate and farm owners are carrying the burden of the old guard political bosses who discriminate against these classes for the benefit of the moneyed interests of the state because they know in a tight campaign plenty of campaign money will be available for them to keep themselves in power.

Now, do not misunderstand me, we believe in big business, we are not against horse racing, we are not communistic or radical, we do not want any division of property or any radical government change. But we do want to impress that a political machine that appoints all offices in the state from a maintenance man on the highway to the highest federal government position, that dictates the insurance of state property, the disposition of the state funds to banks, dictates the purchasing of state supplies put over a sales tax by rough tactics, attempted to put over convention control of the state so they could keep themselves in power forever and ruin the state.

This kind of a machine is what we are against. We are not going to trade or traffic with anybody for votes, we are not promising anything in the way of jobs or money. If we lose, O. K. if we win we will not be feathered. Old line politicians say you can't win that way, if you can't the county and state are in a bad shape. You can't have good government, if you have to trade and traffic with gang politicians.

Win or lose, we are in to stay, we are running this race to win if possible and by so doing we hope to help farmers, small merchants, laborers and home owners; because my prosperity, yours and everybody's depends on these classes.

We know we will be slandered in this race, but a man who has been in the auto business fifteen years is used to that, so we won't feel hurt at a few casual remarks.

We ask the support of all voters in an attempt at least to help our present state government.

VACATION

HEALTH HAZARDS EXPLAINED BY STATE HEALTH COMMISSIONER

Dr. A. T. McCormack, State Health Commissioner, issued a warning relative to vacation health hazards which loses nothing of timeliness because it is largely a repetition of what has been said on this subject, each summer, for several years past.

June, July, August and September are the months during which tourists from the outside, in largest numbers, drive through Kentucky to view the scenic beauties with which the State so abounds. They are also the months when city dwellers, as a rule, take their vacations. Naturally, the majority of these, in their desire for a complete change, take the great outdoors—traveling by automobiles, camping in the hills or fishing in lakes and streams. Life in the open is usually a period of relaxation, when sanitary discipline is all too apt to be neglected, unless its importance is freshly stressed with each recurring season.

For automobile tourists, campers and summer vacationists generally there are always potential dangers to health in charged and changing environments. Particularly is this danger present in connection with those diseases which may be transmitted through food and water supplies and the bites of insects—typhoid fever and other filth-borne diseases, malaria and food poisoning.

"Typhoid fever," said Dr. McCormack, "is a disease whose incidence is greatest where environmental sanitation is lowest. It is unnecessary, because it is preventable. It is spread from person to person by means of water, milk, fingers, flies and food. Every case is contracted by taking into the mouth some substance contaminated with typhoid organisms, which occur in nature only in the bowel or bladder discharges of persons ill with the disease or who, having had typhoid fever, have become 'carriers' through still harboring the organisms."

"Persons who contemplate a summer vacation or recreation where sanitation may not be rigidly enforced, or where food products are not regularly examined, should protect themselves against infection by being vaccinated against typhoid. Three inoculations with typhoid vaccine, a week apart, will assure protection against the disease for two or three years. "All vacationists, not already protected, should also be vaccinated against smallpox and diphtheria. Smallpox vaccination is good for several years; the diphtheria immunization protects for life.

"Campers should be careful to protect themselves against mosquitoes. Malaria is transmitted only by certain kinds of mosquitoes that have become infected by biting persons contaminated with malaria parasites. These infected mosquitoes bite other persons and infect them in turn, thus spreading the disease. Campers living in cottages should screen all doors and windows; if tents are utilized, mosquito should be used.

"Care should also be taken not to come in contact with poison oak, poison ivy or other poisonous plants. They do not transmit disease; but their infection is often as painful and debilitating as disease, and, if very severe, may have serious results.

"Automobile tourists would do well to observe the following precautions:

Patronize only tourists camps bearing the approval certificate of the State health authorities.

Look over the place where you propose to eat before ordering your meal. Untidy surroundings usually mean dirty people; dirty people are apt to sell dangerous food products.

Beware of wayside water supplies and farm house wells unless they bear safety signs from the State health authorities.

Unless you can obtain milk from sources which have the approval of the State health authorities, it is safer to boil all milk before using. Don't stay in a place where flies are prevalent, for the presence of flies mean the place is not being kept clean.

"If these precautions are carefully observed, and the tourist or camper takes the required amount of rest and does not overindulge in food or drink, there is no reason why his or her vacation should not prove what it was primarily intended to be—a period of rest and recreation, designed to refresh and invigorate for the better performance of duties upon his or her return."

THE FARM AND HOME

(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

Water is important in the production of eggs because about 65 percent of an egg is water. Hens, like people, need fresh water, especially in warm weather. Plenty of cool, fresh water and shade are necessary for high egg production in summer.

Pails, cans, separators and other milk equipment should be clean and sterile. Thoroughly wash, scald and dry pails and cans. Open seams in containers accumulate filth that is hard to remove. Seams should be closed and soldered or the pails discarded.

If the land upon which turkeys run is thought to be infested with roundworms, danger of loss may be lessened by adding four pounds of tobacco powder to each 100 pounds of growing mash. The best method is to raise turkeys on clean ground, away from chickens.

Women have been known to make themselves believe they needed an article of merchandise in order to take advantage of an alleged bargain, regardless of the price.

In drenching sheep, best results are obtained when feed and water are kept from them for at least 12 hours before and 4 hours after treatment. A good plan is to put the sheep up at night, give them the treatment the next morning and then no water or feed until noon.

Lime apparently does not benefit fruit trees directly. It may be used, however, to sweeten the soil and make it possible to grow clovers or other legumes among the trees where they otherwise would not thrive.

W.V.U. SERVICE

CHAPTER VIII.—Haig takes Joseph's papers, and reports Eileen's kidnapping to the British consul. Oester and Miss Edman, an accomplice, mysteriously disappear from the Walla-so and appear at Yu'an's headquarters in Arabia. It is evident as Yu'an and Asa.

"I agree with you, captain!" cried the British consul. "Inspector Haig was following them. And I think we may venture to hope that he's the only man who knows what actually took place. If it's an abduction, it's highly probable that he's in pursuit of the abductor."

"It's very odd he hasn't got in touch," Forman cut in.

The agent nodded in agreement. "I think that odd, too, captain," he admitted. "I don't care for the look of it. Assuming that the inspector witnessed this outrage—if an outrage has occurred—and went off in pursuit, he wouldn't do so without leaving some clue to his route, in case he should fail. He was too experienced a man for that."

"Might I ask, Mr. Dimes, the exact meaning of your remark?" Forman, a man of action, knew himself helpless; and he was getting angry. "Are you implying that this Inspector Haig is not engaged in looking for Miss Kearney, but has also disappeared?"

Dimes shrugged his shoulders. "To me it looks rather that way," he agreed. "No man would go off alone on a desperate job of that kind without getting in touch either with Mr. Shale, here, or with the commander."

"He may have had no opportunity," Shale suggested.

"He evidently hadn't," said Forman savagely. "But maybe for a different reason. There are half a dozen ships on which he, or Miss Kearney, or both of them, might be at this very moment, lying along here and in the canal."

"We've spoken every ship in the port," the commander assured him. "No, sir. They are not on-board any ship."

The British consul's face was very stern. "There's going to be the devil to pay about this business," he said. "And I'm going to be the scapegoat. It's no good gnawing your mustache, Forman. I'm as unhappy as you are. The only reason I don't act is because I don't know what to do. If you have any feasible suggestion—make it."

"Arrest this slippery pair on board!" Forman cried angrily. "Hold 'em here until we're satisfied. That's my suggestion, and a feasible one."

"The 'Bath of Feathers' never fails, Joseph!" cried old Mohammed. He chuckled.

Joseph, that velvet-eyed fortune teller who had led Eileen to the shop of Mohammed, smiled understandingly. "It is best, old Father of Mischief," he replied, "that you now close your doors and leave me to carry out my orders. The crate is in the cellar?"

"It is in the cellar," old Mohammed replied.

"Good—and the girl is safely on the way. Go now, friend, and report to the Chief. Put in a word for me. I take up my new duties—although I don't know what they are—almost at once. I have my letter of travel and my tickets as far as Kenah. After this day's work, I look for a kind reception!"

"I will go and make my report," old Mohammed chuckled. "I shall not forget you, Joseph."

"My thanks, Father Mohammed. Then return to your home. Leave all else to me. . . . How long should he remain there?"

"They are coming for the crate at sunset. You have until then. But the porters must not see you."

Old Mohammed shuffled away, and Joseph stood for a moment by the door which opened out of the room of carpets, listening. Then, kneeling, he applied his ear to the uncovered boards immediately beyond this doorway, presently to rise, smiling with satisfaction.

The sound of Mohammed's footsteps had died away. . . .

Joseph walked through to the little shop and went out, locking the door behind him. This took place nearly half an hour after Doctor Oester and Eileen had entered the establishment of Mohammed, and perhaps twenty minutes after Dawson Haig, following, had passed through that door beyond which lay a space of uncarpeted passage.

His experience had been truly terrible. At the moment of passing the threshold, a swift suspicion of the truth had flashed through his mind. He would have stepped back, but it was too late.

The floor glided away beneath him, and he shot down into unknown depths. He felt himself enveloped, embraced, by some tender feathery substance which broke the fall, except that he went down and down into suffocating darkness.

This was the "Bath of Feathers!" Instantly Dawson Haig, held his breath. He had alighted unhurt on what felt like a brick floor, the feathery mass about him having broken his fall. He knew that he had one chance of life—he counted the seconds of time which remained to him. . . .

If this pit should prove to be identical with that which he had known in Singapore, there was still hope—provided he could hold his breath so long. One inhalation, he knew, would be fatal.

Standing upright in the fluffy mass which enveloped him, he visualized his position. Twelve seconds had elapsed. And since he had not inhaled deeply, as for a dive, his time was short. He stepped back a pace, touched the wall, groped along it to the left, and knew that he was under the trap, reached the angle, groped further. . . . and touched the rung of a wooden ladder!

He swung right, placed his feet upon the rungs, and began to mount.

Five rungs he mounted and seemed to be free of the damnable feathers. Higher yet, cautiously. His head touched the roof. Still holding his breath he felt about with his left hand. His lungs were bursting. It was agony to hold out.

He looked up—and saw a faint gleam of light through a chink in the woodwork above. Raising his face towards it, he began slowly to inhale. The scent of the drug impregnating the feathers was nauseating, but the air was just breathable. He half filled his lungs. He knew that death must come at last, if he was forced to remain in that atmosphere. But, at least, he had survived.

Came soft footsteps on the floor immediately above his head.

Jack Rattray, the first officer, walked out of his cabin onto the boat deck. It was a perfect evening. The turquoise blue waters of Lake Timah mirrored an azure sky. He walked forward, and stared out across the bows of the ship to where Ismailia guarded the desert. Behind him the radio crackled.

An operator came out to look for him. Rattray stared gravely at the message he brought.

"What shall I do about it?" asked the Marconi man. "I know Mr. Kearney is a friend of yours. It's rather awful to think he doesn't know what happened."

"Poor old Matt," muttered Rattray. "I've been expecting this any moment." He looked up. "I suppose there's no news?"

"None whatever, Mr. Rattray, about either of them."

Jack Rattray, staring hard at the dimly, suddenly looked up. "I may be wrong," he admitted, "but honestly, if I'd been in the Old Man's shoes, I'd have shoved Doctor Oester ashore at Port Said, or else chucked him into the Canal!"

"They were both old friends of mine—what the devil can we answer? After all, there's still a chance she may be discovered. Can't we sort of break the news gently?"

"Well," said the Marconi man, "I might reply, 'Miss Kearney went ashore at Port Said. Advise communicate agents—or something of that sort.'"

"That'll do," said Rattray. "He's sure to send a message to me when he gets it. In the meantime, I shall have to think how I'm going to reply. But don't be surprised, my lad, if you hear the sound of a loud splash in the Red sea. It'll only be Doctor Oester."

Dawson Haig had heard every word of the conversation between Mohammed and Joseph. It had been conducted directly above his head, as he crouched below the trap. Since he knew no eastern tongue, he was grateful to both for speaking English.

The creaky tones of old Mohammed were unmistakable. Mohammed was the proprietor. And he suspected Joseph to be none other than the fortune teller whom he had followed ashore.

Later, he was to consider this matter of language again—more coolly: the curious circumstance that these two did not address each other in Arabic. It was destined to play a big part in his lone campaign against the powers of Yu'an Hee See.

He detected the presence of Joseph as he knelt above the trap, listening. . . . he heard his retreating footsteps. Then he inhaled again, cautiously, and standing there in that drug-laden pit, thought hard and swiftly.

The light shining through the chink aided his calculations that the hinged end of the trap was to his left, and that which opened to his right. There was no ring on the underside, but he was not defeated. He carried a pocket-knife which was a kind of small armory, containing amongst its armaments a strong corkscrew. It was pitifully short, but since it represented the difference between life and death, he decided, grimly, that it must suffice.

He groped about above him. The planks ran right and left parallel with the ladder, and he could find two inset cross-battens. The planks were strong but roughly joined. He selected a spot and set to work with the corkscrew.

It was a difficult and a nervous task. The wood was tough, and his implement fragile. The tool survived the test, but his lungs were jibbing badly, drenched as they were with fumes from the pit.

Inhaling slowly and cautiously, he held his breath and descended one step of the ladder. He pulled gently upon the steel handle of the knife. The trap responded, requiring little effort! He descended a step lower—and realized that his legs were plunged into the feathery, poisonous mass. But now he could grasp the edge of the trap.

It proved to be a refuted oil, and its opening was almost soundless. Seeing above him the dimly lighted passage, his first, natural instinct was to abandon the knife and to climb out into cleaner air. But above all, Dawson Haig was a conscientious worker; and a scheme which was to have far-reaching consequences in this very moment of peril took form in his brain.

Holding the trap with his left hand, he detached the corkscrew, and, balancing perilously, slipped the knife into his pocket. Then, pulling the wooden frame fully down, and ducking to avoid it, he climbed up and reached the passage above.

Gently, he allowed the trap, operated by spring hinges, to rise again into place. He stood still, exhaling and inhaling, to free his lungs of those poisonous fumes. He looked, right, along the dimly lighted corridor. He saw a closed door. He looked, left, into the room of the carpets. There was no sound.

Quietly he stole out. Pocketing the spectacles of "Mr. Smith," Dawson Haig set out cautiously to explore. And five minutes of exploration satisfied him. There was no one but himself in the shop of Mohammed—and it was quite impossible to get out! Heavy locked doors, iron-barred windows defied him.

He seated himself upon a square wooden chest. Of Eileen he was afraid to think. . . . In that direction madness lay. And at all costs he must keep cool; plan every move.

He heard the sound of an opening door. He slipped back to the room of carpets, dived behind a bundle of rugs, and, automatic in hand—waited.

Smoking a cigarette, and seemingly quite at his ease, the fortune teller whom he had followed from the Wallaroo walked along the room. Joseph! Haig crouched, ducking his head. The man came to the doorway beyond which lay the death trap.

As Haig knew, there was a narrow space to right and left of the trap, along one of which safety zones old Mohammed, with surprising agility, must have skipped when he had led him to what had been designed to be his snare. The Armenian dropped upon one knee, pushed the trap fully open, and secured it.

Haig craned cautiously forward. Joseph was peering down into the "Bath of Feathers."

He turned and walked to the door beyond, tried it, and uttered an impatient exclamation. Haig ducked behind the pile of carpets.

The man circled the open trap, went back again by the way he had come, and in a few moments, returned.

He walked past the raised trap and inserted a key in the lock of the closed door beyond. Whereupon:

"Hands up!"

The Armenian dropped to his knees in a flash, whisked around, drew a pistol from his pocket with miraculous agility, and fired as he crouched!

Crack of two shots came together. Joseph dropped his automatic, half rose. . . . and toppled forward into the "Bath of Feathers!"

A stifled cough came up from the drugged pit.

Haig stood still—listening. To the sickly sweet fumes had been added the tang of powder. He visualized the street outside and realized that interference was unlikely. Clouds of feathery dust were rising from the bath.

He circled around to the door. The key was still in the lock. He opened it. A flight of wooden steps led downwards. Descending, he found himself in a small square cellar. On his right was a stout low wooden door communicating with the base of the pit. Before him he saw a narrow packing case—undoubtedly designed as his coffin!

Eileen woke from a troubled dream, vaguely wondering what was obstructing the porthole of her cabin. Something to do with Doctor Oester. Was it that Doctor Oester was standing between herself and the porthole—or was he standing outside on the deck? Certainly he had some part in it, although she couldn't actually see him. . . .

An unfamiliar stewardess was holding her head, and very gently urging her to drink something.

"Haig, chief inspector Scotland Yard on board. . . . That was a queer thing to think of!"

Several years elapsed—or so she calculated—years of the most wretched suffering, mental and physical. At some time during this unaccountable period she realized the meaning of that awful premonition which had chimed her at the London docks. She saw a great ship sinking in a calm sea. There seemed to be a booming noise as the vessel dived into blackness. Terrified, she screamed, and seemed to hear the voice of Billy (Who was "Billy"? She couldn't think who Billy was, only that she wanted him—wanted him desperately.)

"It's all right, darling! I'm here!"

The kindly, unknown woman was there, soothing her, and she conceived a definite terror of Doctor Oester. Words broke through her delirium: "Don't worry so, cherie—don't worry. Have courage. While you are with me you are safe. . . ."

A Frenchwoman. . . . There were no French stewardesses on the Wallaroo. . . . But when true awakening came, Eileen was unable to recognize it. She could not accept her surroundings.

She saw a lofty room, one end of which was open. Beyond was a flower-laden balcony. It had four pillars—she counted them over and over again: One, two, three, four. They were stone or plaster, but partly concealed by flowers. . . . Of course it couldn't be real!

She touched the silken coverlet of the bed on which she lay, pinched herself—detected the fragrance of clustering roses. She saw that there was a tray beside her bed, set upon a lacquer table, which contained a very comprehensible medicine bottle, a glass, and a jug of water. Beside it was a big bowl of cut roses.

Wildly she stared across the room towards the balcony; but beyond she could see nothing but a cloudless sky. She was aware of an unfamiliar landscape. Her limbs, too, had a leaden feeling. But, as the truth of her surroundings crashed in upon her mind, she threw off the coverings and sprang to the floor.

CHAPTER VIII

Dawson Haig stared down at the long oblong box lying upon a mud brick floor. Respect for the efficiency of the Hee See gang began to claim him. Jo Lung of Limehouse was no more than a spoke in the wheel. Doctor Oester was merely another. There was a directing intelligence greater than any of these, by whom the smallest detail was never neglected.

He marveled at the man's knowledge of psychology—the man who had hid this trap for him. How could he have anticipated that his, Haig's, professional curiosity would have led him to seek for that other entrance upon the pretext of leaving the shop by a shorter route? And what alternative snare had been planned in the event of his electing to leave by the door opening on the narrow street?

This oblong box was ready for him. It was packed with straw; a loose lid rested upon the floor beside it. A tin of nails, he saw, and a stout hammer. What had they planned to do with his body when it had been nailed in the box? Obviously the duty of the insidious Joseph, having hauled him out of the trap in the pit, had been to secure him in this coffin, and then—what?

Certain "porters" were coming for the crate "at sunset," he recalled. These "porters" must not see him. He must escape from the premises of Mohammed.

Mohammed! . . . That name had occurred in the diary of Yu'an Hee See. . . . and under the date of the Wallaroo's arrival at Port Said, Eileen's abduction had been planned in London!

"Calm! Billy!" he said aloud. "Pull yourself together. . . . Go easy."

He considered the trapdoor; and now he observed hanging upon a hook beside it a sort of grappling iron attached to a long rod. The door possessed two rings by which obviously it was intended to be raised; there was a big bolt at the top by means of which it might then be kept in place.

He hesitated no longer. Stepping forward, he grasped the rings, lifted the trapdoor, and secured the bolt. A suffocating stench from the feathers all but choked him. He took down the iron from its place on the wall, thrusting it through the mound and into the pit. He groped about, until, sickeningly, the hook established contact with what he knew to be a human body.

Leaning back, he dragged, dragged, until at the edge of the door there came a hitch. He readjusted the iron. And so, presently, through that mound of feathers—covered with feathers—suffocated in feathers—out came the victim.

One glance sufficed to show that the horrible to see. But Dawson Haig had little compassion to spare.

First—the keys! He found them. Next, he emptied all the dead man's pockets, transferring the contents haphazard to his own. Finally, he heaved the body into the straw-lined box and set the lid in place. Moles for some twenty nails were already bored in it.

Then, lowering the heavy trap, he stood still, listening. There was no sound. Light came through an iron grating some three feet above his head, opening, so far as he could make out, upon a narrow, brick-enclosed courtyard. From this courtyard, doubtless, steps led down to the locked door of the cellar. . . .

Footsteps sounded in the courtyard above. Haig darted lightly up the stairs, regained the passage, and there stood still, waiting.

Two men entered. They talked together in subdued voices in Arabic. He knew that they were removing the chest. Presently, heavy dragging footsteps told him that they were carrying it up the stairs to the courtyard beyond. He heard a dull bump as they laid it down. One of them returned and closed the door.

Muffled sounds, voices, and finally—silence.

LET US MAKE YOUR VACATION TRIP SAFER

BEFORE you start on your holiday trip, let us completely inspect your car. There is no charge for this service and it will assure you of a safer and more enjoyable trip.

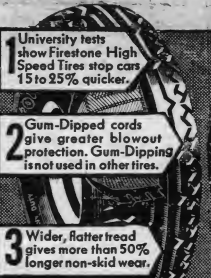

For the convenience and safety of car owners Firestone has established more than 500 Auto Supply and Service Stores throughout the country, and thousands of Firestone Dealers are also equipped with complete Auto Supplies and complete Service Departments, to test and service your tires, brakes, batteries, spark plugs, in addition to power lubrication and crank case service.

AVOID THE DANGER OF BLOWOUTS

Firestone removes the danger of blowouts by preventing their main cause—internal friction and heat. This is accomplished by Gum-Dipping.

THERE ARE THREE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS THAT WILL SOLVE YOUR PROBLEM OF WHAT TIRES TO BUY.

1 "Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

University tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker.

2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires.

3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear.

What IS a Sound Loan?

A sound loan for a commercial bank is a loan which the borrower believes, and the bank expects, will be paid within a reasonable time—a loan which if not fully repaid at the maturity of the note is substantially reduced by regular periodic installments.

Loans that are regularly reduced enable a bank to accommodate patrons whose needs may be more essential. A bank must have a turn-over of money, in the same way that a merchant must have a turn-over of merchandise, with this difference—bank's turn-over affects the credit facilities of the entire community.

The ability and intention to repay a loan by a planned program, and within a reasonable time, is the essence of a good loan. The giving of collateral does not repay a loan. Collateral is merely a pledge to guarantee the borrower's ability and promise to repay the loan within a reasonable time.

In addition, the Illinois Central spent $118,202 for public utility services in Kentucky last year, of which $65,872 was for electrical current, $42,284 was for water and $10,045 was for telephone service.

More than $20,000 was paid by the Illinois Central for property rentals in the state.

The study shows that ninety-seven cities and towns in Kentucky shared in the railroad's 1934 expenditures.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

OUTLINED BY K. E. A.

The K. E. A., through Secretary W. P. King, made the following announcement Friday:

At the meeting of the Board of Directors in Louisville, it was decided that the Kentucky Education Association would ask support in the coming session of the Legislature on the following fundamental program:

"In order that the processes of Education may go forward and that the children of Kentucky may have their rightful heritage of an adequate and free education, the Kentucky Education Association will vigorously support a program which includes:

"Maintenance or increase of the present per capita.

"Continuance of provision for free textbooks.

"Adequate support of the public higher institutions of learning."

W. P. King, the executive secretary of the association, indicated that the organization would seek an expression from all candidates for office on the items mentioned above.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Campbell county farmers are joining in a county-wide organization to take advantage of the rural rehabilitation program's soil improvement projects. A board has been selected and a director employed to take care of the financial end of the work.

C. M. Hinton, a Lewis county hatchery operator, reports the sale of 20,000 baby chicks, a gain over last year's total. Many brick brooders were built this year, and cleanliness, feeding balanced rations and good breeding have contributed to larger profits than in former years.

A sericea lespedeza demonstration has been conducted for the past three years by C. E. Stahl of Warren county. Sericea averages about 25 inches in height, when seeded in rows, and 32 inches when broadcast. Mr. Stahl found. He obtained 700 pounds of the seed the acre last year, though much was lost by shattering.

The nitrating of tobacco beds was demonstrated in a series of 10 community meetings in Magoffin county, and 300 beds nitrated as a result, reports the county farm agent. There will be a short crop this year due to poor beds and beds injured by hail.

An acre of tomatoes is being grown in Johnson county to determine what yields may be expected, and to show the methods of planting, fertilizing and cultivating. Special attention is given the project by those expecting to grow tomatoes for a cannery to be established next year.

The cereal grains are a cheap source of food, and an important item in nutrition. Corn, wheat, rice, rye, barley and oat kernels furnish about a third of the average individual's diet. The "whole grain" or "dark" products are richer in vitamins than refined materials.

A heavy feeding of grain assures fat pullets for the laying house in the fall, says C. E. Harris in Poultry Leaflet No. 4. Feed should be placed in the hopper in the brooder house and left before the chicks constantly. Feed both grain and mash to the pullets on range.

To cook fruits, add enough water to prevent scorching, cook gently until tender and sweeten to taste. To retain the shape of the fruit cook in a syrup. For most well-ripened fruits two parts of water to one part sugar gives a mildly sweetened product.

Veal or tenderloin may be used instead of chicken in making salad, according to 4-H club demonstrators at Junior Week. It is then a plain meat salad. However, chicken salad may be made of one part chicken and two parts of beef or veal.

AGED CITIZEN

ENDS LIFE TO AVOID PAIN AND SUFFERING

John Holtzworth, 77, ended his life Sunday morning, July 8, 1935, at 3:30 by firing a bullet through his brain, in the barn at his home on the Frogtown road. He had been suffering with a cancer of the tongue for a long time and had stated that he could not stand the pain and suffering.

Holtzworth was born in Germany, came to this country while a young man and started work at Verona with Henry Cotton, father of Sheriff W. B. Cotton. When he had saved sufficient funds, he returned to Germany and brought back his wife. He was a very thrifty German and accumulated quite a lot of this world's goods, due to his labor, thrift and economy. He is survived by his widow, two sons and a daughter.

His funeral was held Monday afternoon at Hopeful church and his remains were buried in the cemetery at that place, where his daughter and other relatives are resting. John Holtzworth will be remembered by those who knew him as being a German citizen who selected this country as his home, and was ever true and faithful to the country of his adoption, even during the trial and tribulations with the country of his birth. John Holtzworth will be remembered as a citizen of foreign birth who always remained true to the United States. Phil Taltavero was the undertaker in charge of the funeral arrangement. The inquest was held by Squire Hubert White.

FLORENCE, KY., MAN HELD
Raney Hull, 38 years old, Florence, and Michael Reardon, 28, of Louisville, were arrested Friday and charged with storehouse breaking when Louisville police answered a report of neighbors that they heard intruders in a chain grocery store. The two were found hiding in the store of which the door had been forced, a police report said.

BOB AND GENE'S SATURDAY NIGHT DANCE TO BE DISCONTINUED

For a number of months a dance has been held each Saturday night at the Florence Fair grounds under the management of Bob & Gene. The managers wish to announce to the public that the dance held last Saturday night was the last one for the present. This is due to the fact that the fair grounds were sold recently and the new owners have other plans in mind for the place. Bob & Gene wish to take this opportunity to thank all their dance patrons for their attendance and support.

KENTON CO. MAN

ONCE FAMED FIGHTER, SEEKS SECURITY FOR A REASON

Anderson, who started fighting in 1922 when he was a sophomore at Holmes High School, lives at 11 East Forty-Second Street, Latonia. His best year, perhaps, was in 1928, when he licked nine of the first ten middleweights in the country and was picked by Damon Runyan as the outstanding fighter of his class. That year he lost only to Mickey Walker, one champion.

Other fighters with whom Anderson tangled before he retired included Pinkie Mitchell, Leo Lomski, Ace Hudkins, Tiger Flowers, Maxie Rosenbloom and Dave Shade. When the list of applicants eligible for appointment to the Covington Fire Department was released by the Board of Civil Service Examiners the name of Joe Anderson was fourth from the top.

Now the name of Joe Anderson is widely known in Northern Kentucky, for "Colonel Joe" brought more than a bit of fame to his native city and state when he fought his way to the top of the middleweight division in the boxing circles in quest of a world's championship—a quest that barely failed. That story of the Holmes High School boy who fought his way to the class of his generation of middleweights is a part of the folk lore of Covington.

Joe retired as a fighter in 1932. Since that time he has promoted a few fights and operated cafes. At present he is working for Mrs. Anderson, who owns a cafe in Erlanger.

Now Joe and Mrs. Anderson have a son who is in the fifth grade at school. That son wants to go to Annapolis. Hence economic security that will insure the education of his son is an important thing to Anderson. He believes a place on the Fire Department holds the solution to his problem.

RANSOM—BURCHAM

Miss Iva Mae Burcham, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Burcham, of Bellevue, and James Ransom, son of Grover Ransom of Verona, were united in marriage in Bellevue Baptist church Saturday afternoon at 2:30 by Rev. Smith. Miss Mary Emily Burcham and Allen Burcham sister and brother of the bride were their attendants. Miss Burcham is employed in the office of our county agent and Mr. Ransom is working in the Relief office in Burlington. The Recorder joins their many friends in wishing them a long, happy and prosperous life.

ED. O'NEAL WILL SPEAK AT FARM BUREAU MEETING

Ed. O'Neal, National President of the American Farm Bureau Federation will speak at the Annual Carroll County Farm Bureau meeting and picnic to be held at Carrollton on next Tuesday, July 16.

Mr. O'Neal is one of the most capable national farm leaders in America today. Every Boone county farmer who can will be profitably paid by hearing Mr. O'Neal speak at this meeting. He is expected to discuss the future of the AAA as well as other problems of interest to persons interested in the future welfare of agriculture.

LICENCE LAW

FOR DRIVERS URGED BY EXPERTS TO REDUCE ACCIDENTS

In 1934, there were 36,000 fatalities and almost a million injuries from automobile accidents in the United States. This human slaughter, according to Roy P. Britton and Sydney J. Williams, safety experts writing in the current Rotarian Magazine, can be materially reduced with further adoption of a standard drivers' license law.

"Fully three-fourths of all highway fatalities and injuries are due to the heedlessness, recklessness, or criminal behavior of the driver," says Mr. Britton who is a director of the National Highway Users Conference. "A variety of other factors are involved in accidents. But the driver is the key to the solution."

"In a state without drivers' license law, it is perfectly possible for a man convicted of manslaughter today to be operating an automobile on the highway tomorrow. Manifestly, then, the power to suspend and revoke a driving license is a potential weapon for the protection of the people and the promotion of safer conditions. "At the present time in the U. S.," he continues, "thirty-two states and the District of Columbia have drivers' license laws. On the basis of population, registration, and, more important still, the consumption of gasoline, the record of these states over a period of years is substantially better than the record of non-licensing states. The experience data are all in favor of a drivers' license law."

Mr. Williams, who is a director of the Public Safety Division of the National Safety Council, holds that examination should be the prime requisite of licensing. Scientific studies show that there are three especially dangerous types of drivers, many of whom would be eliminated by examination. They are:

"First, those who are seriously subnormal in mind or body—the feeble minded, the epileptic, the nearly blind, and so on. These should be kept off the highway before they kill someone. Second, a larger number who just don't know how to drive, even though they think they do. Third, the accident-prone drivers—roughly equal in numbers to the other two groups combined—who are sound in mind and body, who know how to drive, but don't care enough.

KENTUCKY REPRESENTED IN CMT CAMP

Kentucky is well represented at the eleventh Citizens' Military Training Camp now being held at Ft. Benj Harrison, Ind.

Two camps will be held at this post this year, the first camp from July 2nd to July 31st, the second camp from August 2nd to August 31st. Approximately 3,500 young men will be trained, the largest number of candidates to attend a CMT Camp in the country this year.

The course of instruction will consist of Military drill, Athletics, and an excellent course of Citizenship so designed to give the boys an understanding of their relationship to their community and send them to their homes after their period of training with a better understanding of their duties to the country and their community.

WCKY'S, BOONE CO. KIDS

Organized only last April, the Boone County Kids are already one of the most popular hillbilly bands on the Cincinnati air-waves. They are heard on morning programs over WCKY. Standing, Red Penn (left) and Winnie Waters. Seated, Buddy Spellen (left) and Bernie Fink. They hail from the famous

WILLIAM N. HIND MEASUREMENTS

DIED LAST THURSDAY—WAS A NATIVE OF BOONE CO.

Wm. N. Hind died Thursday night at the home of his sister, Mrs. J. T. Boulton, 1148 Breckenridge road, Park Hills, where he has been for the past week to escape the noise and the heat of the city. He had been ill for the past month.

He was a native of Walton. He began his business career as a messenger in the Farmers' and Traders' National Bank of Cincinnati. He became connected with a furniture company in Cincinnati and remained in this business until 1910 when he was appointed master commissioner of the Kenton Circuit Court. He held this post until 1928.

Hind was a member of the State Central Committee of the Democratic party in Kentucky. He held the post for thirty-one years, until the time of his death. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Margaret Hind (nee Thompson), two sisters, Mrs. Boulton and Mrs. J. J. Hudson of Walton, and a niece, Mrs. Malcom McDonnell, Park Hills.

Funeral services were held Saturday from the residence of the sister at 1148 Breckenridge road, Park Hills, with burial in Highland cemetery. The Rev. Roy C. Goldsmith, pastor of the First Baptist church, Covington, officiated. Arrangements in charge of C. Scott Chambers, funeral director, Walton.

BARN NEAR WALTON

HIT BY LIGHTNING

A barn on the farm of John L. Vest, Walton attorney, suffered damages estimated at $200 when struck by lightning shortly before noon Thursday. The lightning tore two holes in the roof of the structure, taking away approximately one-fourth of the surface. It entered the ground at four places, ripping off boards and knocking out posts in its path. A metal hinge on the barn doorway partly melted by the bolt. There was no fire.

It was recalled that two boys were killed and two injured in a barn owned by Vest in 1929, when lightning struck the building. One boy, in the barn at that time, still bears scars on his feet where the bolt branded him with the spikes in his own base ball shoes.

NORTH KENTUCKY Y. C. T. U. WILL GIVE PROGRAM

THURSDAY NIGHT

The Northern Kentucky Youth's Christian Temperance Union will give a temperance program at the local Baptist church on Thursday evening, July 11, at 7:30. This organization is quite active in this movement and it is hoped to establish one similar in this town. Every one is invited to attend and especially young people between the ages of 12 to 24.

OF TOBACCO AND CORN ACREAGE PROGRESSING

The measuring of AAA tobacco and corn contract acres by field supervisors is progressing rapidly according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

Eighty four tobacco and 7 corn acreage measurements were checked the past week. Approximately two hundred and twenty-five contracts should be checked this coming week.

There are approximately nine hundred and eight tobacco and one hundred and ninety-four corn contracts to be checked before August 1. The splendid cooperation of contract signers is proving both a big saving to the Association and a help to the supervisors. Growers are being notified from the county office at the earliest possible date the exact acreage planted.

STATE LEADER VISITS UTOPIANS

Mr. J. W. Whitehouse, State Leader of Junior Club Work will visit Boone County Utopia club projects on the Annual Utopia club tour next Thursday, July 13.

This will be the third annual project tour and picnic held by Utopia club members. The tour will start from Florence, Burlington and Grant members will be visited in the morning. A picnic lunch in Hebron at the noon hour and the remaining members visited in the afternoon.

Boone County Utopia club has approximately sixty-five older boys and girls enrolled. Each member carries one or more agricultural or home economics projects. Both project work and record books will be inspected at each stop. All who are interested in Utopia club work are invited to attend.

FORMER BOONE HEALTH NURSE HAS ARTICLE IN NATIONAL RED CROSS MAGAZINE

The Recorder is in receipt of a copy of The Red Cross Courier, official publication of the American National Red Cross at Washington. In this issue appears an article entitled "Teaching Health in the Land of Candlelight" by Miss Eunice B. Willis, Red Cross Itinerant Public Health Nurse. The article is a description of her work at Camden North Carolina. This paper hopes to print the article in full at the earliest opportunity. The fact that any article is thought worthy to be published in a national magazine of this type is quite a compliment to the author.

The members of the local M. E. church were busy Tuesday night cleaning out the basement of their church, getting ready to have the new floor put in. Eliza Poston is doing the carpenter work.

DEARBORN COUNTY FAIR PLANS COMPLETE

Dearborn County Fair, Lawrenceburg, Indiana will be held July 23-27, 1935. Plans that have been in the making for the past six months, and which indicate one of the biggest and best county fairs ever held, are nearing completion. Opening Tuesday evening July 23, with a free gate at the fair grounds, a big Mardi Gras Street Parade and there will be five nights and three afternoons of attractions, exhibits and amusements. Attractions consisting of Higgins' Famous Band; La Van's Aerial Artists; El Rey Sisters, sensational Roller Skating Team; Armstrong's Bucking Ford; Rums' New Deal Horse Acts; Delno, the High Diver, and Ward Beam's Congress of Dare Devils constitute the greatest attraction program ever offered at a County Fair. In addition a brilliant Fireworks Display each evening. There will be plenty to see and to do—Auto Show; Dog Show; Poultry Exhibits; Jersey Cattle Show; 4-H Club Exhibits; Concessions; Shows; Rides, and numerous other attractions. General admission 25 cents—children under twelve years of age, free. Free parking. This is the biggest amusement bargain of the year—worth driving miles to see. WHY NOT SEE THE BEST? PLAN NOW TO ATTEND.

LEONARD HAAG, Secty.

McCOMAS

ANNOUNCES AS CANDIDATE FOR REPRESENTATIVE

In this issue of the Recorder will be found the formal announcement of Cuthbert McComas as a candidate on the democratic ticket for representative from the 62nd legislative district, composed of the counties of Grant and Boone. Mr. McComas filed his intention to run on the tenth day of May with the Secretary of State at Frankfort.

Mr. McComas is well known to the people of Grant county, as he served the county as magistrate from the Second district for four years, beginning January, 1921. He was considered an excellent magistrate and always tried to save the county money.

He comes of democratic parentage, has always supported the nominees of his party and says he always will.

Concerning the issue of the campaign, of which the much talked of sales tax seems to be the leading one. Mr. McComas says that he does not consider it an issue and will vote for whatever he believes to be to the best interests of his constituents, if nominated and elected.

He says he believes in old age pensions in a reasonable amount, if such an issue comes before the legislature to determine.

He believes that the public schools of the county and state should be amply supplied with funds from some source or other, and will so vote, if he has a vote in the general assembly.

He is strongly in favor of maintaining our roads in the best manner possible and at the least expense. He believes the present State Highway Commission is okeh and heartily endorses Lyter Donaldson, chairman of that body.

He hopes to see most of the voters of the counties he seeks to represent but will not be able to see all. He invites the support of all voters who are entitled to cast a vote in the primary, and assures them that if elected, he will do his best to represent the majority of them.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS

Due to an additional amount of advertising we were compelled to leave out several communications this week. We regret this since we believe these letters are the most enjoyed part of our paper. The delayed letters will appear in next week's issue.

TOBACCO HOUSES SOLD

Six Carrollton tobacco sales houses were sold Monday by Mr. P. B. Gaines, receiver for the Northern District Warehousing Corporation, a holding company for the members of the pool. Colonel Hayden Iklehart cried the sale.

The Sixth Street house was bought by the R. M. Barker Tobacco Company for $15,000.

The Fourth Street house was sold to Ernest Wilson for $11,800; the Big Burley house to Diuguid and Vandiver for $12,000; the Woods house to Marshall and Harris for $10,000; the Henry County house to Marshall and Harris for $22,500, and the Farmers Profit Sharing house to Ernest Wilson for $4,050.

Albert Sebree has been very ill this past week with tonsillitis.

GROWERS

MARK AND SET ASIDE RENTED TOBACCO ACREAGE

With tobacco setting well under way, adjustment contract signers are marking as rented to the government an acreage of representative land equal to 40 per cent of their base in the case of burley, and 20 to 30 per cent of their base where dark tobacco is grown. In other words, growers are preparing to certify that the land set to burley tobacco does not exceed 50 per cent of their base acreage, or 70 or 80 per cent of their base, where dark tobacco is grown.

Land set aside may be planted to food or feed crops for home consumption, but none may be put to crops for sale.

Growers also will be required to certify that no tobacco is being grown on any farm owned, controlled or operated by them which is not covered by a tobacco contract.

No tobacco plants grown on a farm under contract may be sold or otherwise disposed of to any person not operating a farm subject to a tobacco contract.

The number of share-croppers and share-croppers engaged in growing tobacco on the farm of a contract signer is not to be reduced below the number in 1933, because of the reduction in tobacco acreage and production or because of other provisions of the contract. Furthermore, it shall be construed as a violation of the contract if the proportion of the 1935 crop grown by tenants is reduced below the proportion so grown in 1933.

The second 1934 adjustment payment and the deficiency payment for the contract are to be distributed by the trustee to share-tenants and share-croppers having an interest therein in accordance with the terms of the contract. Failure to make proper settlement with tenants will constitute non-compliance and will prevent certification of compliance for the 1935 crop.

CHANDLER WILL SPEAK IN BOWLING GREEN AND SOMERSET

Lieutenant Governor A. B. Chandler, candidate for governor of Kentucky in the coming Democratic primary will speak at Bowling Green, Ky., on Saturday, July 13 from 2:30 P. M. to 3:30 P. M. on Saturday, July 20, at Somerset, Ky., from 2:30 P. M. to 3:30 P. M. These two speeches will be broadcast over WHAS at Louisville, Ky.

Campaign Committee, L. Cook, Chairman.

Miss Inez Colvin, of Louisville, spent last week visiting her friends in Burlington.

STORAGE VAULT

FOR GOLD WILL BE WELL GUARDED BY UNCLE SAM

Uncle Sam's proposed gold storage vault at Ft. Knox, Ky., is going to be well guarded.

The War Department, asked the Works Progress Administration for $2,238,066 for improving the historical fort. At the same time high army officials acknowledged they planned to make the Kentucky post headquarters for the army's mechanized outfits.

This indicates that after the Treasury expends its $450,000 allotted from public works funds for construction of a subterranean vault in the center of the fort, and the billions of dollars of gold now in New York and Philadelphia have been transported there for safekeeping, the War Department's most modern equipment will be on hand to protect it.

Transfer of the gold inland will conform, officials have explained, with the Treasury Department's policy of moving all large gold deposits away from cities exposed to enemy attack.

Ft. Knox situated 31 miles from Louisville, will be guarded by the army's speediest tanks and armored cars, all carrying high-powered machine guns, automatic rifles, gas, light field pieces and radios. The cars, rolling on rubber-tired wheels, can travel 60 and 70 miles an hour and cross rough terrain almost as easily as they traverse smooth highways.

Most of the $2,238,000 asked by the War Department will be used for improving mobile units, but other items include construction of aprons, runways, roads, grading, draining, hangars, landing fields and bridges. Funds for the underground storage vault already have been allotted.

Mrs. Manley Ryle spent the week-end with relatives in Muncie, Ind.

SECURITY

The social securities legislation which passed the House and the Senate and now is in Congress for adjustment by one two bodies, is the most important from a human element standpoint in the history of the United States. It provides insurance against unemployment, and also an old age pension which will effect a large number of people. The fear of loss of a job and the approach of old age without work or funds will in a measure be abolished when the legislation becomes a law and active.

The cost to the individual employee, employer and government is a pittance compared to the security given the employee, and the law should meet the approval of every person.

"ALL WORN OUT"

The Bangor (Me.) Daily News has analyzed the National employment situation and finds it much less alarming than many folks think. The News figures follow:

Population of the United States engaged at.....	124,000,000
Those eligible for Townsend old age pension.....	50,000,000
Leaving.....	74,000,000
Number of those prohibited from working under the child labor laws.....	60,000,000
Leaving just.....	14,000,000
Number of persons claimed on unemployed lists.....	13,999,980
Leaving number working to produce nation's goods.....	2

These unfortunate two are just you and me, and you're lazy and I'm all worn out.

LAUGH, AND THEN THINK

There recently walked into relief headquarters in a certain Kentucky town a woman who said she had complaint to make. Asked to state it, she replied:

"Well, my husband and I just can't get along on what we are getting from this relief. We've talked it over several times, and he says that if you won't give us more he is going out and try to find a job."

After you get through chuckling about this, you might sit down and think about it. For it constitutes a homely illustration of a state of mind that is becoming far too common for our national welfare.

All of us admit that there are persons living on relief who will never live elsewhere as long as relief lasts. Just what proportion of our unemployed can be listed in this class is a matter over which opinions differ widely. But it is far greater than it should be. Just look around and see for yourself. Then try to figure what the end is going to be.

HISTORIC RIVER TRADE RESUMED

It is good that river travel and transportation to Pittsburgh and return will be resumed Tuesday of next week, when the Gordon C. Greene will start up stream under sponsorship of the Ohio Valley Improvement Association. There has been a two-year hiatus in this trade, although Greene boats have been operating as far up river as Huntington. The two boats which had engaged in the Pittsburgh run are out of commission; the mammoth old Queen City has been dismantled, and the Senator Cordill, sunk in the ice and raised again, is awaiting dismantling. A decade ago the bulky Gen. Wood, no longer in commission, and the gallant little Betsy Ann, which has been sold south as a cotton boat, were familiar sights upon the Ohio.

The Gordon Greene, which under another name traveled the waters of the Mississippi, the Illinois, the lower Ohio and the Tennessee, is the biggest packet on our inland waters. The 470-mile stretch of the Ohio between Cincinnati and Pittsburgh has probably had a more notable steamboat history than any other part of the valley. Before the railroads or highways came, the statesmen of the Old West used the river on their journeys to and from Washington. In those days the masters of both the Democratic and Whig parties were apt to be residents of the Old West, who boarded the packets at either Cincinnati or Mayfield. Every hill, bend and reach of the river between the shores of the Ohio and the Queen City has been celebrated by travelers like Dickens, Frances Trollope, Basil Hall and Harriet Martineau.

Editorial of the Week

VOTES CAST IN AAA REFERENDUM (Lexington Herald)

A recapitulation of final figures from the four agricultural referenda held during the last 8 months has been announced by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The total vote cast in the four referenda according to figures which are approximately complete, was 2,918,678. Of this number, the vote in favor of continuing the agricultural programs was 2,511,169 and the total of those opposing was 407,983.

More than 86 percent of the votes cast favored a continuance of the programs. Also, the total vote shows that the percentage of farmers who participated in the several referenda compared to the total number of those who were eligible to vote, was considerably higher than the usual percentage of eligibles voting in civil elections.

The total voting was divided as follows: In the corn-hog referendum, 535,690; and the Bankhead cotton Act 1,621,887; on the Kerr-Smith tobacco act, 394,540; in the wheat referendum, 466,561.

The vote for continuance of the respective program was: Corn-hogs, 374,585; Cotton, 1,361,347; tobacco 370,908 and wheat 404,270.

In the corn-hog referendum approximately 70 per cent of the votes cast were in favor of continuing the adjustment program. This was the lowest percentage supporting the program in any of the referenda. The percentages in the other referenda were as follows: cotton, over 89 per cent; tobacco, over 97.3 per cent and wheat, over 86 per cent.

Those voting on the Kerr-Smith Tobacco Act voted on the basis of acreage and more than 92 per cent of the acreage was voted in favor of continuance of the act. This was the only program under which voting was on an acreage basis.

SEEN and HEARD

around the
National Capital

By CARTER FIELD

Washington.—Grave concern is felt by high administration officials over the lack of eagerness of so many people all over the country, to get off relief rolls, even when fairly good jobs are offered. It is impossible to obtain accurate figures about this phase of the situation, all the bureaus, administrations, agencies, etc., being very much publicity shy about this disturbing development.

It is known, however, that reports from all over have been received, and that President Roosevelt's hopes of getting everybody off the relief rolls as speedily as possible have run up against a very stiff resistance.

In many cities young men eligible for the CCC camps are refusing to take the examinations. In one large city families are insisting they do not want their boys to be trained as soldiers—that they hear beer is sold at the camps—that their boys would have to associate with low characters.

Professing entire ignorance of the situation in that city, the CCC officials here insist they do not believe the objections cited by the parents are genuine. They say that the talk about military training was very widespread when the camps were first started, but that it broke down of its own weight a long time ago. They believe the sole and only reason is unwillingness to get off relief rolls.

In other cities, in fact in most cities, enrollment in the CCC camps has been way below what was expected, and the answer is believed by officials here to be just unwillingness to get off relief. But in every instance officials say to inquiring reporters from the city in question, "Please don't mention that question."

Incidentally the Veterans' bureau has been having its troubles along the same line.

A Real Problem

The whole question brings up the point whether the United States is now going through what England went through a few years back. In England the dole brought some interesting consequences, and as they occurred before the depression hit this country, there was quite a self-righteous feeling in this country that Britain was bringing her troubles on her own head by pampering the dole collectors.

Then came the depression, and the New Deal. Whereupon it became progressive in this country to insist that it was the duty of the government to take care of the cold and hungry, and reactionaries to point to Britain's troubles on the same sort of problem. Now it is being realized that it is a problem involving fundamental traits of human nature, and that the United States is not very different in the character of its people from Britain. No one, not even the most bitter critic of the administration on Capitol Hill, is advocating that people should be allowed to starve or freeze. But a very interesting mental transformation is becoming apparent in New Deal circles.

For example, a high official of the Federal Emergency Relief administration was told that his agents in a large middle western city had threatened to take families off relief if they refused to permit their sons to go to the CCC camps, or if able-bodied men in the families refused to take jobs which were offered.

"I have not heard about that," he said shortly. "You see it is a purely local problem. The man on the ground handling the relief situation has authority to handle the matter in any way he sees fit."

"You mean if he turns families off the relief rolls for such reasons as that, it is entirely up to him?" he was asked.

"Exactly," he replied.

"Would the local officials make a report to headquarters here about it?" the questioner persisted.

"Nothing of the kind need be reported," he replied.

And his whole manner indicated, what some of his underlings told the writer in confidence, that he did not want any such reports!

Cut Huge Fortunes

President Roosevelt's objective is to reduce all large fortunes to a maximum of $7,000,000—all large incomes to a maximum of $90,000 a year. He said this in a conversation a few days ago with a very rich Democrat, who incidentally had been a big campaign fund contributor, and the gentleman is still sputtering about it.

In another most interesting conversation with a Wisconsin man who had backed him when Roosevelt really needed backing, in the pre-convention days, the President advised his caller to "go back to Wisconsin and make your peace with the La Follettes. They are our kind of people."

Which of course is purely corroborative of what the President has been saying about his tax program—that it has two objectives, a better social order, as well as revenue.

Meanwhile business men as a whole are agitated at the prospect, for they see in the drive against bigness almost surely further boosting of the rates to apply against all corporations which have big earnings.

Most business men do not agree with the wisdom, entirely aside from their selfish interests, of this policy. Most of them admit that there is some merit in the contention so often made in private conversations by Justice Brandeis against bigness in privately owned corporations. Frequently, they admit, many of the faults which characterize all large scale government operations group in when a corporation attains unwieldy size. They even admit that instances can be cited where the mere size of the corporation increases the cost of whatever unit it may manufacture, or the item of service it may render.

Take the Automobile

But they insist that for the most part these instances are the exceptions, and not the rule. A favorite illustration of the reverse is the automobile. Anyone who knows anything about manufacturing admits that if the automobiles of this country were produced by say 200 manufacturers of fairly even size, the cost per automobile to the purchaser would be more than double.

The best illustration of this is the Ford car now manufactured by a fairly good sized plant in Strassburg, France. That car costs the purchaser in Paris about $1,700. This is not due to the protective tariff, for the car is made in France. Actually of course, if the cars were made in the big Ford plant at Dearborn, they could pay 100 per cent tariff and still save the purchaser a good deal of money. It is the French quota system on imports which forces their manufacture on a small scale at Strassburg.

Manufacturers contend that if Ford cars were produced by separate plants of small size in this country, each owned by a different owner and operated independently—in short if the policy desired by the administration in this use of the taxing power against bigness were forced into effect—the cars would cost purchasers in this country more than the $1,700 charged in France. For it so happened that wages in the Strassburg plant are lower than in the Dearborn plant.

All of which helps to explain what some critics of the plan mean when they insist it is a "distribution of poverty" not a "distribution of wealth."

One Real Danger

Only one phase of the huge "share the wealth"—level off the big fortunes and "pass prosperity around"—taxation program of President Roosevelt seems in any real danger. This is the sliding scale tax aimed at big corporations. There seems no doubt whatever that the big levies on inheritances, and the boosts in the upper income tax brackets, will be approved by congress substantially as desired by the President.

Already a trickle of protests has begun arriving from holders of common stocks in the big corporations. A few of them have already realized that heavier taxes on the companies in which their savings are invested hits them, and them alone. For the bondholders, and the preferred stockholders, will continue to get their interest and dividends if they are earned. Additional taxes will hit the equities, not the debts, of these corporations. Except of course such are not earning enough to pay dividends at present, and have no prospect of paying any in the near future.

If the big companies should do anything like as thorough a job in rousing their stockholders as the utilities did, there is little doubt that this phase of the program would be in serious danger. For there is nothing like the spontaneous appeal to this levy that there is to the proposal to tax big fortunes, both when in estates and in incomes.

Some lawyers are contending, however, that the big inheritance taxes are unconstitutional. They contend that the object of the tax is not to raise money for the needs of the government, but is purely social in character, with the object of leveling off fortunes. This, they contend, runs counter to the Constitution.

Not much attention is apt to be paid to this by the senators and representatives. "Soak the rich" has always been a popular slogan, politically, and the theory that it is good politics to vote for such legislation is strongly held.

Question of Politics

Lots of men in both house and senate will vote for these levies who do not really approve of them. Hence the comparative certainty that they will pass. Opposition to them might prove very hurtful at the next election.

The opposition is based chiefly not on any theory that it is a bad idea to cut down the big fortunes—though there are a few who insist that many big fortunes have proved far more beneficial to the public at large than if the same amount of money had been spent by the government—but on the old Mellon theory of efficiency.

Andrew W. Mellon, when secretary of the treasury, frequently contended that lower percentages of taxes for the high brackets would bring more money into the treasury than higher percentages. He pointed to the fact that every time taxes were reduced on big incomes, receipts from big incomes increased. Critics of the Mellon regime always insisted that the reason for this was merely that it occurred during a rapidly rising tide of prosperity.

As there was undoubtedly such a rising tide during that period, there is no conclusive method of demonstrating that Mellon was right. But there is a strongly held view that he was. This theory—and it is the one entertained today by many men in congress who will vote for the new levies despite their views—is that when tax rates are too high, ways of evading them will be found.

Those holding this view insist that those with big incomes are either smart themselves, or have smart lawyers, and that they will have no scruples whatever about finding methods of evading both inheritance and income levies if they regard them as confiscatory.

VOTERS OF BOONE COUNTY

KNOW THE TRUTH

ABOUT THE TAXES YOU PAY

Note the Benefits our County has received and learn how the Sales Tax has kept Schools open, paid Teachers' Salaries, Provided Relief for our Worthy Aged and Unemployed Citizens and how this Tax can be used to wipe out our County's Present Indebtedness in a few short years.

FACTS, Not Theories!

DEEDS, Not Bunk!

ACTION, Not Hot Air!

FARMERS! PROPERTY OWNERS!

Your Real Estate Taxes Have Been Reduced for State Purposes from 30 cents to 5c on the $100. That reduction means that you now pay 500 per cent less tax on Real Estate than formerly. Your auto license tax has been reduced 40 per cent and your truck license taxes have been cut 31 per cent.

OPPORTUNITY FOR BOONE COUNTY TO WIPE OUT ITS TOAL INDEBTEDNESS

Taxpayers in our County are reminded that our present County indebtedness is $359,000. Return from the Sales Tax, paid to Boone County, by the State the first year is $19,005.88. THIS FACT IS VITAL! It means that within a few short years the Sales Tax revenue received by our County will enable our people to free themselves from this indebtedness and make it possible for county taxing authorities to make substantial reductions in the tax rate, if not eliminate it entirely, now being paid by our people. Repeal of the Sales Tax at this time would eliminate the possibility of our getting rid of our County's debt for many, many years.

VOTERS:

Don't be misled by BUNK—by untruthful statements that the Sales Tax can be repealed without hurting our County. If the Sales Tax is repealed Boone County immediately loses $19,005.88 each year, COUNTY DEBTS WILL REMAIN UNPAID.

Remember, too, that IF EVERY SINGLE EMPLOYEE, PAID OUT OF DIRECT TAXATION, SHOULD BE REMOVED FROM OFFICE (leaving us without Government) in order to save hundreds of thousands of dollars each year, such savings even if possible, would in no wise meet the needs of State Government with the result that the State, INSTEAD OF PAYING MONEY TO OUR COUNTY would call upon our people to MAKE THESE REVENUE LOSSES GOOD. That would mean huge additional outlays by taxpayers of our county and place again upon their backs the heavy tax burden from which the Sales Tax has freed them. TAXES ARE AS SURE AS DEATH. Hence, it is to every taxpayer's advantage to keep taxes light, easy to pay and equitable to everybody. Don't fall into a trap—baited only to catch votes for candidates who will not tell you WHO AND WHAT THEY WILL TAX if their plan for Sales Tax Repeal should succeed.

Remember, Please!

A vote to repeal the Sales Tax is a vote to place a heavier burden upon real estate

The Sales Tax is now law in 26 States and in New York City. Three States have a graduated tax. Sales Tax legislation is pending or planned in 16 other States. Can 45 States and America's largest city be wrong?

TO DATE NO STATE HAS REPEALED ITS SALES TAX!

The Sales Tax has kept the Schools of Boone County open with the result that our boys and girls have been accorded the free educational opportunity that is the birthright of every American Child.

IN ADDITION TO THE HELP RENDERED OUR SCHOOLS THE SALES TAX HAS ENABLED OUR STATE TO FEED, CLOTHE AND PROVIDE WARMTH FOR THOUSANDS OF OUR WORTHY AGED AND NEEDY UNEMPLOYED CITIZENS.

When real estate taxes were reduced last year State revenues were lowered to the point that the common school per capita was cut $6 to $2.48. Through the personal efforts of Hon. Thomas S. Rhea, who vigorously fought this proposal, the school per capita, THROUGH THE MEDIUM OF THE SALES TAX, was increased to $11.60.

NOTE THE RESULTS IN BOONE COUNTY

With a $2.48 per capita prevailing Boone County would have received ..... $6,006.56 and our county received $28,095.20

If the Sales Tax had not been operating Education in Kentucky would have been dealt a serious blow. School terms would have been shortened; teachers underpaid and school plants everywhere would have suffered grievously because of the lack of necessary funds.

DEATHS

MRS. MOLLIE E. FORD

The funeral of Mrs. Mollie Ellison Ford was held at the Walton Baptist church on Thursday afternoon, with brief services conducted by the pastor, the Rev. T. L. Wooten, assisted by the Rev. E. L. Ockerman. Mrs. Hugh Arnold rendered an appropriate vocal selection, with Mrs. Blanche Coffman, accompanist.

Mrs. Ford was one of Walton's most popular women, is survived by one son, C. E. Ford, of Norwood, and two grandchildren, Curry Ford and Miss Frances Ford.

Among those from out of town who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Omer Ellison, Mrs. Virginia Ellison, Mrs. Sallie McMillan, Mrs. Elizabeth Mills and Mrs. May Turley of Covington; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Black and Dick Dickerson, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ford, Mr. Curry Ford, Miss Frances Ford and Miss Lillian Williams of Norwood; Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Kuyper of Cincinnati.

MICHAEL J. BRACKEN

Michael J. Bracken, aged 63 years, passed away Tuesday June 25th at Speers Hospital, Dayton, Ky., after two days illness with pneumonia. The remains were removed to the Taliaferro Funeral Home in Erlanger for preparation. Mr. Bracken was a conductor on the C. & O. Ry. and is survived by his widow, Mrs. Emma Bracken, one daughter Mrs. W. J. Wolfe, of Erlanger, and eight grandchildren.

Funeral was from his late residence at 1224 Banklick St. Covington, at 8:30 A. M. Tuesday with blessing at St. Mary's Cathedral, Covington, at 9 o'clock. Interment following in Highland cemetery.

Funeral Director Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

MRS. ALICE WILLIAMS
Mrs. Alice Williams, aged 37 years, passed away Sunday morning at St. Elizabeth Hospital, after a short illness. The remains were removed to the Taliaferro Funeral Home for preparation and later to her residence near Erlanger. She is survived by her husband, James R. Williams, three daughters and one son, two sisters, Mrs. Manley Ryle, of Burlington, and Mrs. Jno. Dickerson of Union, besides a host of other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted at the Union Baptist church by the Rev. R. D. Martin on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, after which she was laid to rest in the Union cemetery.

Funeral Director Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

W. H. BRITT

Rev. W. H. Britt passed away Monday July 1, after suffering for a long time from carcinoma of the stomach. He leaves his widow and one son and a number of relatives to mourn his passing. Funeral service was conducted from his late home on Tuesday afternoon and his body was shipped to Cincinnati on Wednesday and arrived there at 5:10 p. m., and conveyed direct to Highland cemetery for burial with a brief service at the grave by Bro. Rayburn, pastor of Hughes Chapel, in the presence of his many friends from Boone county.

The pallbearers were J. C. Bealinger, B. F. Bedinger, C. C. Sleet, J. F. Cleek, John Taylor, Russell Yealey. He leaves a widow Mrs. Amelia Britt and one son Hughes Britt. Chambers & Grubbs had charge.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere appreciation to our neighbors and friends during the illness and death of our wife and mother, Mrs. J. R. Williams. Especially do we thank Dr. Senour and Dr. Northcutt for their kind attention; Bro. Martin for his consoling words and Mr. Rouse who so efficiently filled Mr. Philip Taliaferro's place as funeral director.

The Family.

CARD OF THANKS

In the midst of our sorrow and grief, we desire to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to all our relatives, neighbors and friends, who so kindly and generously helped in any way during the illness and death of our precious loved one, Courtney Williams. We especially wish to thank the Rev. Paris B. Akin for comforting remarks; the singers, friends and relatives for the beautiful flowers, and Philip Taliaferro for his kind and efficient service.

His bereaved wife and little daughter.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to the good neighbors and friends who so kindly rendered their services during the illness and death of our mother and grandmother, Mrs. Martha Jane Conner.

We especially thank Rev. Johnson for his comforting words; the choir who came from Bellevue to aid in the service with their beautiful songs; also, the funeral Director, Mr. Steele, for the efficient manner in which he conducted the funeral.

Mrs. Ida Mae Williams
Wilson Conner and family

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere and heartfelt thanks and appreciation to our relatives, friends and neighbors for their kindness shown us during the sickness and passing of our beloved wife, sister and sister-in-law, Evaline Richards Tucker. Especially do we thank Rev. Ockerman for his kind and consoling words; and the singers for their beautiful selections; Dr. Senour; the undertaker, Philip Taliaferro and the Covington Car House Employees for the beautiful floral offering and all others.

The Bereaved Family.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Atlanta, Ga., July 6, 1935.
Editor Boone Co. Recorder—
Enclosed find my check for $3.00 to be credited to my subscription account. I have been a subscriber to the Recorder ever since I came to Atlanta from Boone county, nearly 44 years ago. I was reared in the Bullittsville neighborhood; and was the Bullittsville correspondent to the Recorder when I was but a boy. I have not received my copies of the paper for the past several weeks—did not miss it at first—so I suppose my subscription had expired. So please put me on the mailing list again, and send me copies of about five weeks past. I will probably visit relatives in Boone county next month.
Very truly yours,
W. W. Gaines.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Matt Kearney, young American living in London, says good-bye to his sister Eileen, on board the steamer Wallaroo bound for Colombo. The Wallaroo is conveying 12,000,000 in gold to Australia. Eileen has a presentiment of coming evil, which affects her brother. On his way home Kearney meets an old friend, Inspector Dawson Haig, of Scotland Yard, who is very much in love with Eileen. Haig is on the trail of opium, which he is convinced is concealed in Jo Lung's warehouse. Called to other duty, Haig delegates Kearney, with Detective Norwich, to visit the place and find out what he can.

CHAPTER II.—They find the place a veritable treasure house, and Kearney recognizes jewels stolen from his aunt. While in the warehouse he picks up a notebook. Soon after leaving Kearney Norwich is murdered. Haig is puzzled over cryptic notes in the book, referring to stops to be made by the Wallaroo.

CHAPTER III.—Yu'an Hee See, high-born Chinaman, whom Haig has long been seeking as the leader of a band of international thieves, is at Jo Lung's. Discovering the loss of his notebook, he sends two of his followers after Norwich and Kearney, one of whom he realizes must have picked it up. Norwich's murder follows, but Kearney is not overtaken. While Haig is poring over the book, alone in Kearney's rooms, a monstrous creature enters, seizes it, and escapes.

CHAPTER IV.—Kearney's story of hearing horrible laughter while at Jo Lung's place satisfies Haig his quarry was in hiding there, he recognizing the peculiar malignancy of Yu'an's laugh.

CHAPTER V.—Eileen Kearney, writing to Haig, tells of a jolly fellow passenger, a clever Austrian, Doctor Oestler. At Cairo Yu'an confers with his lieutenant, Aswami Pasha, known among the gang as the "Chief," over a mysterious coup they are planning. Haig goes to Marseilles, where he meets Eileen when she goes ashore with Doctor Oestler. The inspector boards the Wallaroo, disguised. From radio messages he decodes, he realizes Oestler, with others on board, are members of Yu'an's gang, and that they have recognized him.

CHAPTER VI.—A huge Chinaman tries to throw Haig overboard but goes over himself in a desperate struggle. At Port Said Eileen disappears.

CHAPTER VII.—Haig, trailing Eileen and Doctor Oestler, is lured into a drug-impregnated "bath of feathers." Oestler reports that he left Eileen shopping, and though under suspicion, his story cannot be shaken. Haig escapes from the deadly trap and shoots Joseph, one of the plotters. Eileen, who has been drugged, regains consciousness in an Arabian mansion, Yu'an's headquarters.

CHAPTER VIII.—Haig takes Joseph's papers, and reports Eileen's kidnapping to the British consul, Oestler and Miss Ednam, an accomplice, mysteriously disappear from the Wallaroo and appear at Yu'an's headquarters in Arabia. It is evident as Yu'an and Aswami Pasha talk that they intend to capture or sink the Wallaroo. Using Joseph's credentials, Haig makes his way to Kenah, Arabia.

The Wallaroo had left her berth, and the pilot was taking her down the Canal when Dawson Haig burst into the office of Shale, the British consul. The consul, standing just behind his desk, looked up.

"Thank God!" he exclaimed. "Inspector! you have found her?"

Dawson Haig shook his head sagely. "But I know where she was kidnapped," he replied. "What I don't know is where she has been taken. But first of all, it is most important that my presence here shall not be known to a soul outside this office. Not a word that anyone has seen me! The gang we are up against think me dead, and I intend them to go on thinking it. Do you understand?"

The four men in the consul's office signified that they understood.

"I want Doctor Oestler and the woman Ednam arrested at Suez," Shale merely nodded and made a note.

"I want you to get a party together," Haig went on rapidly. "I can easily describe the place they have to go to—and here are the keys. I have just escaped from there myself. I want it searched from roof to cellar, and I want the man Mohammed, who is supposed to be the proprietor, under lock and key some time tonight. Is that plain, Mr. Consul?"

The consul nodded and scribbled rapidly some notes upon a pad. This he thrust into the hand of one of the men. "For Captain Ellis! Bring him back as soon as ever you find him!"

"How do I get to Kenah?" Haig demanded. "She may be there! Anyway, I'll go to see."

"I'll make arrangements—night train from Cairo," Shale pressed a bell button.

"In the meantime, as she's an American citizen, can I leave it to you to advise Mr. Forman, her consul?" Haig asked.

"I'm expecting him at any moment," "Good enough. Have you ever heard of a man called Hassan es-Suk in connection with Kenah?"

"No." The British consul shook his head thoughtfully. "But they may know in Cairo. I'm having you met there."

Alone in the single, rocking coach of the special train chartered by the British consul, Dawson Haig sat, grimaced, planning—planning—planning. That the duty appointed to the fortune teller, now nailed in the box designed for himself, had been to dispose of his body and then report to a certain Hassan es-Suk in Kenah was clear enough.

A brief note—presumably a "letter of travel"—referred to—had been in the man's inside pocket. It consisted of an unsealed envelope simply addressed, "For Joseph." The superscription was typed, and the enclosed note also. This ran: "Report at once to Hassan es-Suk at Kenah. This is your introduction. Tickets herewith." And it was signed, in ink: "Chief."

A second-class ticket, Port Said to Cairo, and another Cairo to Kenah, were folded inside the note.

"The girl is safely on the way. . . Those words, overheard, Haig had never forgotten. They drummed through his brain in tune with the clatter of the train.

There was no other clue amongst Joseph's possessions, but Haig had removed and retained the man's greasy tarbrush.

Eileen, perhaps, had been taken to Kenah! That she had been lured into the "Bath of Feathers" Haig was not prepared to believe. Yu'an Hee See had not ordered her death, but had ordered her to be taken—living.

What for?

The answer was one which Haig hadn't the courage to face. He was in possession of evidence indicating that Yu'an Hee See was a slave dealer on a large scale, possibly the most important trader now left in that evil traffic. Stories had reached his ears, during his previous pursuit of this elusive Chinaman, of midnight caravans out on the old slave route—of hidden camps in the desert—of a central clearing house at some spot unidentified of unhappy negroes from Central Africa, rounded up by the fierce Arabs who from time immemorial have looked upon blackbirding as a legitimate trade. That thousands of such wretched captives were distributed around the oriental world, performing menial tasks upon the estates of great landowners, was a generally accepted fact.

But that white slaves were bought and sold by this organization he had never even suspected; even now was not prepared to believe. What answer, therefore, remained to his question?

To sell a cultured woman, daughter of a United States official, as black slaves were sold, would be utterly impossible. The most reckless buyer would hesitate to bid for such merchandise. Such a slave would be difficult to retain, impossible to subjugate. And the risks were incalculable. Only one living man had the power and the audacity to perpetrate such an outrage.

Dawson Haig clenched his fists and gritted his teeth at the thought. He stared out of the window, striving for composure. . . . And there, steaming slowly along the Canal on her way down to Suez, was the Wallaroo! He stood up in his excitement. The passengers were waving their hands.

He dropped back into his seat as the big ship was lost from view. A grim foreboding, a foreboding in which were the qualities of terror, seized upon him remorselessly. Something—a voice undeniable—told him that never again in life would he set eyes upon the it. M. S. Wallaroo.

The Long Dark Eyes of Orange Blossom Narrowed and Narrowed.

The long, dark eyes of Orange Blossom narrowed and narrowed, until they were merely slits in her small, pale face. She stood in a tiny room peering down through a little lattice into a lacquered bedroom.

She was watching a girl scantily clad; a girl whose hair in the reflected sunlight gleamed like polished copper, whose slim shape, which was at least as nearly perfect as her own, yet had a symmetry which was different; whose skin—whose skin, she thought—was poisonously white.

Yes, she was beautiful—a beauty totally dissimilar from Orange Blossom's—a rose-like western beauty, which, in its quality, belonged to those cold, clammy countries which Orange Blossom so heartily detested. And the room had been refurbished. . . . rose color. Orange Blossom nodded her wicked little head.

Below, Eileen was moving from place to place, trying the doors, leaning over the balcony—breathing quickly, almost panting.

Her eyes were wide open. "Hideously beautiful blue eyes—although her lashes," thought Orange Blossom, "are not as long as mine. But all the same they are long and dark, and make her eyes look like sapphires. She has very beautiful arms!"

Very, very softly, Orange Blossom closed the little grill behind the lattice. And her small hands with their pink tinted nails tightly clenched turned away. A shadow blocked the entrance to the cupboard-like room. She moved forward . . . to confront Yu'an Hee See.

"Little flower, what are you doing here?"

"What you came to do," she replied. "I have been watching her—the white girl."

"Does she please you?" "She is pretty as a lotus, my lord, tender and delicate. . . . She is dangerous merchandise. You take too many risks."

"You think so, Little Blossom? Have I ever failed in my trading?"

The woman's long dark eyes were almost closed; she held her imperious little head very high. The eyes of Yu'an Hee See to all appearances were closed entirely. Yet these two watched each other, standing perfectly motionless; until:

"Have I offended my lord?" the woman asked softly.

"Only in disobedience," came the flute tones, "which I have learned to expect of you. This slight fault can easily be remedied by an exercise of that virtue of silence which I have frequently recommended." His stillness was alarming. His arms were locked behind him.

Orange Blossom smiled disdainfully, caught up her jade-green robe, gathering it more closely about her. Walking slowly, she passed Yu'an Hee See where he stood. She crossed the polished mahogany floor to a curtained doorway, and through this she went out.

The curtains were still swaying when Yu'an Hee See began to laugh. . . .

The Wallaroo was nearing the end of the Bitter Lakes when Doctor Oestler entered the Marconi room. The operator, with fixed earpieces, was listening in to a message, and continued to scribble industriously.

The message which came ticking out read as follows:

"Commander RMS Wallaroo on authority Scotland Yard following passengers will be arrested at Suez stop Doctor Oestler Miss Valerie Ednam stop Signed Robert Shale British consul Port Said."

Jackson, the operator, pushing back his earpiece, looked up at Doctor Oestler. "Excuse me, doctor. Message for the commander." And he pulled aside a curtain communicating with an inner room. "Davis!" he shouted. "Carry on. I've got to go up to the bridge."

Davis, the second operator, came out. "You want to send a telegram, sir?" Doctor Oestler nodded gravely, reaching for the message pad. Not a word had escaped his keenly attuned ears. Whatever message he had intended to dispatch, this was the one he wrote out:

"Julian Hess care of post office Koseil Suez searchlight in sight further communication impossible stop

Will advise later signed Oestler."

Off Port Tewfik there was rather more than the usual delay. A police officer came off in a launch. He was met at the top of the ladder by the purser.

"I know what you've come about," said Winter blankly. "But a most extraordinary thing has happened. Come to the captain's room; he's expecting you. Neither of the berths occupied by the parties you've come out to arrest were slept in last night!"

"Not slept in! But . . . " "I don't know if they dropped into the canal and swam ashore, or what happened—but neither Doctor Oestler nor Miss Ednam is on board!"

Towards dusk, a motor boat raced towards a tiny port of the Red sea. This port, untouched by the most enterprising tramps, neglected, since it was almost unknown, and protected by unnavylike reefs, was too small to afford anchorage to any craft larger than a dhow.

Past a wooden pier the motor boat sped, swung around perilously, checked, and ran in to where ancient stone steps led up to a wharf. Two men sprang ashore and assisted a woman to mount the steps. One man went back on board; the other and the woman climbed an unpaved street in alliance for a time.

Doctor Oestler broke this long silence. "I wonder, Valerie," he said, speaking in German, "what our reception will be?"

"We have done our best," the woman answered sulkily. "We are lucky to be here."

"We may be lucky, my dear," the doctor amended. "But if this unfortunate interference with Mr. King's plans means failure for those plans, then, I fear . . ."

The two travelers pursued their way up the hill, leaving the tiny, furtive town behind them. A high white wall broke a line of funeral trees on the right, and presently, in turn, was broken by a pointed gateway of sun-bleached teak. One wing of this gateway was open. Doctor Oestler and Valerie Ednam entered a large courtyard.

A very high wall lay immediately in front, and on the left, a lofty building, with two tiers of mushrabiyyeh windows. They were brightly lighted and spilled a great smudge of amber light upon the paved courtyard.

From the threshold of a doorway beyond which might be glimpsed a richly furnished room stepped a gigantic negro in uniform. There was a brief challenge in Arabic, a reply, and the big negro stepped further out into the courtyard, raising a black hand and pointing.

Above the tiers of lighted windows, higher yet upon the third floor of the great mansion, light shone out through the intricate pattern of a lattice window.

Doctor Oestler nodded in comprehension. He and the woman entered the room.

Behind that high window, Yu'an Hee See, blue-robed and spectacled, bent over his Arab writing table. Aswami Pasha stood beside him.

Yu'an Hee See was studying a number of messages, or, rather, staring at them through the lenses of his glasses with unseeing eyes. At last:

"Since the man Haig is dead, how can this be?" he asked Aswami Pasha. "The message from the consul states clearly 'upon authority of Scotland Yard.' What can this mean? It is certain that he is dead?"

"Mohammed reported it," said the Egyptian. "The doctor confirmed the news, telling us that Haig was not on board when the Wallaroo left Port Said. Then came his last radio from the ship advising us that the police awaited his arrival at Suez. Finally, as my lord knows, we received a message notifying us that he was back at Ismailia and claiming emergency air transport. My own Fokker was under orders to leave Heliopolis for Koseil. I got a message through to my pilot—or I did my best to do so. It he received it in time, he will have alighted behind Ismailia to pick up the doctor."

"In the interval?" Aswami Pasha shrugged. "He may have been traced—arrested. I have done my best. Julian Hess has been advised."

Yu'an Hee See hissed softly for some moments. "Is the man Joseph here?" he asked.

"His instructions were to report to Hassan es-Suk, and Hassan's orders were to facilitate his journey to Kiseir, where Hess will see him and arrange for his crossing."

Yu'an Hee See rested a plump, tapering finger upon the messages, and:

"Good intentions may lead to disaster," he said softly. "We have now no agent on board the Wallaroo—and it is late to alter plans so delicate."

"I quite agree," the pasha replied. "But except in respect of exact information regarding the ship's position, I don't think the situation is serious."

"You don't think so?" Yu'an Hee See whispered even more softly. "A radio message will tell the truth to the world, and we shall be helpless to silence it."

"I have provided for that," the Egyptian answered. "Emil Graus was one of the four best gunners in the German navy. Before any notice is given he must shoot down the mainmast. This will disable the radio. If he should miss, which is unlikely, there is the second quick-firer in charge of Jo Lung, your own gunner."

Yu'an Hee See began hissing again; then:

"We cannot know how much has leaked out; cannot know. This new danger is one we owe to the man Haig. He died too easily. I should have liked to supervise his death. It may mean disaster, but we can only hope. Furthermore, it will have to be a torpedo, after all. Do you realize this?"

Aswami Pasha inclined his head. "I had already arranged for it."

"Your staff work, my friend, has been good but not excellent. Myself, I should have diverted the Fokker direct to our base, since Doctor Oestler may be in possession of details touching our personal security. Well, it is perhaps unnecessary that I should detain you any longer. Have you added to your collection recently? Does some new gem of loveliness call you to clinging arms?"

"No, Excellency. . . . All yours?"

Yu'an Hee See raised closed eyes to Aswami. "Yes," he answered upon a tremulous flute note: "A fragrant western rose. But I fear the thorns, my friend, I could not resist. But I fear I have been rash. . . . For her sweet sake I have imperiled our enterprise—our lives. This you know. But Chinese are gamblers, and those who join them in play must gamble also."

This One Is Hard To Believe

A few minutes ago a woman got on a city bus and asked for change for a dollar. The driver handed her the change and she dropped her fare in the box. They were kind enough to let me ride any way and so here's my back pay." — Lexington Herald.

Finally He Read The Sign

They tell this one on John Delano. He was recently in Tennessee on a brief visit. In driving north near the Kentucky line he came to two roads and didn't know the answer. There was a post at the cross roads with a cross piece at the top and John gallantly offered to climb and see where they were. He had on his Sunday-go-to-meetin' clothes. He clumb and he clumb, but he made it finally. He held on with one hand and struck a match. The sign read, "Wet Paint." — Winchester Sun.

One-Gallus Man
Is Still With Us

I saw a one-gallus man today for the third time since I do not know when. We used to hear a great deal about this fellow when I was a boy. He was a man from away back who wore one gallus because he couldn't afford two. His wife made the one he wore out of a piece of bed-ticking and even in those days bed-ticking cost money. The one I saw today did not seem to be that kind of a fellow. He didn't seem to be especially hard up. He had on a pair of summer pants and a nice blue shirt. He wore a leather belt around his waist and a belt is ordinarily sufficient where pants are to be held up. In this case the wearer was a fat fellow whose stomach merged into his hips and it may have been that the belt failed in some crisis to do its full duty. At any rate, a nice leather gallus was used, presumably to cover accidents. It passed over his right shoulder and when I saw it I was reminded that after all there are crises when the old things are best. — Charles M. Meacham in Hopkinsville New Era.

THE GARDEN

ASPARAGUS

(By John S. Gardner, Ky. College of Agriculture)

Asparagus has been in the course of harvesting for the past six or seven weeks; now the season is drawing to a close. It is during the time that asparagus is being cut that the wish recurs to have some of one's own, and the resolve is made to have it, but something or other interferes with its realization. It may have been so this spring, that the continuing rainy weather prevented getting ground in shape, thus deferring the making of the asparagus bed until next spring. It is not necessary to put it off, however, for asparagus may be set in the early fall. In fact, some authorities prefer fall setting. Now is the time to plan for it, although the time to do the setting does not come until late August.

An asparagus bed may be kept in good production for 10 years, or longer, if its site is properly chosen and if proper care is taken of it. It should be put along an edge of the garden so we be out of the way of the garden operations. Because it is to occupy the same spot for so long a time, soil that has abundant natural fertility and adequate drainage even through the winter should be selected. Further to improve it manure or other humus material should be worked through it in generous amount.

The land should be plowed or spaded deeply as possible, for the deeper the crowns are set, the longer-lived the bed will be. After turning it should be disked or firmed with a hoe or a rake and the setting may be begun. The way to proceed is to dig a trench about 18 inches wide, depending on the spread of the roots, and as deeply as the ground was plowed. In the bottom should be spread a light layer of manure into which high-grade fertilizer has been worked at the rate of one pound to 15 feet of trench. Enough soil should be sifted over it to preclude the danger of the roots touching raw fertilizer.

Next, the crowns should be set, their roots fanned-out after the manner in which they grew. They should be covered with about two inches of soil, and as the shoots grow, the rest of the soil should be drawn toward them until the trench is filled. This completes the work for this year.

Now, as to what variety to use. A common request received is that for the name of a "white" variety. There is none, as such, but "white" asparagus is produced by drawing mounds of soil over the rows, and cutting the shoots deep under the surface, as the buds just break through. There is only one variety universally to recommend. It is Martha Washington, resistant to asparagus rust. If possible, one year plants should be procured, but they should be thrifty. Indeed, it is good practice to purchase 25 per cent more crowns than are needed, from which to select the best.

Fifty crowns should assure an average family with two weekly servings of asparagus, with enough surplus to can 3 winter servings more. Spacing in the row should be 24 inches and, if more than one row is to be set, they should 3 feet wide if green asparagus is to be grown. If it is anticipated to produce the "white" sort, extra row width should be provided; the row-spacing should be 4 feet.

THE FARM AND HOME

Good hay comes from cutting at an early stage of maturity, quick curing and to handling that as few leaves and as little green color as possible are lost. Experiment show that hay cut before it is fully ripe is more nutritious and palatable.

With the peak of egg production for the year in the past it is expected that prices will continue comparatively good. The 15 percent larger business of hatcheries may tend to increase production in late fall and winter.

Keeping work horses and mules on pasture during idle days and at night provides them a place to rest and to have free access to water, aside from giving them needed green feed. When on pasture at night, horses need a third to half less hay.

4-H FAIR

WILL BE HELD AT HARVEST HOME GROUNDS

The 1935 Boone county 4-H and Utopia Club Free Fair and picnic will be held at historic and beautiful Harvest Home Fair grounds on Saturday, August 24th. Plans for the grounds have just recently been completed with members of the Harvest Home Fair Board according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

Harvest Home fair grounds presents the finest place in Northern Kentucky for such a gathering. Three hundred and twenty-seven 4-H club members, fifty adult leaders and sixty Utopia club members are putting forth every effort to make the 1935 fair and picnic the best on record.

The 4-H and Utopia club council will meet at Burlington Friday night of this week to complete plans. The Executive committee of the council in charge of plans for the event are Prof. D. H. Norris, President; Mrs. B. C. Stephens, secretary; John E. Crigler, Treasurer; Prof. E. V. Lents, Advertising Manager; Mrs. Vernon Pope and H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

AN EXPLANATION

Once more we have been forced to leave out a few of our valued communications. This was caused by the space that was required for the six bank statements. The letters that were left out were the ones received last. We hope to include these in next week's issue. It is necessary to omit a few letters on occasions when we publish bank statements, county settlements and the like and we are sure our correspondents will understand our position.

STATE'S SCHOOL FUND IS GROWING. CENSUS SHOWS INCREASE

James H. Richmond, superintendent of public instruction, assured Kentucky school teachers they will receive $10.95 for each student enrolled in state schools. This figure was arrived at by Richmond said, by dividing the school population, 762,725, into the common school fund of $8,351,500.

There is a possibility that the per capita may be increased $1. A suit is to be filed by the attorney general's office seeking to determine the constitutionality of a law passed by the last General Assembly. This law, if declared valid, would allow the appropriation of the additional sum.

Explaining the population increase 1935-36 over last year, which amounts to 41,460, Richmond said that "for the first time in history of Kentucky a complete school census for a single year has been made by trained school people."

OLDER BOYS AND GIRLS WILL TOUR THURSDAY

The Annual Boone County Utopia Club tour will start from a point at Myers garage on Thursday, July 18 at 9:30 A. M., slow time. Members project work will be visited along the following route: Florence, Burlington, Hebron, Petersburg and Grant.

All who are interested in Utopia club work are invited to take part in the tour. Mr. J. W. Whitehouse, State Leader, Utopia Club work, from the University of Kentucky will accompany members on the tour.

WIFE

RECEIVES $2,000 FROM MODERN WOODMEN

Mrs. Courtney Williams, bereaved widow of Courtney Williams, who passed away about a month ago, gets $2,000 life insurance from Modern Woodmen. Mr. Williams was the oldest member of Burlington Lodge. He had been a member of four different lodges, Grange Hall, Hebron, Rock Island and Burlington.

The Lodge feels it a great pleasure to present this amount to a faithful member's wife. We do hope all members of M. W. A. will keep up their policies, for life is so short at times, and it gives a wife or husband and children such a pleasure to be well provided for. We also hope that many more men women and children will take need and become a M. W. A. worker. Any one wishing to do so should notify me, as I am looking for new members for my side.

MRS. BEN C. STEPHENS,
Burlington, Ky., R. D. 2.

CONNER'S RESTAURANT CLOSING FOR WANT OF SUITABLE ROOM.

Conner's Restaurant which has been a familiar spot in Burlington for the past three years, closed a few days ago. This was due to the fact that other plans are being worked out for the building. On account of these inoperative plans the corner room could not be rented for a sufficient time to justify Mr. Conner in renewing his license. It seems that there wasn't any other available room which was centrally located and as a consequence Mr. Conner was forced to discontinue for the present at least. Mr. Conner has not announced his plans for the future.

Conner's Restaurant will be missed by everybody who had occasion to patronize a restaurant. This will be especially noticed during court days. It is hoped that conditions will be worked out whereby the Conner Restaurant may be reopened within a short time. One thing is certain, a county seat without a restaurant is indeed an oddity.

COLUMNS

OF RECORDER OPEN TO ANY POLITICAL FACTION

The Recorder assumes that its readers understand that it does not take any part in the Democratic primary. This paper is a Democratic paper and will do its part in supporting the ticket after the voters have expressed their desires in the matter. Any political faction has a perfect right to publish its views or arguments in our columns, providing it pays the cost of advertising at the regular rate.

We have never received any campaign material except with this understanding. We have published campaign data for Chandler, Rhea, and Huddleston and have treated all alike. All of these candidates have paid the same rate for whatever they published in this paper. Any individual also is permitted to publish his sentiments in these columns, providing he signs the article and pays the customary rate for political advertising.

We believe political discussion is good for the cause of democratic government and invite any faction, individual or political organization to use our columns under the above conditions. We are sure that the voters of Boone county will understand our position.

Cuthbert McComas, Grant county, candidate for representative to the General Assembly from the Boone-Grant District was a business caller at the Recorder office this week. Mr. McComas has been canvassing the county since Monday in the interest of his candidacy. He expects to meet most of the voters of Boone county, before the August 3 primary.

COMMISSION ON SOCIAL SECURITY NAMED.

Frankfort, Ky., July 9.—Kentucky took a step toward enactment of social security laws Saturday, with the appointment of a special commission by Gov. Ruby Laffoon to study a program for state social security legislation.

The members of the commission will meet here Wednesday at 2 p. m., to organize and discuss future plans for its work.

"It seems to me," he continued, "that it is imperative that a group of representative citizens of our commonwealth should look into this whole problem of social security with the view of suggesting to the governor and the general assembly a program of social security for Kentucky consistent with the federal program."

The federal security program, the governor pointed out, provides for old age benefits, and for dependent children, maternal and child welfare, assistance for crippled children, vocational rehabilitation of physically handicapped persons and unemployment compensation.

The following persons were named on the commission: Dr. A. T. McCormack, Louisville; Ben Williamson, Ashland; Dr. K. P. Vinzell, Louisville; Forest Alvin, Covington; Con Craig, Paducah; Blain Collins, Louisville; George Burton, Louisville; James H. Richmond, Frankfort; Harper Gattton, Madisonville; the Rev. Felix M. Pitt, Louisville; Col. P. H. Callahan, Louisville; Rabbi Joseph Rausch, Louisville; Dr. Thomas Marks, Lexington; Dr. T. W. Pennington, Louisville; H. V. McChesney, Frankfort; Robert J. Ball, Louisville, and Thos. E. Ewing, Louisville.

Mr. and Mrs. John Methven and daughter of Middletown, Ohio, is spending two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Slekmann.

KENTUCKY

CROP REPORT FOR JULY 1, 1935.

Prospects for a crop of corn somewhat smaller than in 1934, a larger production of oats than last year, somewhat smaller production of wheat than last year, and approximately 2% increase in this State's total tobacco acreage over 1934, are the features of the July crop report for Kentucky, issued by the Louisville Office of the U. S. Division of Crop and Livestock Estimates. Kentucky's 1935 acreage of tobacco, of all types combined, is estimated at 331,090 acres, or about 2.5% more than the 323,000 acres cut in 1934. Wheat in this State apparently will produce about 3,749,000 bushels compared to 4,250,000 bushels in 1934. Corn acreage in Kentucky is about 2,618,000 acres, the same as in 1934, with a July 1 condition of 62% of normal and a 1933-34 10-year average of 80 July 1. This month's estimate of the acreage and condition of corn in Kentucky indicates a probable crop of about 52,360,000 bushels. Average growing conditions prevail hereafter, compared to 62,832,000 bushels produced last year and an average annual production of 61,290,000 bushels, 1928-32 inclusive. However, as the season progresses these first preliminary forecasts may be changed very materially by changes in conditions after July 1.

Based on records of previous yields of tobacco in Kentucky, this year's acreage, with average conditions until cured, would produce about 258,195,000 lbs. of all types combined, compared to 250,605,000 lbs. of all types produced last year, and a 5-year average annual production of 369,216,000 lbs. 1928-32 inclusive. Types of which the producing areas lie either wholly or partly within Kentucky and which therefore are of direct interest to Kentucky growers, are estimated as follows, by entire type areas, regardless of State boundaries:—burley 314,000 acres this year compared to 307,300 acres last year; Hopkinsville, Clarksville, Springfield dark fired 92,000 acres compared to 90,000 in 1934; Paducah-Mayfield dark fired 33,200 compared to 33,000 last year; Henderson fire stemming 4,500 compared to 4,800 last year; one-sucker 22,700 compared to 20,000 last year; and Green River 20,000 compared to 18,000 last year. These preliminary tobacco estimates are the first of 1935, and the later monthly estimates will be subject to revision either upward or downward as the season progresses, depending on favorable or unfavorable weather and other conditions after July 1.

A wonderful day was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Webster Sunday near Hebron, when a host of relatives and friends gathered with well filled baskets, in honor of their daughter Miss Catherine's 19th birthday. Those who attended the affair were Mr. and Mrs. Omer Jump and daughter, of Bromley; Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Pettit and four sons, of Petersburg; Mr. and Mrs. James Wooster and daughter, of Erlanger; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Groger and sons, of Covington; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Gieger and son, of Erlanger; Mr. and Mrs. Guy Collins and son, of Covington; Mr. and Mrs. Ben Webster, sons and daughter, of Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Webster, sons and daughter of Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Webster, of Sand River, Ky.; Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Webster, of Hebron; Mr. Ralph Wooster, of Erlanger; Miss Geneva Sams, of Bullittsville; Mr. Raymond and Miss Catherine Webster, of Hebron. All enjoyed themselves very much and left at a late hour wishing Miss Catherine many more such beautiful birthdays. She also received many beautiful and useful gifts.

FLORENCE M. E.

The meeting of the Missionary Auxiliary of the Florence Methodist Church was held at Mrs. Geo. Taylor's July 10, at 2 P. M. The devotion was given by Mrs. J. L. Jones, Heb. Second Chapter. The program included "Our Schools of Korea" by Mrs. Mary Carpenter; The Bulletin report by the Secretary; Mrs. Carpenter acted as president. The meeting was closed with prayer to meet with Mrs. Fogle on August 7th.

The Methodist ladies also wish to take this opportunity to announce that their bakery sale will be held at Morris' Department Store on July 27. Everyone is invited to come and patronize a worthy cause.

P. T. A. NOTICE

There will be a called meeting of the New Haven Parent-Teacher Association at the home of Mrs. Walter Ferguson on Friday night, July 19. All members are urged to be present.

1934 GROWTH

IN CHURCH MEMBERSHIP LARGEST SINCE 1930.

The total increase in church membership in the United States in 1934 was the largest reported since 1930, and one of the largest ever recorded, according to the Christian Herald's annual report of church statistics. The report appears in the current issue of that periodical. It was prepared by Dr. George Linn Kieffer, president of the American Association of Religious Statisticians.

In 1934, churches and religious bodies showed a total gain in membership of 1,223,034. The gain in "adult" membership, thirteen years of age and over, was 910,651. The fifty largest religious bodies alone, those having a membership of 50,000 or more, gained a total of 1,207,183.

The Methodists, whose rate of increase for several years previous was not so large have risen to the head of the Protestant denominations with a total net gain of 210,475 members in 1934. The Baptists, who have led for several years, come second with a gain of 161,720. The Lutherans are third, with a gain of 101,118. Other leading denominations also gained substantially; among them, the Disciples of Christ gained 29,282; the Presbyterians, 21,764, and the Protestant Episcopalians, 22,159.

The Baptists, with a total membership of 10,027,929, still remain the largest Protestant denomination. The Methodists, with 8,976,492, are second. The Roman Catholic Church is still the largest religious body in the country, with a total membership of 20,398,509; a one-year gain of 198,915.

The percentage of gain also shows some striking increases. In the single year of 1934, the Methodists gained 3.40 per cent; the Lutherans, 2.31 per cent; the Evangelical denomination, 4.92 per cent; the Baptists, 1.63 per cent; and the comparatively small Nazarene denomination made a gain of 9.02 per cent.

Total all-purpose contributions made by church members in 1934 amounted to $299,416,781.39, a per capita contribution of $12.07. Contribution in 1933 amounted to $16.11. While this shows a loss, it is the belief of Dr. Kieffer that the churches have maintained their standing and credit all through the years of the depression as no other business or local organization has done.

FLORENCE CHRISTIAN CHURCH NOTICE

Rev. Herbert Tinsley will preach at the Florence Christian church next Sunday afternoon at 2:45 P. M.

BASE BALL NEWS

The Constance team won the game, Sunday played at Midway Park by a score of 7 to 5. The game was very close all the way. The score was tied for several innings. The Burlington team will play at Midway Park next Sunday, July 21. We are always glad to welcome these boys to our park. The game will be called at 3:30, (fast time).

Midway Ball Club.

310 CONTRACTS MEASURED FOR COMPLIANCE

Corn and tobacco acreage on three hundred and ten AAA contracts was measured the past week for compliance according to Floyd S. Crigler, County AAA Supervisor.

The field supervisors are working daily in the attempt to get the 1935 AAA tobacco and corn acreage measured at the earliest possible date. Compliance measurements on more than nine hundred tobacco and one hundred and ninety-four corn-hog contracts will be completed in about two weeks.

M. L. Hutcherson, Williamstown, Ky., was in town last week circulating among the voters. He is a candidate for representative to the Boone-Grant District to the General Assembly. While here he paid the Recorder a visit and stated that he would be back in Boone county again before the primary. Mr. Hutcherson is a minister in Grant county and member of the County School Board of that county.

The Recorder received a pleasant visit from Julius Smith one day last week. Julius has a responsible position in the Cincinnati insurance field and had a day off and spent it in Burlington. He is a former student of the present Editor of the Recorder and for that reason especially is a most welcome caller.

The Recorder congratulates Julius on the progress he has made since his high school days.

W. M. S. OF BURLINGTON BAPTIST CHURCH HOLDS MEETING

The W. M. S. of the Burlington Baptist Church met at the church for their regular monthly meeting on July 11. Fourteen members were present.

The meeting was opened with a hymn after which the following program was given: Devotional and remarks by Kathryn Maston; prayer by Mrs. Bert Gaines. The topic for the month was "The Challenge of Modern Conditions to Uplift the Banner of the Cross in Africa." Remarks were given on "Changing Africa" by Alice Yelton. Then, each member present gave an interesting fact about Africa. Problems, old and new, was given by Pauline Smith. "Little Things in Mission Work" was then given by Marge Hensley. A piano solo followed rendered by Helen Clore. Elaine Greenup gave a poem entitled "Life That Counts." "Bababumi is Exiled" was given by Stella Gaines. The meeting was closed with prayer by Mrs. Bert Gaines.

KERA PROGRAM

STOPPED ENTIRELY. NEW SET-UP ARRANGED

Temporary discontinuance of all Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration projects was ordered Wednesday pending transfer of existing relief projects to a new Works Progress Administration set-up.

The order, issued by E. A. Marye, Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration Works Director, followed a conference of Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration Area Administrators with E. A. Goodman, Relief Director for Kentucky, here Goodman will continue as director in the new Works Progress Administration organization.

In disclosing the cessation order, Goodman said it would be impossible to say how long the transaction period from Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration to Works Progress Administration would be.

Documents on projects, the estimated cost of which is approximately $500,000, were sent to Washington Wednesday, Goodman said; with a request that they be transferred for continuance under the new relief program. New projects will be sent in as they develop, he added.

The Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration projects submitted will be studied in Works Progress Administration headquarters as Washington, the director said, and those approved for continuance returned here. When the Kentucky headquarters receives notice of the transfer and approval, work can be resumed.

Stating that the transition period would not be "an overnight affair," Goodman said, "we will have to wait until enough projects are approved to form a genuine works program before our Works Progress Administration set-up is put into action."

Within a week or ten days, he estimated the new program will begin to take form.

BIG BONE SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS MET JULY 11

The Big Bone Baraca Class met with Rev. R. A. Johnson on July 11th with 19 members present. Many other visitors made a total of 57 in all.

The following officers were elected: President—Everett Jones; 1st Vice—Tom Hamilton; 2nd Vice, Robert Woods; 3rd Vice, John Ayler; Treasurer, Len Hubbard, Secretary, Shelton Love.

The Baraca Class will give an ice cream supper on the lawn at the church July 27th. Everyone invited.

After business session ice cream and cake was served. All had a good time and hope to meet again.

Otho Hubbard, Secretary

AUCTION AT CODY'S DRAWS LARGE CROWD

Not for their intrinsic value, but as souvenirs of the golden era of Col. Tom Cody, nearly 700 persons bid spiritedly Saturday to get possession of copper kettles, tableware and burgoo-making utensils used many years by Col. Cody at his famous parties.

Col. Cody's personal property was auctioned by P. G. Kinman on the grounds of his place on the Dixie Highway near Erlanger.

Many of Col. Cody's neighbors on the Dixie Highway and friends who have known him during the many years he has catered to the tastes of Greater Cincinnati epicures were on hand to purchase antiques.

STATEMENTS

SHOW BANKS TO BE IN EXCEPTIONALLY FINE CONDITION

In this week's issue of the Recorder appears the statements of six Boone County banks as of June 29, 1935. A perusal of these statements will plainly indicate that all these banks are in excellent condition and fully able to meet the legitimate financial needs of their respective communities or sections. Boone county is fortunate, indeed to have financial institutions of these types. The statements also show that these banks are managed by capable officers and directors. The Recorder is sorry that it does not have the statements of the other three banks in the county before it in order that complete figures of all the nine banks could be given. The statements of the other three banks unquestionably will show the same sound condition. These nine banks are a credit to our county and the Recorder congratulates the officials of all of them for the excellent showing made.

It might be interesting to our readers to note a few group figures taken from the statements of the six banks appearing in this week's paper. The total resources of the six banks are $1,909,189.75. The total deposits are $1,586,441.97. This leaves a margin of resources over deposits of $322,747.78. The combined capital of the six banks is $222,000.00 while their total surplus and undivided profits are $80,326.51.

KENTUCKIAN WINS PRAISE IN COMEBACK

The comeback of Earl Combs, most popular of Kentucky big leaguers, is accomplished, according to dispatches from New York papers. Combs, a New York Yankee outfielder, fractured his skull last year in a game against the St. Louis Browns. For a long time it was doubtful if the former Western State Teachers' College star would ever play.

A week ago Combs smacked out three hits, one a homer, to help Lefty Gomez won his ball game. The Yankees defeated Washington, 6 to 3, and metropolitan players hailed the southern sportsman. Several of the umpires were not satisfied in saying that Combs had come back.

"He's better than ever," was their comment.

TEXAS FOLKS VISIT BOONE CO.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Leatherman, Arlington, Texas, were callers at the Recorder office the past week. They had been to Detroit after cars and were on their way back to their Texas home. Mrs. Leatherman had never been in Burlington before but was interested owing to the fact that her parents had lived in Boone county quite a number of years ago. Mrs. Leatherman's parents were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Appleton. The Appletons left this county a great many years ago and settled in Texas.

Mrs. Appleton's parents, it seems, lived at one time in the property now occupied by the Guiley-Pettit families. Mrs. Appleton's mother was a cousin of Messrs. Fountain and W. L. Riddell.

E. I. Sidebottom is making an active canvass for representative to the Boone-Grant District to the General Assembly. He is making a number of speeches in behalf of his candidacy in different sections of the county. The schedule of his speeches will be found in another column. Mr. Sidebottom has arranged this schedule to include all parts of Boone county.

DIRECTORS

NAMED FOR WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION

Louisville, Ky., July 17.—George H. Goodman, Works Progress Administrator, today announced the names of six directors to be responsible to him for the new progress now being launched in Kentucky to give jobs to those now on relief rolls. The appointments are as follows:

District No. 1, Madisonville, Jas. A. Boddie; District No. 2, Danville, George F. Shaw; District No. 3, Lexington, Ernest Rowe; District No. 4, London, Jesse O. Creech; District No. 5, Paintsville, Arthur Gamble, District No. 6, Louisville, W. E. Evans.

Each director, Mr. Goodman said, will be in absolute charge in his respective district of all Works Progress Administration affairs. The director will be responsible to Mr. Goodman, while he in turn will be responsible to Washington.

WHATTA LIFE!

The editor of the Kingston (N. Y.) Freeman received the following letter: Please send me a few copies of the paper containing the obituary of my aunt. Also publish the enclosed clipping of the marriage of my niece who lives in Saugerties. And I wish you would be good enough to mention in your local column, if it doesn't cost anything, that I have 2 nice puppies for sale. As my subscription is out, please stop the paper, as times are too hard to waste money on newspapers.

The Freeman should follow the usual custom of newspapers when such "public-spirited" citizens are called to their eternal homes—invert the column rules and mourn for at least thirty days.

WHAT A FRUIT!

Who will again doubt the benevolence of science? No grower, barterer or lover of watermelon will, at least.

Whether fruit, vegetable or herb, the watermelon has always had a host of friends. People like berries, grape fruit, peaches and cantaloupe, but their attachment to the watermelon is something deeper and more enduring.

One thing only the watermelon was thought to lack; it is beautiful. It is luscious; it is satisfying. Its inner shell of spongy green, its inner lining of white, its luscious red contrasting irresistibly with the rich mahogany of its ripened seeds, are as satisfying to the painter as its full-flavored sweetness to the epicure.

But still it was supposed to fall short of the ideal. For even those most addicted to its consumption never gave it credit for being nourishing.

Here is where science proves its benevolence. The department of agriculture has discovered that watermelons are chock-full of four kinds of vitamins. Any fruit, or whatever a watermelon is, that boasts one vitamin can get by with the dieticians. But four of them! What a fruit!

SEEN and HEARD

around the
National Capital

By CARTER FIELD

Washington—The so-called silver bloc in the senate—it is not so important in the house for the simple reason that most of the silver producing states are small in population, and hence do not have many representatives—is good and sore with the administration, but has not gotten to first base in making its resentment felt.

Having stampeded the administration in the last session, and enacted a law which seemed to promise to take the silver producers to the promised land—not to mention producing a fair degree of inflation—the silverites have watched with growing irritation the bogging down of the treasury's buying campaign.

The law on the books is ample to accomplish their purpose. It requires the secretary of the treasury to buy silver until the price reaches $1.29 an ounce, or until it becomes one-third of the government's metallic reserve.

But it does not fix a time limit! Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau is not in sympathy with the silver plan at all, save on one detail. He does like the idea of buying a lot of silver cheap, and then reselling it, thus netting a fat profit for the treasury—as the treasury did on gold.

But to accomplish the most in this direction it is necessary to buy the silver at low prices. Every additional cent per ounce paid for silver bought cuts down the revaluation profit to the treasury when that day comes.

Experts on the sidelines believe that Morgenthau has played a masterly game at this, in view of the knowledge the whole world has that the law provides this $1.29 objective. For a while the price of silver slipped tremendously, holders not wishing to sell because they figured the price would be higher later on.

Treasury Maneuvers

Thereupon the treasury began its maneuvering. It let leak out stories that the administration was deeply sympathetic with the plight into which the American silver buying policy had plunged China. And so on.

Whereupon the price of silver banged down, and the silver senators got madder and madder.

But meanwhile the treasury continued to pay considerably above the world price for all newly mined silver, making it clear to the miners that the price paid them would not be revised downward no matter what happened to the world price.

So the miners were happy, or at least, not angry. Just a little disappointed at failure of the price to climb on up to $1.29, as predicted.

The silver senators, however, were not even placated by this. The reason is not merely that they felt cheated, believing they had provided for a gradual rise to $1.29, and then seeing it fall. It so happens that nearly all the silver senators are also inflationists. They put their bill over last session by a coalition with inflation senators from non-silver producing states. And they knew perfectly well they were not getting the degree of inflation from the silver purchases that they had expected.

Next session will see a much more militant silver and inflation bloc. Next session will be leading down the straightway to election day. And President Roosevelt and Mr. Morgenthau will be much more considerate of the feelings of the silver senators than they seem to be now.

But meanwhile the treasury will have bought a lot of cheap silver, and the profit to be boasted about in the campaign will be much sweeter!

Most Vital Factor

Possibility that stockholders in the big corporations of the country, taking note of what happened to President Roosevelt's public utility holding corporation "death sentence" in the house of representatives, may try to "save their bacon" on the White House tax drive against bigness, is the most vital factor today in the whole New Deal program.

The importance of that big house majority against the "death sentence" is what caused it. On a rough estimate, 200 members of the house voted against the President, not because they wanted to do so, but because they did not dare do otherwise. Their offices were flooded with letters from stockholders in the utility corporations—stockholders who lived—and voted—in their districts. Stockholders in many instances whose names they knew, and of whose good faith there was no question.

It was this flood of mail—not the operations of the much criticized power lobby—which caused that surprising overturn. It is perfectly true that the utility companies stirred up the letter writers. The attention of the security holders had to be called to the fact that legislation threatening their financial interest—or alleged to be so threatening—was pending.

Nothing like it ever happened before. Back in the days of the Esch-Cummings railroad bill there was not a single letter from any stock or bondholder affected written to the congressman then representing the Seventeenth district. This district includes upper Fifth avenue, Riverside drive and probably is the banner district for invested wealth in the entire United States. The percentage of all railroad securities owned by persons living in that district would be startling if there were any way of checking up on it. Yet no one of these wealthy owners bothered to write.

A little later in the same session in which the Esch-Cummings bill was passed there came up a little measure which would affect florists. The congressman from the wealthy Seventeenth New York district was overwhelmed with mail. He had not realized there were so many florists in his constituency.

Florists on Job

The point is that the florists were on the job, as far as watching against adverse legislation is concerned. The investors were not.

But this year has seen the investors mobilized for the first time. The question is: Can business in general do the same sort of job that the utility executives did this year in arousing their stockholders?

While no one knows what the final rates of the tax against bigness will be, the top rate in the preliminary figures—for which no one acknowledges responsibility—are 17½ per cent. This means nearly one-fifth of a company's net income.

Compliments as to what this would do to the big companies have been made, and general agreement is that this would be sufficient to put them out of business.

But the object of the sliding scale is avowedly to put them out of business, which means that the present bill is only an opening wedge. Obviously the investors most hurt by this program, if continued, will be the common stockholders. Their dividends will be endangered. For instance, even this year the American Telephone and Telegraph company is paying part of its dividends out of surplus, as it has been since the depression started.

Sharp boosting in the taxes would mean that it and other large corporations, would be obliged to reduce their dividends. The question is whether the stockholders will begin a letter writing drive to their congressmen as the utility stockholders did. If they do, the corporation sliding scale tax will be beaten, as the "death sentence" was.

"Ding's" Big Job

Jay N. Darling—better known as "Ding," the cartoonist—is trying to do for wild ducks and geese, the mountain goat, caribou, antelope, and whatnot in the game line, what Mark Sullivan, serious writer on politics and economics, did in his youth for the buffalo.

Ding thinks Sullivan's job was magnificent, but rather amusing in view of the deeply serious nature of the Sullivan's mental processes. For example, Sullivan is probably the closest personal friend of Herbert Hoover.

When quite a lad, Sullivan read something in a newspaper about the American buffalo, or more correctly, bison, becoming extinct. At once he went into action. He wrote to every living person who owned a buffalo, including a British peer. He wrote to every zoo in the country, asking if they would like to have a pair, and if they would promise to take care of them and let them breed if they got a suitable pair.

At the moment a big rancher not far from Yellowstone park had a herd, which he found so unprofitable that he was obliged to dispose of them. It was the story about this, setting forth also that the bison was about to pass into zoological history, that started Mark off.

Before he was through he had disposed of every buffalo in that herd, placed them carefully in zoos that wanted them, in cities all over the country. As a result, the supply of buffalo today is so plentiful that every few years a herd is turned over to the Indians for slaughter.

The fact that Ding is now head of the biological survey is more out of the ordinary than Mark Sullivan's taking an interest, in his youth, in the buffalo. This man, who is now head of the biological survey, is a Republican and was a delegate to the Republican convention that nominated Hoover.

Called Smart Move

So a great many people think the smartest thing Mr. Roosevelt has done since he entered the White House was to put Ding at the head of the biological survey. The man is naturally Republican in his tendencies, and very hard-headed indeed, although a Progressive. And the fact that his pictures were printed in about 300 fairly important newspapers in this country every morning, before he arranged to lay off until his government job was completed, made him pretty nearly a nightmare for anyone in high office whose policies Ding might think humorous. He would be apt to get the whole country laughing at the unfortunate statesman.

Which is also the real answer to the fact that he may surmount the tremendous difficulties in the path of his plans to save game in this country. This despite his forthright declarations that $100,000,000 of the taxpayers' money has been poured "down a rat hole" up to now by having stupid political wheel horses operate as state game wardens.

For the high bureaucrats and officials generally whose toes he occasionally tramples do not try to thwart him. Instead they grin most pleasantly, and at least half the time let him have his way. For they all realize it might be a terrible thing for them if Ding suddenly got mad about something and quit.

It is such a situation as Washington never saw before, and may not see again for many a long year. Meanwhile Ding is going serenely ahead, buying land at the rate of 600,000 acres a year for nesting areas, safety islands along the flyways of migratory birds, and winter refuges in the southern part of our country.

FORTY YEARS AGO

From the Files of The Boone County Recorder

(ISSUE OF JULY 17, 1895)

Pastures in many places are very short.

There is a good crop of Irish potatoes.

Rain enough fell Monday morning to lay the dust.

Born—On the 15th inst., to H. C. Lassing, Jr., and wife, a daughter.

Taking the county over there never was a better prospect for a corn crop.

The traders say they can not buy lambs cheap enough to make any money.

The Boone County Teachers' Institute will be held in Union Aug. 12th to 17th.

P. E. Cason has purchased of Owen Hullett the house and lot here in town, occupied by Elmer Beall.

The colored folks gave a picnic in Hawkins woods last Saturday night. The dancing was kept up until after midnight.

The horse which will be seen riding and driving stock, Monday fell with him, breaking one of his legs just above the ankle.

O. W. Gaines, of the Bullittsville neighborhood, uses Babbitt's potash for dehorning calves, and in quite a number of trials, he has never had a failure.

The first whistle of the threshing machine was heard in this neighborhood last Saturday afternoon, when Mr. Oscar Games machine raised steam at James E. Smith's stack-yard.

The money with which to pay those who served as grand and petit jurors at the last April term of the circuit court, has been received by the trustee of the jury fund, and he is now paying it out.

Marshall Arnold, of Walton, lodged a colored boy in jail here Sunday morning. He is charged with attempting to poison a family by putting Cobalt flypaper in a coffee pot. He says he did it.

Miss Lottie Hall is visiting her aunt, at Mt. Adams, Ohio.

Rev. T. L. Utz preached at the Baptist church last Saturday night.

Miss Katie Huey is visiting her sister, Mr. Geo. F. Poper, at Louisville.

J. M. Lassing was in Walton two or three days last week, taking depositions.

Miss Annie and Lottie Garrison are visiting relatives in the Union neighborhood.

Mrs. Kibb Foster and daughter, of Jacksonville, Florida, arrived here last Thursday to visit Mrs. Foster's mother.

Mrs. Dr. Furnish returned home last Wednesday after a visit of two weeks with the Doctor's mother at Wheatley, Owen county.

Mrs. C. L. Cropper will entertain Burlington's fair young ladies and gallants this (Wednesday) evening, with a hop at the Boone House.

Mrs. Ashburn, Mrs. Davranville and Miss Ollie Kirkpatrick, who were visiting relatives here, last week, returned home last Saturday.

J. H. Rogers, candidate for county clerk, landed in town Thursday evening. He says when he gets in sight of a voter his right arm commences reaching out.

A very delightful party was given by Miss Sheba Roberts, last Wednesday evening. A large crowd was in attendance.

Bert Scott, of Kenton county, and Miss Carrie M. Riggs of the Pt.

Pleasant neighborhood, this county, were married last Wednesday. The Recorder extends congratulations.

Bellevue

Mrs. Ollie Duncan, of Tennessee, daughter of J. K. Pope, formerly of this county, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Mollie Kelly. She will probably spend several weeks with relatives here.

Tom Clore dug and shipped to the city 20 bushels of potatoes last Friday night. We did not learn the price.

J. S. Huey was calling on his daughter Mrs. Belle Clore last Sunday.

J. H. Rogers, candidate for county clerk, and Sheriff Roberts, were circulating among voters here Thursday.

Elijah Parker passed, on his way home, Sunday morning after a week's stay among the voters here, at Rabbit Hash and Big Bone.

B. W. Adams, candidate for county clerk, passed here the first of the week, enroute to Petersburg to see the voters upthere.

Idlewild

Ira Pope, of near Rabbit Hash, was visiting his sister, Mrs. Edward Rice, one day last week.

Corn looks fine, but tobacco is not very promising.

Some of the old fathers and mothers in Israel object to the organ being used in the Christian church at Petersburg.

Eddie Kelm went in bathing the other day and in his absence some one held up his clothes to the amount of $6.

Hubert Walton has resigned his position with the Boone County Mercantile Co., and has returned to his first love—farming.

Mrs. Woodford Sullivan is very low with stomach trouble. Her recovery is doubtful.

Jack Sandford is lattie but he is gallant.

The blackberry crop is a failure, but the rabbit crop is very promising.

Miss Pearl Crisler and Lola Matthews have new bicycles and are splendid riders.

It is reported that the candidates will give a fish fry on the Laughey bar in the near future.

W. H. Grant's horse ran off with him last Friday evening, throwing him out of the wagon, breaking one of his arms, besides bruising him otherwise.

Bathway

Mrs. Will Ryle and Miss Ella Rice, of Bellevue, were the guests of Wm. White and family last Tuesday.

It takes Wood Stephens and Tobe Marshall to trade horses. I tell you they do it up in style and both get cheated.

Petersburg

Rev. Leslie Earley, who was called here by the death of his mother, has returned to his home.

Some repairing is being done at the distillery which we hope is completed at an early date.

Mr. Editor, we are now training to whip the winner of the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight.

Limaburg

Wheat all stacked and hay harvested in full blast, with a good deal of grass cut.

A very good crop of oats, some of which has been cut.

TO THE VOTERS OF BOONE CO.

Gentlemen:

Why is it the Court House gang manifests so much interest in your voting for their man in this gubernatorial race? Eliminate from your minds that this bunch is working for your interest. It is how many plumbs they will be able to pick. They, the Court House Gang, sit around week in and week out with their assistance of one or two on the outside as to how best they can pull the wool over the eyes of the voters of Boone county in order that they can be beneficiaries in the transaction. At the same time every dollar they have or most every dollar has been taken from the taxpayers of Boone county. They actually think they are self appointed guardians of the voters of Boone and that they (the voters) haven't sense enough to vote for their best interests. They resort to every trick and trade but you always have the bills to pay, not them.

I have an abiding faith in the voters of Boone in that they have sense enough and intelligence enough to exercise that right given them under the Constitution, to vote for what they think is their interests and when they have done that some of these fellows who have been long feasting at the public crib, will have to look for another job.

yours,
A. ROGERS,
Grant P. O. Ky.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hall and family, of Covington, were calling on Mrs. Susie Stephens and family Sunday. Lee Roy Hall is spending a few weeks with his grandmother.

THOS. S. RHEA AS OTHERS SEE HIM

He (Rhea) never says anything he doesn't mean and he never promises anything that he doesn't perform. He is naturally kind-hearted, impulsive and generous, but he understands the game of politics. He understands all the elements that enter into the political game in Kentucky. It was his astuteness and far-seeing ability which enabled Kentucky to send a delegation to the Chicago Convention for Franklin D. Roosevelt.—Harry Sommers in Elizabethtown News.

No one would make a better Governor than he (Rhea) and he is as honest as the day is long. His word is as good as the best gold bond. He is staunch and loyal in friendship, and always fights above the belt. He is a splendid gentleman and a trustworthy Kentuckian.—Danville Advocate.

No Kentuckian, in the history of politics in this State perhaps, has received a rosier garland of words of praise than Thomas S. Rhea received last night (November 17, 1933) at Cave City. Speakers left no doubt of their sincerity. The intensity of the speaker's emotions was shared by those not speaking, who bruised their hands applauding.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

In my race for the Senate in 1914, he (Rhea) was my Campaign Chairman and again in the race for Governor in 1927, and in both instances he rendered loyal and valuable service to my candidacy. Indeed, in all the years since he became active in state politics, I have never had occasion to doubt the value of his services or his loyalty to me when I was a candidate.—From letter written by former Gov. J. C. W. Beckham appearing in recent issue of The Courier-Journal in the "Point of View" column.

Tom Rhea's life work has been for his friends. He has been generous in victory and without rancor in defeat.—Owensboro Messenger-Inquirer.

A likeable fellow, loyal to his friends and true to any promise he makes.—Somerset Journal.

Heretofore he has served others, content to stay behind the scenes... to be recognized as "timber for Governor" is an honor that he richly deserves and his election is his just due.—Cadiz Record.

Nothing indicates so well a man's true character than what the people think of him back home.... One of my friends this morning summed up this man's character in a few words. "Senator," my friend said to me, "Tom Rhea is a great man because he never went back on his word to a friend."—From speech of U. S. Senator M. M. Logan at Russellville Ky., June 19, 1934.

DEATHS

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Resolutions of East Bend Baptist Sunday School on the death of our beloved Brother Carl Peters, who ceased to walk this life June 30th, 1935:

Whereas, death in a mysterious manner has called from earth our beloved brother to his reward on high, and desiring to show our brotherly esteem and also our sorrow over his sudden and untimely end, therefore be it

Resolved, that this Sunday School holds in loving remembrance his faithfulness to his Sunday School and to his Lord and Master, and that in his death this Sunday School has lost a good and faithful member, the community a good citizen.

Resolved, that while we must bow in submission we keenly feel our loss, and pray God will raise up some one to fill his place in our Sunday School, he loved so well. As we bend a listening ear, there comes to us down through the ages "a voice from Heaven saying write, blessed are the dead, which die in the Lord, from henceforth, yea saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

Resolved, that we tender heartfelt sympathy to his loyal friends, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hodges, praying God's blessings upon them and as a token of our high esteem and love of our departed brother these resolutions be made a part of the Sunday School minutes, a copy be given his friends Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hodges and a copy published in the Boone County Recorder.

MINNETTE STEPHENS,
Committee on Resolutions.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Matt Kearney, young American living in London, says good-bye to his sister Eileen, on board the steamer Wallaroo bound for Colombo. The Wallaroo is conveying $2,000,000 in gold to Australia. Eileen has a presentiment of coming evil, which affects her brother. On his way home Kearney meets an old friend, Inspector Dawson Haig, of Scotland Yard, who is very much in love with Eileen. Haig is on the trail of opium, which he is convinced is concealed in Jo Lunn's warehouse. Called to other duty, Haig delegates Kearney, with Detective Norwich, to visit the place and find out what he can.

CHAPTER II.—They find the place a veritable treasure house, and Kearney recognizes jewels stolen from his aunt. While in the warehouse he picks up a notebook. Soon after leaving Kearney Norwich is murdered. Haig is puzzled over cryptic notes in the book, referring to steps to be made by the Wallaroo.

CHAPTER III.—Yu-an Hee See, high-born Chinaman, whom Haig has long been seeking as the leader of a band of international thieves, is at Jo Lunn's. Discovering the loss of his notebook, he sends two of his followers after Norwich and Kearney, one of whom he realizes must have picked it up. Norwich's murder follows, but Kearney is not overtaken. While Haig is poring over the book, alone in Kearney's room, a monstrous creature enters, seizes it, and escapes.

CHAPTER IV.—Kearney's story of hearing horrible laughter while at Jo Lunn's place satisfies Haig his quarry was in hiding there, he recognizing the peculiar malignancy of Yu-an's laugh.

CHAPTER V.—Eileen Kearney, writing to Haig, tells of a jolly fellow passenger, a clever Austrian, Doctor Oestler. At Cairo Yu-an confers with his lieutenant, Aswami Pasha, known among the gang as the "Chief," over a mysterious coup they are planning. Haig goes to Marseilles, where he meets Eileen when she goes ashore with Doctor Oestler. The inspector boards the Wallaroo, disguised. From radio messages he decodes, he realizes Oestler, with others on board, are members of Yu-an's gang and that they have recognized him.

CHAPTER VI.—A huge Chinaman tries to throw Haig overboard but goes over himself in a desperate struggle. At Port Said Eileen disappears.

CHAPTER VII.—Haig, trailing Eileen and Doctor Oestler, is lured into a drug-impregnated "bath of feathers." Oestler reports that he left Eileen shopping, and though under suspicion, his story cannot be shaken. Haig escapes from the deadly trap and shoots Joseph, one of the plotters. Eileen, who has been drugged, regains consciousness in an Arabian mansion, Yu-an's headquarters.

CHAPTER VIII.—Haig takes Joseph's papers, and reports Eileen's kidnapping to the British consul, Oestler and Miss Edman, an accomplice, mysteriously disappear from the Wallaroo and appear at Yu-an's headquarters in Arabia. It is evident as Yu-an and Aswami Pasha talk that they intend to capture or sink the Wallaroo. Using Joseph's credentials, Haig makes his way to Kenah, Arabia.

CHAPTER IX.—Yu-an's cut-throat gang gathers for final instructions from Aswami Pasha as to capturing the Wallaroo's cargo of gold the next day in the Red sea. Haig begins to perceive Yu-an's monstrous plot, to seize the gold, but all his thoughts are centered on the rescue of Eileen. Impersonating Joseph, he is assigned to guard duty outside Yu-an's mansion. The girl sees him from a window, and is heartened. Haig also has seen her.

Dawson Haig adjusted the dead man's turban. Sea breezes and a touch of African sun already had lightened his naturally pale face. And, as he saw in the mirror above the wash bowl, the effect was not so bad. He did not in the least resemble the Joseph who had died, but he might have passed for one of the lighter skinned natives—for a Turk or for a Green.

The Effect Was Not So Bad.

He had not availed himself of the accommodation provided by the second-class ticket in the Armenian's possession. He was sole occupant of a first-class sleeper.

The "letter of travel" seemed to indicate that the man called Hassan es-Suk did not know Joseph by sight. But, as the train was nearing Kenah now, an important decision remained to be made: How was "Joseph" to account for his total ignorance of Arabic? Upon the correct solution his life might hang.

The Cairo police had proved to be surprisingly efficient. Kenah had been advised, and a man whose job was to cover all his (Haig's) movements, was in the second-class section. But, fearful above all things for Eileen, he had vetoed any raids or arrests not authorized by himself. He knew something of the resources of Yu-an Hee See. One false move—and she might be lost forever!

As he pushed his way through the jabbering throng, making for the exit at Kenah, his hand rested upon the automatic in his pocket.

A tall Arab justified him. "Telephone on your right!" said an English voice. It was the man from Cairo.

Haig called up the Mudir, as arranged. "Inspector Dawson Haig speaking," he said. "You have been advised by Cairo?"

"Quite right, Inspector," the voice replied; to his great relief that of an Englishman. "I have arranged to have the place watched. It's the Cafe Magrab. Any one of the drivers outside the station will take you there. One of our fellows is inside. There's nothing conspicuous about him except that he's smoking a very large meerschaum pipe! Bump into him on your way out so that he drops his pipe. Stoop to pick it up and give him your next address."

A tired-looking horse in the shafts of an arabesque waited outside the station; and to the driver Dawson Haig said briefly, "Cafe Magrab!"

The Cafe Magrab fronted upon a street in which there were tawdry places of entertainment. Painted women's faces peered out from upper windows. Soon Haig stood staring into a sort of cave in a high wall—presumably the Cafe Magrab!

There was a wooden seat along one side, and a few low stools. There were no tables and there was nothing in the nature of a bar or counter. Four or five Arabs crouched in the shadows of the place. Outside on the footpath, two chairs were set. Haig, dropping down upon one of these, peered into the semi-darkness of the place anxiously.

The tall "Arab" who had come from Cairo was approaching with long, leisurely strides. A slovenly-looking negro emerged from the blackness at the end of the cave and approached.

But Haig had not yet discovered his man. Then he observed a customer who, unlike the rest, did not smoke cigarettes. . . . an Arab, apparently, muffled up in many-colored rags, and crouched in a dim corner. A glass rested upon a small stool beside him.

And this eccentric Arab in the corner smoked a meerschaum pipe!

"Hassan es-Suk," said Haig sharply. The negro nodded, retired into darkness, and presently returned. He indicated that Haig should follow. Haig crossed the reeking little room, almost brushing the garments of the meerschaum smoker. A door on the right of an uncarpeted passage was open, four steps descending to a sunken chamber. As the negro withdrew, Haig watched the curtained doorway. The first test was about to come.

Another door at the further end of the room opened, and a venerable Arab entered, his peering face a wrinkled mass of cunning; but his first words lifted a great load from the inspector's mind.

"It surely can be none other than Joseph who delights my eyes!" he said in excellent Biblical English. "You are late, Joseph—but welcome. Give me the letter, son."

Haig silently placed the letter in the claw-like hand of the old Arab. Hassan es-Suk barely glanced at it, but, plunging his fingers beneath his robe, produced another, identical in appearance.

"It is well, Joseph," he said. "The wise man cultivates paucity of speech but abundance of observation." He watched, as Haig, noting that the second envelope bore the same typewritten superscription: "For Joseph"—opened it and took out the slip of paper it contained. This was what he read:

"You will leave immediately by car for Koseir. Report at the house of Dr. Julian Hess, Chief."

Dawson Haig nodded, and placed letter and envelope in his pocket. "I am ready, Hassan," he said. "To obey my orders, when I have cooled my body and moistened my throat."

Haig mounted the steps and walked along the uncarpeted passage, pulling the curtain aside; he stumbled over the man who sat there. . . . and a meerschaum pipe fell to the floor and smashed.

"Inshallah!" groaned the owner. Haig stooped swiftly. "Koseir by car in five minutes," he whispered. "House of Dr. Julian Hess."

"Offer me money!" came a muffled whisper. Haig put his hand into his pocket, when:

"Give him no money!" came an angry shriek from Hassan es-Suk at his elbow. "He is a lump of mud, a son of filth, an unutterable liar! It was a trick!"

Cursing, opening and closing his talon-like hands, old Hassan es-Suk poured forth a torrent of what Haig divined to be brilliant invective. The seated man shrugged resignedly. Hassan es-Suk pushed Haig forward.

"A spy—" he whispered in his ear—"a dirty police pig! Legone—quickly!"

Eileen sat on the edge of the disordered laquered bed, her teeth tightly clenched. She had completed an exploration of her prison. There was a large wardrobe in which, carefully hung, were the clothes she had worn in Port Said. There was an extravagantly appointed bathroom. She had succeeded in recalling everything of that dim past out of which she had awakened in this preposterous place, up to the very moment of entering the shop of Mohammed.

She recalled seeing Dawson Haig outside. It was then she accepted the invitation of the aged Arab to explore the treasure house beyond. Here her memory terminated with the recollection of a sharp pain in her shoulder, a sickly sweet smell, and a sense of sudden weakness. . . . How long had elapsed since then?

Her position was desperate. The flower-covered balcony overlooked a beautiful garden. The prospect was terminated by a high white wall, like the wall of an ancient fortress. Something told her that the ground fell away beyond that wall, and that further beyond yet was the sea. Where was she? And where was Dawson Haig? Had they . . . ?

The door opened, and a stout and kindly looking French maid came in, locking the door behind her. Eileen was breathing very rapidly.

"Mam'selle is frightened," said the woman. "No no—" meeting that fixed, angry stare—"it is no good, cherie. I am Celeste," she went on, opening the wardrobe and taking out Eileen's suit in the most natural manner in the world. "You have been sick—I know that sickness—I have had it."

Celeste swiftly glanced up, high in one wall to a little wooden trap. It was closed. "Cherie," she said, "trust me, I am your friend. You understand. Perhaps I can help. Don't answer."

She bustled busily into the bathroom. "Come, mam'selle," she called. "You will be yourself again after your bath."

Eileen walked across to the bathroom. The Frenchwoman closed the door as she entered. "I know how it has happened to you, cherie," came her voluble whisper. "I happened so to me, also. Where were you when last you remember?"

"In Port Said," said Eileen miserably.

"Ah!" The Frenchwoman nodded comprehendingly. "I was at Cairo when he saw me. But that was many years ago!"

"But tell me, please, where am I now?"

"In Yemen, cherie." A large strong arm was slipped maternally about the girl's shoulders. She was pressed to an ample breast. "You have courage, great courage—I see it in your face. And now is the time for courage—courage not to fight."

Eileen began to feel that she had known this singular woman all her life. "What do you mean, Celeste?" she asked. "What is this place—where am I?"

"You are in Arabia, poor baby. Down in there—" she pointed vaguely—"is a little town that no one ever heard of. Beyond is the Red sea. Here behind us is desert—desert—desert—and then . . . Mecca."

"But this house? Who does it belong to?"

"It is the house of Aswami Pasha."

"But I don't know Aswami Pasha!"

"Once, it is nearly ten years ago, I did not know him, cherie. He is rich—very rich! But come, cherie. Slip your robe off. This is the time for cunning. But be thankful that I am with you."

Eileen threw one white arm around the Frenchwoman's neck. "This strange character, with her bright, kindly eyes, was a rock of refuge."

"Oh, Celeste, you are not going to leave me?"

"I shall be in the bedroom, and when you are dressed I will bring your luncheon."

Celeste hugged the frightened captive tightly, and went on closing the bathroom door.

Shuddering, Eileen slipped the strange robe which had enveloped her when she had awakened, and stepped into the bath.

Behind what looked like the grating of a ventilator, high in the bathroom wall, two points of light glittered and disappeared. Yu-an Hee See walked slowly out of the cupboard-room above onto the mahogany floor of the salon which adjoined it. He nodded slowly, as one who has clinched a satisfactory bargain. And, crossing to the door, he blessed softly. . . .

CHAPTER IX

Dawson Haig spent part of that night in the large caravanserai of Bir Ambar, on the old pilgrim route to Mecca. He had traveled from Kenah in a big French car with an Egyptian driver, over roads which were originally intended for camels. The tiny oasis was nearly deserted and he dozed a few uneasy hours upon a hard bed. At daybreak they took the road again, reaching Koseir about noon.

He was taken straight to the house of Doctor Hess, a small villa looking out upon a saltless sea. The doctor's name appeared upon a neat brass plate beside his door, so that he was presumably in practice.

Doctor Hess rose from behind a table at which he was seated, smiled significantly, and held out his hand. Dawson Haig caught his breath. The stout and prosperous looking Hess was a Turk! Nodding, Haig handed him the letter received from Hassan es-Suk. The doctor glanced at it, then from a drawer took out a third envelope identical in appearance, and passed it to Haig. He now spoke for the first time.

"You are the last to arrive, Joseph." He spoke in French! A wave of relief swept over the listener. "So I understand, Doctor. But" (a sudden idea entered his brain) "I think Len Chow and Franz cannot be far ahead."

Doctor Hess smiled even more broadly. "Nearly eight hours," he replied. "Convey to the Chief my best wishes and assurances. If you will follow my servant, he will direct you to the quay."

The "letter of travel," addressed as before "To Joseph," read "You will proceed by motorboat and report, Chief."

Haig's respect for the efficiency of the Egyptian police service was increased as he followed the servant down rough stone steps to a little quay against which a battered but seaworthy motorboat was tied up; a thirty-eight foot cruiser which he guessed concealed powerful engines under that dilapidated hull. . . .

An aged mendicant was seated at the foot of these steps. He grasped Haig's hand. "Bakshish! bakshish!" he whined.

Haig paused—looked down. Instantaneously the nut-cracker features were relaxed. He saw a young face under the old mask. "Destination unknown!" he whispered.

"Don't say yet, inspector. . . . It's impossible to cover you!" came a swift reply. Then, loudly, "Bakshish! bakshish!"

Haig dropped a coin, and the clutching fingers were relaxed. "Impossible to cover me," he thought. Routine did not demand that he should sail for this unknown place and "report!" Common sense was against it.

Further co-operation with his Egyptian colleagues became impossible. But beckoning out of the haze over the sea was a dream-image of Eileen. Some stupendous plot was working slowly to its culmination. Even now he had not grasped it. But his suspicions were horrible. His usefulness might be ended if he should be cut off from his allies. But . . . Eileen!

He must find her at all costs—be near to her. Some means of communication he would surely find.
